The audience was so moved by the playing of Mr. Serkin and the orchestra that it simply couldn't mind its manners. Spontaneous applause in great volume followed each movement of the Concerto.

Even the weather couldn't dampen the enthusiasm generated by the music. It rained and poured during most of the program, but hundreds of men, women and children stood outside under trees, umbrellas or just bare-headed as they listened. The concert was played in a huge building of open structural steel and unfinished wood, open on three sides, and called the "Shed." Some six or seven thousand persons filled it to capacity on Sunday. Its accoustics are truly magnificent, and, as a matter of fact, the music was full and perfectly clear for a distance of some two hundred feet beyond the Shed out on the beautiful lawns of Tanglewood.

o o o

THE BERKSHIRE Music Festival at Tanglewood has gained a well-deserved reputation among music lovers in all walks of life. Its permanent orchestra, the Boston Symphony, is unsurpassed in this day. Its permanent conductor, Charles Munch, is in the full glory of his musical maturity and physical vigor. Its programs present the music of the masters in all the beauty of sound imagined by those composers . . . and more.

This is the final week of the six-week season, ending on Sunday, Aug. 11th by the playing of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. On Thursday, Aug. 8th, the Boston "Pops" Orchestra will present "Tanglewood on Parade" with music of a lighter nature conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

FOUR NORTHAMPTON GAZETTE

Final Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Beethoven Works Under Munch, Schuricht

Johannes Brahms was the honored composer for the fifth weekend of the Boston Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, with Egk, Barber and Piston respectively sharing the three programs.

Friday evening introduced the distinguished guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, who visited this country last year with the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, and earlier this summer conducted concerts at Ravinia Park in Chicago. Slight, almost frail in stature, his forceful and forthcoming control of the Boston Symphony revealed an experienced and dedicated artist. The Tragic Overture was all that one could desire; and although the First Symphony of Brahms was given an unorthodox treatment, especially tempi-wise, the work was effectively gratifying. Mr. Schuricht's paucity of directive movement was no deterrent to the orchestra's understanding of his interpretation, the results clearly evident in their keenly responsive performance. The contemporary contribution was Werner Egk's "Georgica," based on folk-tunes of his native Bavaria. These rollicking, lilting melodies and gentle waltz were agreeably intriguing clothed in modern and sometimes quite dissonant harmonies. This was the only time Mr. Egk used a score. The audience was completely unrestrained in their approval of this modest conductor, who seemed quite touched by their wild enthusiasm.

Saturday evening, though a fearsome one weather-wise, saw Dr. Munch back on the podium opening the concert with Brahms' first mature orchestral composition, "Variations on a Theme By Haydn"; followed by Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" originally a ballet, and first danced by Martha Graham. As if part of the score, a mellifluous roll of thunder reverberated through the Shed with the darkly tragic opening, contributing its own special coloring to an intensely interesting score. Isaac Stern made his second appearance of the season in a superb performance of the violin Concerto in D major, a powerful yet sensitive violinist, at one with his instrument, neither thunder, lightning nor rain deterred his concentration, nor dimmed the lustre of his tone, his virtuosity superceding that of the elements, which served only to intensify the pleasure of the whole program.

Sunday afternoon brought the total number of attendance over the 25,000 mark, and this despite continued rainy weather. Dr. Munch again conducted the renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Academic Festival Overture, as fresh and spontaneous as a first hearing. Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony, a tidy rotund composition clearly worked out, the various instruments used precisely and colorfully, but nonetheless with a feeling of transparent suspension, was the contemporary contrast to the finished profundity of Brahms.

Rudolf Serkin was the soloist in the final number, the second piano concerto in B flat. Actually a symphony for piano and orchestra, the piano is much of the time subservient to the orchestra. Mr. Serkin's vigorous style and caressing tone was an excellent match for the orchestra, which Dr. Munch controlled with marvellous sensitivity, the piano clearly heard when indicated, though at times the whole seemed muffled, due no doubt to atmospheric conditions. The two last movements were strikingly beautiful; the cello solo in the Andante by Samuel Mayes indescribably touching, its recurrence against constantly changing trills and soft arpeggios by the piano left one breathless. The audience seemed desirous of prolonging their applause indefinitely, recalling Mr. Serkin and Dr. Munch, both of whom shared the stage with Mr. Mayes, innumerable times.

The final concerts of the Festival will include the Zimbler Sinfonietta on Wednesday evening in works by Boyce, Tansman, Boccherini, Mozart and Shostakovitch; the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday with Charles Munch and Aaron Copland conducting the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Feidler, Ogden Nash narrating his verses for Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals", simultaneous concerts by student orchestra, opera students, composers, and the Tanglewood Study Group, starting at 4 for reserved ticket holders and at 5:30 for all admissions. Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor, Carl Schuricht.

— M. deB. B.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

AUG 11 1957

Boston Symphony Still Top Tanglewood Magnet

New York Critic Attends Concert of Brahms and Egk Conducted by Carl Schuricht

By IRVING KOLODIN
Music Editor, The Saturday Review

Lenox, Aug. 10—It's a sound New England maxim that if you build a better mousetrap, the world will beat a pathway to your door. The Berkshires and the Tanglewood Music Festival may, together, hardly fill the characteristics of a mousetrap, but they certainly are "better." East and west, and all around, new paths have been created to bring the city-weary music lover to the freshening country, for the good both of body and soul.

For one who came to this idyllic corner of the United States for the first time 20 years ago (and saw Serge Koussevitzky subject the Music Shed to its first test by clicking together two pieces of wood) it is somewhat startling to see a fourlane superhighway where formerly there had been virgin forest.

Travel Time Saved

But, when a happy Bostonian tells you the Massachusetts Turnpike has reduced his travel time from there to here by half (two hours instead of four), the benefits are undeniable. On the New York side of the map the magnificent thruway and extentions of other parkways have made equally if not so startling changes.

This is, perhaps, the soundest endorsement possible of the wisdom of the founding fathers (and a mother or two) in locating the summer activity of the Boston Symphony in what seemed, in 1937, off the beaten path. There was, to be sure, a thriving summer community in the Lenox-Stockbridge-Great Barrington area, but hardly sufficient to support a major festival by itself.

Now, however, attendances of 6,000 are considered "light," around 10,000 "gratifying" and as many as 16,000 can be accommodated. Practically all come by private cars, and the parking problem has now been reduced merely to parking.

Setting Admired

The remarkable fact, for those who remember Tanglewood in its canvas-tent phase, is the way the man-made structures have taken root and become a part of the landscape. The big wedge-shaped shed has weathered in to have the look of a landmark (if they had it in Sweden it would be a national pride), the grounds have been cultivated with such loving care that even in a dry summer they are fresh and restful.

Where cultivation leaves off and nature takes over is almost impossible to say, so skillfully has it all been done. Vistas have been opened up to give the pre-concert picnickers long loving looks across Stockbridge Bowl (a sparkling lake) to the Berkshires beyond.

For all this, of course, the well-tuned magnet is the peerless Boston Symphony Orchestra, now into its 76th year and still to be ranked with the best. On a recent occasion it welcomed to its podium Danzig-born Carl Schuricht, who was celebrating his first birthday when the orchestra was born.

He celebrated his 76th in July of 1956 with no notion that he would be an American celebrity after 55 years of professional musical life, even less that he would be occupying the late Koussevitzky's podium in an American summer festival. Last winter's tour of the Vienna Philharmonic, for which he was co-conductor, made the unforeseeable a reality, and we are all the better for it.

Schuricht's Debut

Schuricht's first Tanglewood concert was hardly a model of program making, for it surrounded a rather trivial "novelty" by the contemporary Bavarian, Werner Egk with the "Tragic" overture and first symphony of Brahms. The first promise had been for Egk's "Orchestersonate" of 1948, but this was revised to present his "Peasant Dances" of 1934. Thus instead of new light on what Egk is, we had some illuminating glimpses of the man he was.

Doubtless the piece was written for a purpose, but its bumptious tunes (the sort you might hear in a Munich beer garden) and their parodistic, off-key elaboration created an atmosphere in which, one felt, "Der Fuehrer" himself might make an entrance at any moment.

Schuricht's address to this matter, as well as to the more consequential Brahms, was all conciseness and vigor, honestly musical, emotionally direct. The adjustment of the basically French orchestra to the essentially Germanic conductor was not complete, but the mutual respect was evident. A half-moon in the sky, crickets instead of airplanes, and nature's own air-conditioning made one almost regretful when the great symphony pounded to its conclusion, and the homeward trek began.

(Copyright 1957 by the Saturday Review)

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

AUG 10 1957

TOLEDO, OHIO
BLADE
Circ. D. 193,863 - S. 178,068

AUG 11 1957

JAMAICA, N. Y.
Long Island Press
Circ. D. 258,815 - S. 312,250

AUG 11 1957

DAILY PRESS, Newport News - Warwick - Hampton, Sunday, August 11, 1957

CARL SCHURICHT

BLANK PAGE

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 29 1957

Opera Scenes At Tanglewood

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center presents a program of opera scenes tonight at 8:30 in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood. The program will be introduced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the department. The opera scenes are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New plastic and fiberglas materials which are being used for experimental purposes in scene designing by the opera department are the basis for stage settings for Act IV of Puccini's "La Boheme." Two scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and a scene from Mozart's "Idomeneo" will also demonstrate the new materials. These settings have been designed by Claude Marks and Tom DeGaetani.

Other scenes which will be presented are from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute," Bizet's "Carmen" and Verdi's "Rigoletto." Student directors who have staged these scenes are Clyde Grigsby of Asheville, North Carolina; Baird Hastings of Boston, Mass.; Robert Evans of New York City; Karlos Moser of New York City; Maude Curry of New York City; James Billings of Springfield, Missouri; Charles Kondek of Webster, Mass.; and Hope Christopoulos of Norfolk, Virginia.

Assisting Boris Goldovsky on the opera department faculty are Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep, staging division; Felix Wolfes, repertoire; Claude Marks and Elemer Nagy, scenic division; Leo Van Witsen, costume direction; Tom DeGaetani, lighting and technical direction. conference were impressed by the

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 29 1957

Music Center's Opera Students Program Tonight

The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center will present a program of opera scenes tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox. The program will be introduced by Boris Goldovsky, head of the department. The performance will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

New plastic and fiberglas materials which are being used for experimental purposes in scene designing by the opera department are the basis for stage settings for Act IV of Puccini's "La Boheme." Two scenes from Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" and a scene from Mozart's "Idomeneo" will also demonstrate the new materials. These settings have been designed by Claude Marks and Tom DeGaetani.

Other scenes which will be presented are from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute," Bizet's "Carmen" and Verdi's "Rigoletto." Student directors have staged the scenes.

Music

Opera at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE OPERA Department of the Berkshire Music Center presented its second Monday evening program of opera scenes in the theater-concert hall last night.

Boris Goldovsky, head of this project, designated as Department IV, not only was responsible for overseeing the entire evening, but was directly charged with staging several of the eight scenes presented, playing the piano for some, and giving his inimitable prologues explaining the problems in general and the novel and ingenious way they are attempting to solve them.

* * *

THESE ARE workshop evenings and the department does not pretend that they are more, but they afford extremely pleasant entertainment for the audience that fills the theater every time the opportunity presents itself. Some of the scenes are performed without scenery and in ordinary dress. For others there were costumes, and scenery of the original materials, in this application, that Goldovsky is using experimentally.

In two excerpts from "Pelleas and Melisande" of Debussy, the fountain and the tower scenes, Fiberglas was employed for the scenery material, set in frames of aluminum. The possibilities in shape and color in this substance as well as in lighting are endless, and the few examples exhibited last night were not only beautiful but also served as samples of how the idea may be developed and expanded at will.

* * *

ALTHOUGH the emphasis in the Opera Department this year is on staging and direction, the public performances, as always, are beyond the student grade in most details. The singers are very able. It may be as difficult to sing "Figaro" in a T-shirt as it is to expect the audience to use their imagination to supply what has not been provided. There were chairs in somes scenes and a panel to, at least, indicate what and where was indoors and where outdoors, but where the illusion was furnished, the audience derived greater pleasure.

The final act of "La Boheme" of Puccini was presented with costumes and conventional but highly effective scenery, and the singing was on a superior level. The pathos of Mimi's death was as well portrayed dramatically as vocally and, regarded as a manifestation of the school's methods, it was highly commendable.

* * *

FROM "PELLEAS" the beginning of the second act by the fountain and the beginning of the third where Melisande combs her hair while standing in the tower window, the fanciful impressionism of the music and the book were enhanced by the artistic use of the new attempt to overcome the bulky and ponderous materials available heretofore for dramatic purposes. The successful realization of the idea employs lighting that has not been possible with materials that were not translucent nor of interest in their own right. It would appear at this point that these trials may provide still another basis for credit in dramatic pioneering for the Berkshire Music Center.

News (e)
INGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,585
UL 29 1957

udent Group Will Be Heard In New Work

ch Will Conduct Orchestra on Thursday Evening

e fifth weekly concert by student orchestra for th nds of the Berkshire Musi ter will be given in the Musi d at Tanglewood, Lenox, o rsday, at 8:30. The program will open wit rles Munch conducting th dent orchestra in Cesa nck's Symphony in D mino s performance is the clima the orchestral students' wor the Berkshire Music Center. t will be followed by "Th nd Universal Circus", a ne k by the American compose ry Brant and his wife, wh te the lyrics. It utilizes th stival Chorus, soloists, sever ral conductors, a band an cussion groups from the st nt orchestra, sound effect sks, movies, and other visu ects on the stage. The Grand Universal Circus an antiphonal work in whi e performers are placed ferent parts of the shed, s nding the audience with rent musical, verbal and v pressions. It presents ientific, mythological etical conceptions of the n of man, put within mework of a circus and any whimsical scenes ntemporary life. There ctions describing the or conceived by various d modern sources, oiled world of Paradise, ssatisfaction with the ate and his fall from G In 1956 Mr. and Mr on the "prix Italia" nal competition, ork "December", which several orchestras in t parts of a theater. T the first Americans to award. Mr. Brant work time as an arranger y Goodman, has tau Juilliard School of is now teaching at B College, Bennington

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
UL 31 1957

udent Orchest

e fifth weekly concert b ent orchestra for the F he Berkshire Music Cent given in the Music Sh lewood, Lenox, tomorr p.m. he program will open rles Munch conducting dent orchestra in Cesa nck's Symphony in D performance is the cli orchestral students' wor will be followed by nd Universal Circus," by the American co ry Brant and his wif e the lyrics. It utilizes t Chorus, soloists, severa nductors, a band and groups from the stud stra, sound effects, ves and other visual e

BOSTON HERALD: SATURDAY, AUG. 3, 1957

Chamber Music This Afternoon

Eleven Fromm Fellowship Players will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood today at 2:30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall. The young professional musicians, who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, will present a program of works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Milhaud and Lester Trimble. The concert is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 2 1957

Music Center Plans Lecture, Three Concerts

The Berkshire Music Center will present a lecture and three concerts this weekend at Tanglewood, Lenox. The programs are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

This afternoon, composer Milton Babbitt will lecture on "Innovators: European Style," at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. His talk, part of the Seminar in Contemporary Music, will be illustrated by Fromm Fellowship Players.

The Fromm Fellowship Players, professional musicians who are spending their summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program features works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Copland, Milhaud and Lester Trimble.

The weekly chamber music concert, presented by student instrumentalists of the summer music school, will take place Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program features works by Brahms, Nielson and Franck.

On Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the Composers' Forum will offer works by student composers Benjamin S. Cutler of New Canaan, Conn.; Marjorie Greif of New York City; Malcolm C. Peyton of Princeton, N. J.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill., and James T. Anderson of Buffalo, N. Y. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship Players.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550
AUG 1 1957

Fromm Fellows Play In Tanglewood Series

Eleven Fromm Fellowship Players will be present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood Saturday afternoon, Aug. 3, at 2:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall. The young professional musicians, who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, will present a program of works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Copland, Milhaud and Lester Trimble. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The instrumentalists who will take part in this concert also perform works by Tanglewood composition students at the weekly Composers' Forums, and work with students and teachers in composition classes at the Berkshire Music Center.

The program for the concert is as follows: Mel Powell, Quintet; Revueltas, Music de Feria; Weburn, Concerto for Nine Instruments; Copland, "As It Fell Upon a Day," for soprano and clarinet; Milhaud, Cheminee du Roi Rene; Lester Trimble, Concerto.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 30 1957

Fromm Fellowship Players to Give Concert Saturday

Eleven Fromm Fellowship players will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the Chamber Music Hall. The young professional musicians, who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, of Chicago, will present a program of works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Copland, Milhaud and Lester Trimble. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The instrumentalists who will take part in this concert also perform works by Tanglewood composition students at the weekly Composers' Forums, and work with students and teachers in composition classes at the Berkshire Music Center. Four of the musicians come from California, two from Utah, two from Illinois, two from Washington, one from Pennsylvania and one from Connecticut.

Tanglewood Choir Sets Concert Tonight

The Tanglewood Choir, students in the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, will present a concert of choral music in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood tonight at 8:30.

The choir will be conducted by Lorna Cooke de Varon, Alfred Nash Patterson and student choral conductors.

The program features works by Bach, Handel and Verdi. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

e Eagle, Tuesday, July 30, 1957

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 29 1957

Student Group Will Be Heard In New Work

Munch Will Conduct Orchestra on Thursday Evening

The fifth weekly concert by the student orchestra for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday at 8:30 p. m.

The program will open with Charles Munch conducting the student orchestra in Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor. This performance is the climax of the orchestral students' work at the Berkshire Music Center.

It will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus", a new work by the American composer Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. It utilizes the Festival Chorus, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups from the student orchestra, sound effects, masks, movies, and other visual effects on the stage.

"The Grand Universal Circus" is an antiphonal work in which the performers are placed in different parts of the Shed, surrounding the audience with different musical, verbal and visual impressions. It presents the scientific, mythological and poetical conceptions of the creation of man, put within the framework of a circus and using many whimsical scenes from contemporary life. There will be scenes describing the creation as received by various ancient and modern sources, the unexplored world of Paradise, man's dissatisfaction with the perfect state and his fall from Grace.

In 1956 Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "prix Italia" in international competition for their work "December", which also used several orchestras in different parts of a theater. They were the first Americans to win this award. Mr. Brant worked at one time as an arranger for Benny Goodman, has taught at the Juilliard School of Music, and is now teaching at Bennington College, Bennington Vt.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 2 - 1957

Music Center Plans Lecture, Three Concert

The Berkshire Music Ce... present a lecture and th... certs this weekend at Tan... Lenox. The programs ar... Friends of the Berkshir... Center.

This afternoon, compos... on Babbitt will lecture ... novators: European Style,... the Chamber Music ... talk, part of the Seminar ... temporary Music, will ... rated by Fromm F... layers.

The Fromm Fellowship ... professional musicians ... pending their summer ... Berkshire Music Center u... auspices of the Fromm ... foundation, will present ... two concerts of modern cham... music Saturday afternoon at ... in the Chamber Music Hall. ... program features works by ... el Powell, Revueltas, Webern, ... opland, Milhaud and Lester ...

The ... chamber music con... ... by student instru... ... of the summer music ... will take place Sunday ... at 10 in the Chamber ... Hall. The program features ... Brahms, Nielsen and ...

... at ... in ... Hall, the Com... ... works by ... Benjamin S. ... Canaan, Conn.; ... New York City; ... of Princeton, ... Lukewitz of Chi... ... T. Anderson ... Their works will ... by Fromm Fellow...

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 27 1957

Student Orchestra 5th Weekly Concert In Shed Thursday

The fifth weekly concert by the Student Orchestra for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Thursday night at 8:30 p.m.

The program will open with Charles Munch conducting the student orchestra in Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor. This performance is the climax of the orchestral students' work at the Berkshire Music Center.

It will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by the American composer Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. It utilizes the Festival Chorus, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups from the student orchestra, sound effects, masks, movies and other visual effects on the stage.

In 1956 Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "prix Italia" in international competition for their work "December," which also used several orchestras in different parts of a theater. They were the first Americans to win this award. Mr. Brant worked at one time as an arranger for Benny Goodman, has taught at the Juilliard School of Music, and is now teaching at Bennington College in Bennington, Vt.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

AUG 1 - 1957

Tanglewood Bill Change Announced

A change in the program of the Student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight is announced today.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the students in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, replacing the 'Grand Universal Circus" by Henry Brant previously scheduled. In the second half of the program, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the student orchestra in the Symphony in D minor by Cesar Franck.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411

JUL 31 1957

Student Orchestra

The fifth weekly concert by the student orchestra for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

The program will open with Charles Munch conducting Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor. This performance is the climax of the orchestral students' work.

It will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by the American composer Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. It utilizes the Festival Chorus, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups from the student orchestra, sound effects, masks, movies and other visual effects.

Sunday Herald Tribune
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Independent Republican
Circ. 535,009

JUL 28 1957

Tanglewood Novelty

A modern work will provide filling for an otherwise Brahmsian sandwich in each of the Boston Symphony's Tanglewood programs this coming week end. Carl Schuricht's choice for his Berkshire debut Friday night is a German work, Werner Egk's "Georgica," subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra" and based on Bavarian folk themes. It had its American premiere in the first of four Philharmonic-Symphony performances at Carnegie Hall under Werner Janssen on Nov. 14, 1934, but has not been heard in New York since.

Charles Munch has chosen American works of a later vintage for Saturday and next Sunday. Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" and Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony had their world premieres in New York in 1956. The former was introduced by the Philharmonic Feb. 2, and the latter by the Juilliard Orchestra Feb. 24.

* * *

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 31 1957

'Universal Circus' In Lenox Tomorrow

The fifth weekly concert by the Student Orchestra for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

The program will open with Charles Munch conducting the student orchestra in Cesar Franck's Symphony in D minor.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 1 1957

Change in Program At Tanglewood Tonight

Lenox, July 31—A change in the program of the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood on Thursday evening is announced today.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the students in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, replacing the "Grand Universal Circus" by Henry Brant previously scheduled. In the second half of the program, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the student orchestra in the symphony in D minor by Cesar Franck.

Unique Placing Of Performers At 'Tanglewood'

A unique antiphonal performance is scheduled for Thursday night at the Music Shed, in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. when the fifth weekly concert of the Berkshire Music Center Student Orchestra will perform. Cesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor, Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will climax the Orchestral Students' work in the 1957 season in the Music Center.

The Symphony will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by the American composer, Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. This utilizes the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, soloists, several choral conductors, [illegible] and percussion groups [illegible] student orchestra.

Sound effects, masks, movies and visual effects on the stage are planned for this antiphonal work, the performers placed in various parts of the Shed, surrounding the audience with various musical, verbal and visual impressions. The work presents the scientific, mythological and poetical conceptions of the creation of man, put within the framework of a circus and using many whimsical scenes from contemporary life.

Last year Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "Prix Italia" in international competition for their work "December" which also used several orchestras in different parts of the theater. They were the first Americans to win this award. Mr. Brant, at one time was arranger for Benny Goodman. Now teaching in Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., Mr. Brant also has taught in Juilliard School of Music, New York City.

* * *

SPRINGFIELD UNION
AUGUST 1, 1957

Change in Program At Tanglewood Tonight

Lenox, July 31—A change in the program of the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood on Thursday evening is announced today.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the students in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, replacing the "Grand Universal Circus" by Henry Brant previously scheduled. In the second half of the program, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the student orchestra in the symphony in D minor by Cesar Franck.

14—The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 1, 1957

3 Concerts at Music Center

The Berkshire Music Center will present a lecture and three concerts this weekend at Tanglewood. The programs are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tomorrow afternoon composer Milton Babbitt will lecture on "Innovators: European Style," at 3:15 in the Chamber Music Hall. His talk, part of the seminar in contemporary music, will be illustrated by Fromm Fellowship players. The Fromm Fellowship players, professional musicians who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music Saturday afternoon at 2:30 in the chamber music hall. The program features works by Mel Powell, Revueltas, Webern, Copland, Milhaud and Lester Trimble.

Student Group

The weekly chamber music concert, presented by student instrumentalists of the summer music school, will take place Sunday morning at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall. The program features works by Brahms, Nielsen and Franck.

On Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Chamber Music Hall, the Composers' Forum will offer works by student composers Benjamin S. Cutler of New Canaan, Conn.; Marjorie Greif of New York City; Malcolm C. Peyton of Princeton, N.J.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill.; James T. Anderson of Buffalo, N.Y. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship Players.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 1, 1957

Berkshire Music Center Will Give Lecture, Concerts

Lenox, July 31—The Berkshire Music Center will present a lecture and three concerts this week end at Tanglewood. The programs are open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

On Friday afternoon composer Milton Babbitt will lecture on "Innovators: European Style," at [illegible] in the Chamber Music Hall. His talk, part of the seminar in contemporary music, will be illustrated by Fromm Fellowship Players. The Fromm Fellowship Players, professional musicians who are spending their summer at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, will present the first of two concerts of modern chamber music on Saturday afternoon, at 2.30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall.

The weekly chamber music concert, presented by student instrumentalists of the summer music school, will take place on Sunday morning, at 10.00 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall.

On Sunday evening at 8.30 p. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, the Composers' Forum will offer works by student composers Benjamin S. Cutler of new Canaan, Conn., Marjorie Greif of New York City; Malcolm C. Peyton of Princeton, N. J. Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill.; James T. Anderson of Buffalo, N. Y.

C207

The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, July 11, 1957

Tanglewood Seeks Hurdy-Gurdies For Brant Piece

TANGLEWOOD — The musical administration of the Berkshire Music Center today announced the performance later in the Tanglewood season of a work by the New York composer, Henry Brant. Entitled "Universal Circus," the work is scored for a number of unusual instruments and since there are no hurdy-gurdies at the school, it is hoped that two owners of this extraordinary instrument can be found somewhere in the Berkshire area to loan them for the performance of the work. Tanglewood will furnish the players.

Inquiries should be addressed to Victor Alpert, librarian of the Berkshire Music Center, at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 13, 1957

Tanglewood Finds Its Hurdy-Gurdies At Jenifer House

TANGLEWOOD — Jenifer House, Great Barrington Gift Shop, yesterday bailed out Tanglewood.

Responding to an urgent plea of Victor Alpert, Berkshire Music Center librarian, Jenifer House offered its full collection of hurdy-gurdies to the cause of art.

Mr. Alpert had asked for two of the unusual instruments for a Tanglewood performance of Henry Brant's "Universal Circus" later this season.

Eagle, Wednesday, July 31, 1957

'Circus' Is Out, Tchaikovsky In At Tanglewood

"The Grand Universal Circus," a composition by Henry Brant, has been canceled in the program to be given tomorrow night at 8:30 by the student orchestra in the Shed at Tanglewood. In its place will be Tchaikovsky's fourth Symphony conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho.

The program will open with a Cesar Franck symphony conducted by Charles Munch.

Song Recital At Tanglewood Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts in the theatre-concert hall will be presented tonight at 8:30. Gerard Souzay, the noted French baritone, will give a song recital, assisted by Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. His program will include works by early French composers as well as groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel.

Mr. Souzay opens his program with a group of early French songs by Machault, Lully and Rameau. These are followed by a Schubert group including "Der Schiffer," "Romanze from Rosamunde," "Der Musensohn" and "Der Doppelganger." Songs by Franz Liszt will include "Uber allen Gipfeln ist Ruh," "Freudvoll und Leidvoll," "Es rauschen die Winde." The first half of the program will conclude with three songs of Brahms: "Sonntag," "Dein Blaues Auge," "O liebliche Wange."

Following the intermission Mr. Souzay will perform two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in honor of the 20th anniversary of the composer's death. These are "Cinq melodies populaire grecques" and "Trois melodies Hebraiques."

Made Debut in 1943

Mr. Souzay, since his debut in France in 1943, has been heard in many European cities in recitals, opera and with orchestras. He first appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952, both in Boston and New York, and has been soloist with the orchestra on frequent occasions since then. Mr. Souzay made his first Tanglewood appearance last Saturday in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" under the direction of Charles Munch.

Proceeds from the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are donated to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center. Both Mr. Souzay and Mr. Berkowitz have offered to contribute their fees for the concert to this fund.

Tickets for this next concert and for the final concert in the series by the Zimbler Sinfonietta next Wednesday are available at the Box Office, Tanglewood.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 1 - 1957

Present Fifth Weekly Chamber Music Concert

The fifth in the weekly series of chamber music concerts was presented in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in Lenox last night. The artists were baritone Gerard Souzay and pianist Ralph Berkowitz.

The program included songs by old French masters such as the 14th century Machault, Lully and Rameau, followed by a group of works by Schubert, Liszt and Brahms. The final portion of the program was given over to the "Cinq Melodies Populaires Grecques" and "Trois Melodies Hebraique" by Ravel.

The Berkshire Music Festival continues tomorrow night with the first of three weekend shed concerts by the full Boston Symphony. The programs will be devoted mainly to music by Brahms.

The Friday night concert, which will be directed by Carl Schuricht, will include Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and "Symphony No. 1." Also to be heard is the "Sonata for Orchestra," by Egk.

Charles Munch will conduct the concerts Saturday night and Sunday.

Music Review Berkshire Eagle, Aug. 1

Lieder at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

BARITONE George Souzay devoted an evening to lieder at the concert in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood last night. He was accompanied on the piano by Ralph Berkowitz.

Souzay had been heard once previously at Tanglewood when he sang the role of Joseph in "L'Enfance du Christ" of Berlioz last Saturday, but that scarcely allowed his audience to discern the vast capabilities of the vocalist as an artist.

* * *

HE STARTED his program with a remarkable, simple 14th century ballad, unaccompanied, "Douce dame jolie," by — De Machault and ended with the Ravel "Kaddisch" in which the piano supplies but occasional soft supports at fairly long intervals. The voice is amply powerful without being robust, but it is capable of stern, commanding ejaculations. At the other pole Souzay keeps the round resonance of his vibrant voice constantly flowing at the most restrained and tender moments. There are no passages without emotional tension except in the rare episodes of his program in which a histrionic factor makes such a spoken phrase valid.

* * *

SOUZAY made each of the twenty-odd songs on his list such a complete picture, to which Berkowitz furnished the beautifully complementary frame, that this reviewer regretted that he had to listen beyond the pleasure of the moment and apply a quasi-analytical ear. The early French group, Lully and Rameau, alternated from gay to sombre, as did the entire program.

Schubert was represented by five songs in which the melodic wealth and the pianistic background found both Souzay and Berkowitz, respectively, extremely happily placed. "Der Doppelganger," nearly the last of Schubert's output, was deeply affecting. Souzay's breath control permitted him to draw long lugubrious lines in which he was able to shape every contour with conspicuous good taste and inflect every detail with his eminent artistic insight.

A group of Liszt included an impressively sung "Uber allen

George Souzay

Gipfeln ist Ruh," and the Brahms group continued the completely gratifying experience.

* * *

AFTER intermission, Souzay devoted his program solely to Ravel. Accidental circumstances turned the late Frenchman's attention to harmonization of folk songs. He was once requested to write accompaniments for Greek folk songs selected to illustrate a lecture. This resulted in the "Cinq melodies populaires grecques" with which Souzay began. These date from 1905, when the composer was 30, and were 20 years before the Madagascar songs which he later wrote on commission of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge and which were heard on last week's Fromm program. The Greek songs are sung with only a pianist's page-turning interval, and are in a diaphanous, distant mood, so opposed to the intimacy of the preceding German lieder.

* * *

FOR THE FINAL group Souzay extracted the "Chanson hebraique" from the 1910 "Chants populaires" and added them to the "Deux melodies hebraiques" for a well-contrasted exposition of traditional Hebrew song. Although Ravel wrote several works on Jewish subjects, the hypothesis that the name can be traced back to Jewish origins is unfounded; yet he afforded Souzay authentic vocal material which he penetrated with moving and deeply-sensed emotion. Ravel gives a singer a nearly insurmountable task in his tone relations. "L'Enigme eternelle" is probably the most formidable in this respect. The concluding "Kaddisch," the prayer for the dead, departs from the tragic wail in Ravel's personal manner and concluded, except for a few encores, an evening of memorably artistic singing.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
AUG 1 1957

Slow Progress For New Music

When they play modern music at Tanglewood the crowds in the big music shed and on the lawn split sharply into those who like it and those who don't, with those who can't take it in the majority. Some of the smaller concerts in the Berkshire Festival, dawing more heavily on those who follow musical developments closely, offer modern music to a more sympathetic audience.

On the whole, the work of new composers has a hard time getting itself heard. What passes for modern at Tanglewood is often the work of older men. The young men can reach only the students and musicians; conductors who play for large popular audiences, don't dare take a chance with them.

Nevertheless in a country where orchestras are on the increase and more and more people are listening to music, either live or on hi-fi, it is unnecessary and unforunate that young composers like some of the young people now studying at Tanglewood can not get a hearing. Concert programs keep repeating the old favorites and for some season concert audiences never indicate that they would like something fresh.

Howard Taubman of the New York Times reports that in the past five years young American composers have had better luck, although they are still working in an uncomfortable silence. Symphony orchestras are playing more American compositions, but they are apt to be trifles of the pop variety. The big orchestras don't give the serious young men much opportunity, although they may perform similar compositions from overseas.

Is the stuff these young men and women, and there are a lot of them, trying their hand at composition these days, any good and worth hearing? Well, the only way to find out is to get someone to play it so a lot of people can hear it.

Gerard Souzay Renders Concert At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox-Tanglewood, July 31 — Gerard Souzay is a handsome young Frenchman with a nice baritone voice which he handles expertly. He sang tonight in the Chamber Music series before a large and justly enthusiastic audience. Songs by old French masters such as the 14th century Machault, Lully and Rameau, followed by a group of songs by Schubert, Liszt and Brahms. The final portion of the program was given over to the "Cinq Melodies Populaires Grecques" and "Trois Melodies Hebraique" by Ravel.

Mr. Souzay is at his best in songs of romance, or in the romantic vein. His vocal resources are limited, both as to coloration and volume. What Mr. Souzay does with this voice is to be marvelled at, for he makes it a vehicle for most expressive interpretation. He projects expertly, enunciates with wonderful clarity and phrases with the greatest musicality. In such songs as the 18th Century "Tambourin" and Rameau's "Hymn Au Soleil" he caused the music to come to life, the words to vibrate. Schubert's "Der Doppelganger," on the other hand, needed more vocal resources for complete realization. "Der Musensohn" was a sheer delight and so was Liszt's "Freudvoll Und Leidvoll." The songs of Brahms seemed tailor-made for the singer and one heard admirable performances of "Sonntag," "Dein Blause Auge" and "O Liebliche Wangen."

Mr. Souzay had the admirable assistance at the piano of Ralph Berkowitz, a sensitive and fine grained pianist. Back in his native language, Mr. Souzay sang with meticulous care and sensitive approach to Ravel's Greek melodies and Hebrew melodies. Once again, we missed the colorations inherent in these songs and necessary for their full revealment, but Mr. Berkowitz and Mr. Souzay provided interpretations which every singer, student or professional, should have heard. Indeed, Mr. Souzay's approach to his songs, his deportment and artistry are models, as nearly perfection as one may expect these days.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 31 1957

Fifth Chamber Music Concert At Tanglewood

The fifth in the series of Wednesday evening Chamber Music Concerts in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be presented tonight at 8:30. Gerard Souzay, French Baritone, will give a song recital assisted by Ralph Berkowitz at the piano. His program will include works by early French composers as well as groups by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and Ravel.

Mr. Souzay opens his program with a group of early French songs by Machault, Lully and Rameau. These are followed by a Schubert group including "Der Schiffer", Romanze from "Rosamonde", "Der Musensohn" and "Der Doppelganger". Songs by Franz Liszt will include "Uber allen Gipfeln ish Ruh", Freudvoll und Leidvoll", "Es rauschen die Winde". First half of the program will conclude with three songs of Brahms; "Sonntag", "Dein Blaues Auge", "O liebliche Wange. Following the intermission Mr. Souzay will perform two groups of songs by Maurice Ravel in honor of the twentieth anniversary of the composer's death. These are "Cinq melodies populaire grecques" and "Trois melodies Hebraiques".

Souzay, since his debut in France in 1943, has been heard in many European cities in recitals, opera and with orchestras. He first appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1952, both in Poston and New York, and has been a soloist with the orchestra on frequent occasions since then. He made his first Tanglewood appearance last Saturday in a performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" under the direction of Charles Munch.

Proceeds from the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts are donated to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund of the Berkshire Music Center, and both Mr. Souzay and Mr. Berkowitz have offered to contribue their fees for the concert to this fund.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 3 1957

More Than 19,000 Attend Two Tanglewood Concerts

Despite bad weather both Saturday night and yesterday afternoon the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival attracted more than 19,000 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox. The two concerts were devoted mainly to music by Brahms.

Largest of Season

The Saturday program was attended by 11,238 persons, the largest single audience of the festival so far. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Violin Concerto and "Variations on a Theme" by Haydn and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance." Isaac Stern was the violin soloist.

Mr. Munch also conducted the Sunday program, which included the Academic Festival Overture and Piano Concert No. 2 by Brahms and Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5 The piano soloist was Rudolph Serkin.

In Final Week

The festival now moves into its final week, with the usual Wednesday night chamber music program and the weekend series of shed concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. In addition there will be the annual Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday evening featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

For the weekend series, music by Beethoven will be featured. Mr. Munch will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon while Carl Schuricht will make his second guest appearance on Saturday.

Hotel & Rest. News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly
AUG 3 1957

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 3 - 1957

Brahms Weekend Opens With 6,195 at Tanglewood

The Brahms' weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival opened last night at Tanglewood with Carl Schuricht as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The program was attended by 6,195 persons.

"Tragic Overture"

The concert opened with Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and closed with his "Symphony No. 1." Also heard was the "Sonata for Orchestra" by German composer Werner Egk.

Mr. Schuricht, who will make a second appearance during the festival's final concert series next weekend, became known in this country the past season when he conducted the Vienna Symphony Orchestra in its tour.

This evening Charles Munch will conduct a program consisting of "Variations on a Theme by Haydn" and "Violin Concerto," both by Brahms, and "Media's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. Isaac Stern will be violin soloist.

Tomorrow's Program

The concert series will conclude tomorrow afternoon with Brahms' 'Academic Festival Overture" and "Piano Concerto No. 2" and Piston's "Symphony No. 5." Mr. Munch will again conduct and Rudolph Serkin wil be the piano soloist.

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 5, 1957–
C2097

25,592 at Weekend Concerts

Despite heavy downpours of rain Saturday night and yesterday afternoon, crowds totaling 25,592 attended the weekend concerts at Tanglewood.

Saturday night's attendance of 11,238 was the highest for a single concert this season. Featured soloist was Isaac Stern, violinist. Yesterday's soloist was Rudolf Serkin, pianist. At Friday night's concert, Carl Schuricht, the German conductor, made his Tanglewood debut. He will be back on the podium Saturday night to conduct the Boston Symphony.

The weekend attendance figures were: Friday, 6,195; Saturday, 11,238 and yesterday afternoon, 8,159.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 2, 1957–

Tourist Business Expected To Top Last Weekend

Tourist business in Berkshire County is expected to be better this weekend than last, a spokesman for the Berkshire Hills Conference said today.

Robert J. Pierce, a staff member, said "This will be a good weekend, better than last week."

Area reports last week reported that business was "rather slow." The one exception was the Curtis Hotel in Lenox, which reported a full house and a greater number of restaurant guests than any other weekend.

The information booth in Lee reported a weekend that was much slower than the previous weekend. Byrne Bauer, owner-manager of the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, reported a completely booked house for the next two weekends.

Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957–

Tanglewood Tale

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Isaac Stern is a virtuoso on the violin, but any pleasure one may derive from hearing him is quickly dispelled when one sits from 10:30 until midnight in a stationary car in the parking lot on the Stockbridge Bowl side of Tanglewood.

The situation might have been excusable. The storm on Saturday night began almost as soon as did the evening's concert. The powers-that-be at Tanglewood had ample time to summon extra parking officials and state police for a parking lot where they must know, from sad experience, that cars parked on the slope are unable to make the turn up and out on the wet grass. It would seem the situation could have been easily resolved . . .

Let those cars (over one-half) which were parked on the level at the foot of the hill make their unskidding exit. Then those that were trapped at the top could turn down the hill, circle, and come up the road. With more authorities this could have been accomplished quickly and politely. And incidentally, is anyone ruder than when he sits behind the wheel of a car?

I am sure that there are many others who said, as did I, upon returning home at 1 a.m. this morning: "Tanglewood? Never again."

(Miss) ANNE V. DORT.
Tyringham.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 3, 1957–

Tanglewood Tenor To Sing at First Church

Donald Meyers, tenor, will be the soloist at the First Church of Christ Congregational tomorrow. Mr. Meyers is at Tanglewood this summer as an operatic coach. He is from New York where he is assistant to the music director of the Hunter College Opera Workshop.

He studied voice, dramatics, and accompanying with Maude Curry. In addition to giving several solo vocal recitals in New York City, he has sung professionally with the Turnan Opera Players in Woodstock, N. Y. His solos tomorrow will be "Jesus Fount of Love," Durante, and "The Lord's Prayer," Malotte.

1957 Season Hitting New Peak

First Results From NEWS Survey Shows Excellent Vacation Weather Paying Off

We can paraphrase an age-old statement attributed to this area by saying "if you don't like New England's weather and you are in the vacation-travel industry, just wait a season." It is very evident that, as little as any of us like such a continued drought, it is bringing to all resort operators and related fields the biggest season that New England has had.

In a spot check of key points in the six-state area, the NEWS has been making a survey, to determine conditions at the half-way mark of the summer season.

This part of the response will cover Western Massachusetts and Vermont, with other sections of New England to be covered in following issues.

Berkshires Are Booming

The Berkshire Hills are in the midst of what appears certain to be the most prosperous season for its vacation-travel industry.

"On the basis of increased advanced reservations for the peak summer season, we anticipate a 20 percent boost this year," said John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, [illegible] promotional agency.

A recent report from the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston carries out this forecast, showing a 21 percent gain in guest occupancy for the area for the month of May. Both June and July are showing the same in-based upon complete reports and early reports for July.

(Please turn to page 4)

Tanglewood Increases

The summer attraction in the Berkshires, as usual, is the Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, where the Boston Symphony closes its annual week ending Aug. 11.

Attendance the first two weeks was 5 percent ahead of 1956, while the Fourth of July weekend showed a 50 percent increase, with 27,480 persons

Year-round resorts in the area report a far better advance reservation through the whole month of August than ever before. Most of them have near-full bookings through September.

The reasons are advanced by the Berkshire Hills Conference for the increase in 1957 tourist business: 1) The opening of the Massachusetts Turnpike; 2) Cooperation by the area vacation-travel industry in tie-ins with Conference advertising schedules; 3) The newly opened office in New York City of the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 2 - 1957

Schoep To Sing At St. Stephen's

Arthur Schoep of the Tanglewood Opera Department will sing two Biblical songs by Dvorak at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Sunday morning 10 o'clock service.

A soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at Tanglewood and at Boston. Mr. Schoep teaches at the New England Conservatory of Music and also is a soloist at the Trinity Episcopal Church in Boston. He is a charter member of the New England Opera Theater.

Music Center Tenor Church Soloist

DALTON—Lee Fowler, tenor, a student in the opera and composition departments at Tanglewood, will be the soloist at the First Congregational Church tomorrow morning. Mr. Fowler, who is a soloist with the Tanglewood choir, is a resident of Boston. He has appeared as soloist at the Brandeis University Creative Arts Festival and with both the Waltham Symphony Orchestra and the Cambridge Festival Orchestra.

He had the lead role this spring in the New England Conservatory of Music presentation of Puccini's opera "La Rondine." In addition to solo work in various Boston churches he has been featured on Radio Stations WMEX and WCRB.

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 5, 1957–

In Brief . . .

The large crowds that braved the rain at Tanglewood for the weekend of the "Three B's" proved once more the drawing power of big names . . . Pittsfield's surprising American Legion junior baseball team, winner of a thriller in the state semifinals yesterday, has given local baseball its best shot in the arm in many a season . . .

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 2 - 1957

Around Berkshire

Indian Hill Faculty Concert

STOCKBRIDGE—Indian Hill Music Workshop will hold its first faculty concert Sunday at 8 p.m. The public is invited.

Pauul Ulanowsky of Interlaken, who teaches piano at the camp, will perform at the concert. Richard Kapuscinski, cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a teacher of cello and chamber music, will play the Brahms Cello Sonata.

Herbert Resnick will perform an oboe concerto by Cimarosa. Sonya Monosoff, violinist with Pro Musica Antiqua, will play Beethoven's Violin Sonata in D Major.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 5 - 1957

More Than 19,000 Attend Two Tanglewood Concerts

Despite bad weather both Saturday night and yesterday afternoon, the weekend concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival attracted more than 19,000 persons to Tanglewood in Lenox. The two concerts were devoted mainly to music by Brahms.

Largest of Season

The Saturday program was attended by 11,238 persons, the largest single audience of the festival so far. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony in Brahms' Violin Concerto and "Variations on a Theme" by Haydn and Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance." Isaac Stern was the violin soloist.

Mr. Munch also conducted the Sunday program, which included the Academic Festival Overture and Piano Concert No. 2 by Brahms and Walter Piston's Symphony No. 5 The piano soloist was Rudolph Serkin.

In Final Week

The festival now moves into its final week, with the usual Wednesday night chamber music program and the weekend series of shed concerts Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon. In addition there will be the annual Tanglewood on Parade program Thursday evening featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

For the weekend series, music by Beethoven will be featured. Mr. Munch will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon while Carl Schuricht will make his second guest appearance on Saturday.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541
AUG 3 - 1957

Brahms Weekend Opens With 6,195 at Tanglewood

The Brahms' weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival opened last night at Tanglewood with Carl Schuricht as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The program was attended by 6,195 persons.

"Tragic Overture"

The concert opened with Brahms' "Tragic Overture" and closed with his "Symphony No. 1." Also heard was the "Sonata for Orchestra" by German composer Werner Egk.

Mr. Schuricht, who will make a second appearance during the festival's final concert series next weekend, became known in this country the past season when he conducted the Vienna Symphony Orchestra in its tour.

This evening Charles Munch will conduct a program consisting of "Variations on a Theme by Haydn" and "Violin Concerto," both by Brahms, and "Media's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" by Samuel Barber. Isaac Stern will be violin soloist.

Tomorrow's Program

The concert series will conclude tomorrow afternoon with Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture" and Piano Concerto No. 2" and Piston's "Symphony No. 5." Mr. Munch will again conduct and Rudolph Serkin will be the piano soloist.

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 5, 1957

25,592 at Weekend Concerts

Despite heavy downpours of rain Saturday night and yesterday afternoon, crowds totaling 29,592 attended the weekend concerts at Tanglewood.

Saturday night's attendance of 11,238 was the highest for a single concert this season. Feature soloist was Isaac Stern, violinist. Yesterday's soloist was Rudolf Serkin, pianist. At Friday night's concert, Carl Schuricht, the German conductor, made his Tanglewood debut. He will be back on the podium Saturday night to conduct the Boston Symphony.

The weekend attendance figures were: Friday, 6,195; Saturday 11,238 and yesterday afternoon 8,159.

Friday, Aug. 2, 1957

Tourist Business Expected To Top Last Weekend

Tourist business in Berkshire County is expected to be better this weekend than last, a spokesman for the Berkshire Hills Conference said today.

Robert J. Pierce, a staff member, said, "This will be a good weekend, better than last week."

Area reports last week reported that business was "rather slow." The one exception was the Curtis Hotel in Lenox, which reported a full house and a greater number of restaurant guests than any other weekend.

The information booth in Lee reported a weekend that was much slower than the previous weekend. Byrne Bauer, owner-manager of the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, reported a completely booked house for the next two weekends.

Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957

Tanglewood Tale

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Isaac Stern is a virtuoso on the violin, but any pleasure one may derive from hearing him is quickly dispelled when one sits from 10:30 until midnight in a stationary car in the parking lot on the Stockbridge Bowl side of Tanglewood.

The situation might have been excusable. The storm on Saturday night began almost as soon as did the evening's concert. The powers-that-be at Tanglewood had ample time to summon extra parking officials and state police for a parking lot where they must know, from sad experience, that cars parked on the slope are unable to make the turn up and out on the wet grass. It would seem the situation could have been easily resolved . . . Let those cars (over one-half) which were parked on the level at the foot of the hill make their unskidding exit. Then those that were trapped at the top could turn down the hill, circle, and come up the road. With more authorities this could have been accomplished quickly and politely. And incidentally, is anyone ruder than when he sits behind the wheel of a car?

I am sure that there are many others who said, as did I, upon returning home at 1 a.m. this morning: "Tanglewood? Never again."

(Miss) ANNE V. DORT.
Tyringham.

Hotel & Rest. News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly
AUG 3 - 1957

1957 Season Hitting New Peak

First Results From NEWS Survey Shows Excellent Vacation Weather Paying Off

We can paraphrase an age-old statement attributed to this area by saying "if you don't like New England's weather . . . wait in the vacation-travel industry, just wait a season." It is very evident that, as little as you or I like such a continued drought, it is bringing to all resort operators and related fields the biggest season that New England has had.

In a spot check of key points in the six-state area, the NEWS has been making a survey, to determine conditions at the half-way mark of the summer season.

This part of the response will cover Western Massachusetts and Vermont, with other sections of New England to be covered in following issues.

Berkshires Are Booming

The Berkshire Hills are in the midst of what appears certain to be the most prosperous season for its vacation-travel industry.

"On the basis of increased advanced reservations for the peak summer season, we anticipate a 20 percent boost this year," said John F. Downing, executive director of the Berkshire Hills Conference, area promotional agency.

A recent report from the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston points out this forecast, showing a 20 percent gain in guest occupancy for the area for the month of May. Both June and July are showing the same increase, with 27,180 persons arriving.

(Please turn to page 8)

[illegible] based upon complete reports for June and early reports for July.

Tanglewood Increases

As a summer attraction in the Berkshires, as usual, is the Tanglewood Music Festival at Lenox, where the Boston Symphony closes its annual season Sunday, Aug. 11. The two-week extension during Aug. 11. The attendance the first two weeks was 5 percent ahead of 1956, while the first major weekend showed a [illegible] increase, with 27,180 persons attending.

Five year-round resorts in the Berkshires report a far better advance reservation through the whole month of August than ever before. Most of them have near-full bookings through September.

Three reasons are advanced by the Berkshire Hills Conference for the large increase in 1957 tourist business: 1) The opening of the Massachusetts Turnpike; 2) Cooperation by the area's tourist industry in the [illegible] with [illegible] advertising schedules; 3) The newly opened office in New York City of the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 3, 1957

Tanglewood Tenor To Sing at First Church

Donald Meyers, tenor, will be the soloist at the First Church of Christ Congregational tomorrow. Mr. Meyers is at Tanglewood this summer as an operatic coach. He is from New York where he is assistant to the music director of the Hunter College Opera Workshop.

He studied voice, dramatics, and accompanying with Maude Curry. In addition to giving several solo vocal recitals in New York City, he has sung professionally with the Durand Opera Players in Woodstock, N. Y. His solos tomorrow will be "Jesus Heart of Love," Durante, and "The Lord's Prayer," Malotte.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 23,235
AUG 2 - 1957

Schoep To Sing At St. Stephen's

Arthur Schoep of the Tanglewood Opera Department will sing two Biblical songs by Dvorak at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church Sunday morning 10 o'clock service.

A soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra both at Tanglewood and at Boston. Mr. Schoep teaches at the New England Conservatory of Music and also is a soloist at the Trinity Episcopal Church in Boston. He is a charter member of the New England Opera Theater.

Music Center Tenor Church Soloist

Eagle 8/10

DALTON—Lee Fowler, tenor, a student in the opera and composition departments at Tanglewood, will be the soloist at the First Congregational Church tomorrow morning. Mr. Fowler, who is a soloist with the Tanglewood choir, is a resident of Boston. He has appeared as soloist at the Brandeis University Creative Arts Festival and with both the Waltham Symphony Orchestra and the Cambridge Festival Orchestra.

He had the lead role this spring in the New England Conservatory of Music presentation of Puccini's opera "La Rondine." In addition to solo work in various Boston churches he has been featured on Radio Stations WMEX and WCRB.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541
AUG 2 - 1957

Around Berkshire

Indian Hill Faculty Concert

STOCKBRIDGE—Indian Hill Music Workshop will hold its first faculty concert Sunday at 8 p.m. The public is invited.

Pauul Ulanowsky of Interlaken, who teaches piano at the camp, will perform at the concert. Richard Kapuscinski, cellist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a teacher of cello and chamber music, will play the Brahms Cello Sonata.

Herbert Reanick will perform an oboe concerto by Cimarosa. Sonya Monosoff, violinist with Pro Musica Antiqua, will play Beethoven's Violin Sonata in D Major.

Berkshire Eagle, Monday, Aug. 5, 1957

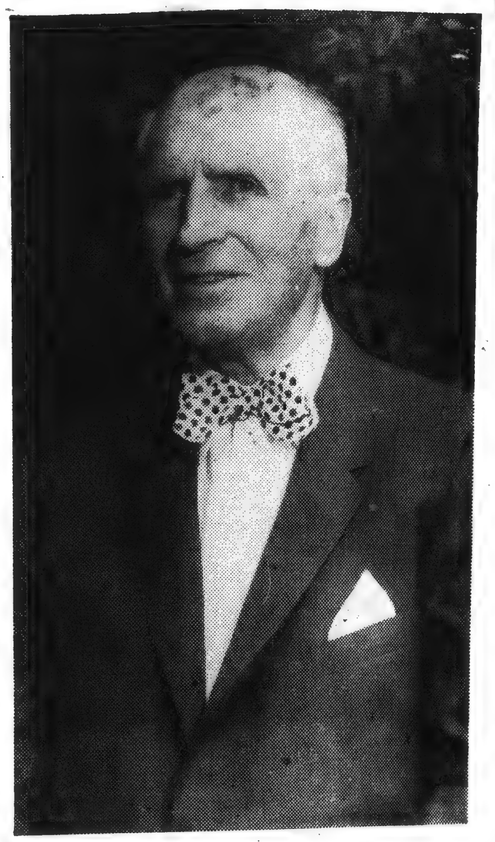
In Brief . . .

The large crowds that braved the rain at Tanglewood for the weekend of the "Three B's" proved once more the drawing power of big names . . . Pittsfield's surprising American Legion junior baseball team, winner of a thriller in the state semifinals yesterday, has given local baseball its best shot in the arm in many a season . . .

[210]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 194,784
AUG 1 - 1957

Tanglewood Time



IT'S concert time at Tanglewood's Berkshire Festival in Lenox. At top right, Carl Schuricht who conducted Vienna Philharmonic on U. S. tour, will make his first appearance Friday night with Boston Symphony. At left, Charles Munch (left) chats with pianist Rudolf Serkin, soloist at Sunday afternoon concert. At top left, Aaron Copland, composer, who will conduct Aug. 8. Above, Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops Orchestra will give concert Aug. 8.

C211

Society

MARJORIE WATTS SHERMAN Editor

FAMILIAR FACES in a far setting—Richard Burgin, Symphony's concert master is at the left, Dr. Munch in the center, with cellist Alfred Zighera just behind, and first violinist Joseph de Pas[illegible] at right.

AT BEAUTIFUL TANGLEWOOD, scores of Boston families are represented in the great audiences that gather for the summer Festival in the Berkshires, founded by the late Serge Koussevitzky. Mrs. Koussevitzky, Mrs. Philip Sherwood, Mrs. William Aldrich, Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield, are among the noted Bostonians who are box-holders for the concert series continuing through August 11.

A BOXFUL of distinguished guests at Tanglewood, President James Phinney Baxter of Williams College, Dean Roy Lamson, Prof. Robert Allen, and Joseph Johnson, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and in front, Mrs. Lamson, Mrs. Allen, and Mrs. Johnson.

The Fashion Of The Week

HARMONY . . . piquant Pat Kelsey of Sharon gracefully perches on a stump at Tanglewood [illegible]es over her Berkshire Festival program. A gay symphony in black and white, Pat is wearing [illegible] and white Thomas cotton and silk dress by Lanz which she found in the Sally Dean Shop in [illegible] Barrington. Perfect for a summer day, the dress was featured on the cover of the July "Made-[illegible]le."

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, August 1, 1957

Listening

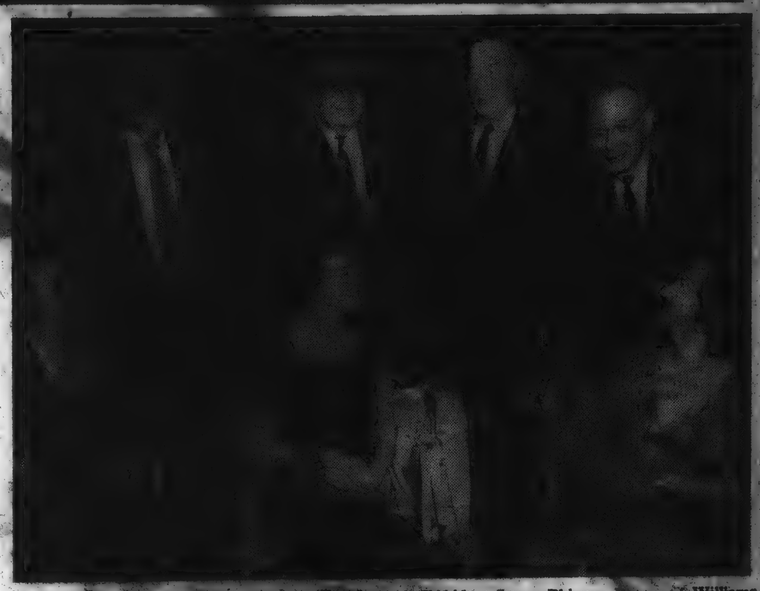
The listening of summertime is something particularly special in this area of ours. Most obvious is the listening at Tanglewood; the surge and roll of symphonic music, spreading like a great tide over the green lawns outside the music shed. Then there is the more delicate listening of Music Mountain, South Mountain, and other places where chamber music weaves a fragile and gleaming web of sound. Jazz at the Music Barn makes listening an exciting, vivid thing; a throbbing in the blood, a tremor in the nerves. Then there are the other summer listenings; the lap of water on lake shore, the sigh of wind in a pine tree, the twilight chirp of birds, the sweet whistle of a love-sick starling, the small thunder of a horse's gallop. Se we dedicate this issue of our Summertime '57 to all listeners, and to the things they hear.

Society

MARJORIE WATTS SHERMAN Editor

FAMILIAR FACES in a far setting—Richard Burgin, Symphony's concert master is at the left, Dr. Munch in the center, with cellist Alfred Zighera just behind, and first violinist Joseph de Pas at right.

AT BEAUTIFUL TANGLEWOOD, scores of Boston families are represented in the great audiences that gather for the summer Festival in the Berkshires founded by the late Serge Koussevitzky. Mrs. Koussevitzky, Mrs. Philip Sherwood, Mrs. William Aldrich, Mrs. Francis E. Crownshield, [illegible] the noted Bostonians who are [illegible] for the concert series continuing through August 11.



A BOXFUL of distinguished guests at Tanglewood, President James Phinney [illegible] of Williams College, Dean Roy Lamson, Prof. Robert Allen, and Joseph Johnson, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, and in front, Mrs. Lamson, Mrs. Allen, and Mrs. Johnson.

The Fashion Of The Week

HARMONY . . . piquant Pat Kelsey of Sharon gracefully perches on a stump at Tanglewood [illegible]es over her Berkshire Festival program. A gay symphony in black and white, Pat is wearing [illegible] and white Thomas cotton and silk dress by Lanz which she found in the Sally Dean Shop in [illegible] Barrington. Perfect for a summer day, the dress was featured on the cover of the July [illegible]ade- [illegible]le."

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL, Section II, August 1, 1957

Listening

The listening of summertime is something particularly special in this area of ours. Most obvious is the listening at Tanglewood; the surge and roll of symphonic music, spreading like a great tide over the green lawns outside the music shed. Then there is the more delicate listening of Music Mountain, South Mountain, and other places where chamber music weaves a fragile and gleaming web of sound. Jazz at the Music Barn makes listening an exciting, vivid thing; a throbbing in the blood, a tremor in the nerves. Then there are the other summer listenings; the lap of water on lake shore, the sigh of wind in a pine tree, the twilight chirp of birds, the sweet whistle of a love-sick starling, the small thunder of a horse's gallop. Se we dedicate this issue of our Summertime '57 to all listeners, and to the things they hear.

[212]

MUNCHING a tasty sandwich, Maestro Charles Munch chats with John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle.

RESTING after looking at paintings, Mrs. Irving Frankel (right), whose husband is in the bass section, and Mrs. Bernice Johnson, a friend, appear impressed.

Eagle Eye on a Party

By William H. Tague

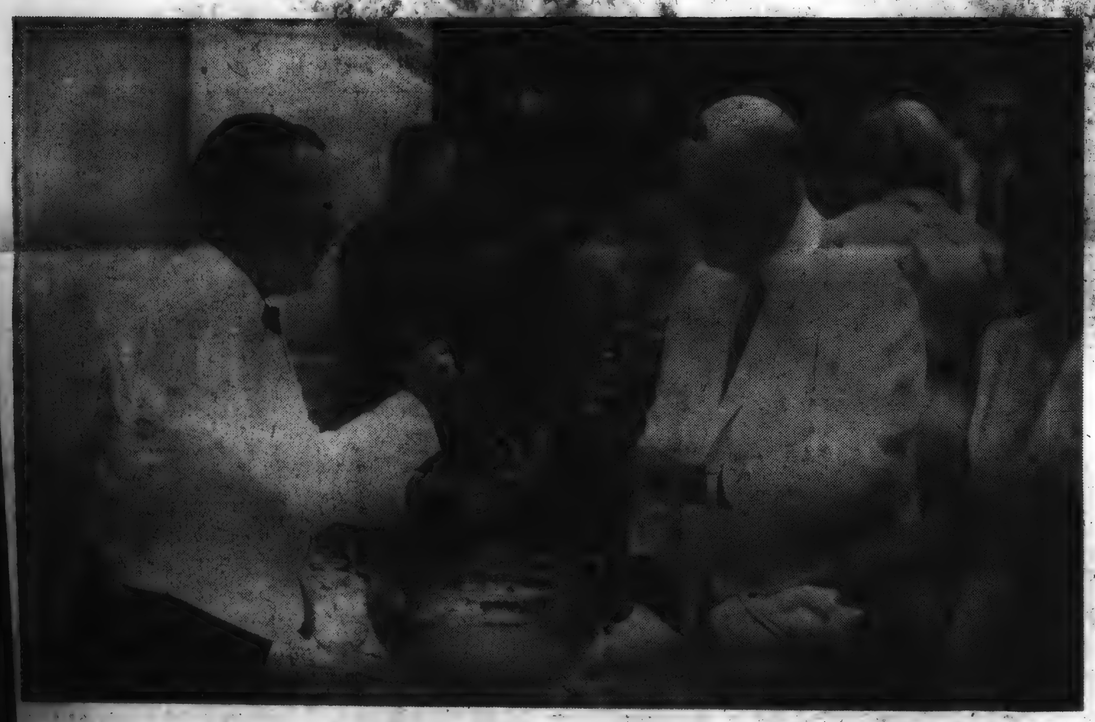
CHARLES MUNCH led members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on a trip to Williamstown this week for a reception in their honor at the fabulous Clark Art Institute. Surrounded by priceless Renoirs, Van Goghs and Corots, the guests had an exquisite time, eating tenderloin of beef, drinking champagne-cognac punch, and admiring the splendid museum and its treasures. Here are some pictures taken during the party.

TENDERLOIN of beef was served at a special table. Waitresses carried trays of succulent hors d'oeuvres. Caterer for the affair was Williamstown Howard Johnson.

PERCUSSIONIST Arthur [illegible] and his wife were one of youngest couples there. He's been with the BSO one year.

HOSTESS at the reception was Mrs. Peter Guille, wife of the Institute's director. Most of the guests remained within easy reach of refreshment tables set up in the North Gallery although they were free to visit the whole museum.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 3 - 1957



IN THE COURT, biggest of museum's galleries, Henry S. Freeman, bass player, and Alfred Krips, first violinist, hold a conversation amid masterpieces of painting, sculpture.

PUNCH BOWL of silver, part of the museum's collection, was made in Scotland in 1740 by Hugh Gordon. Telesphore Chalfonte replenishes the glass of President James Phiney Baxter III of Williams College.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,541
JUL 25 1957

Munch, Boston Symphony Guests of Art Institute

...us Conductor Reverses Tribute Before Evening Ends

By MAYNARD LEAHEY

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and several of its members were guests of the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown at a reception in their honor last night, but before the evening had ended the distinguished conductor succeeded in reversing the tribute.

150 Attend Party

Some 150 art and music lovers from every section of the county attended the party, arranged by Peter Guille, director of the Institute as a means of bringing together two of the area's finest cultural assets and to afford an opportunity to show appreciation for the pleasure given to thousands by the orchestra at the annual Berkshire Symphonic Festival, now in progress at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The reception, from 5 to 7 o'clock, was informal in nature with the guests strolling through the galleries of the famed Institute chatting with Mr. Munch and the orchestra members and exchanging notes on this season's Tanglewood concerts.

The famous conductor, who succeeded Serge Koussevitsky in 1951 and whose shock of iron-gray hair made him stand out in last night's gathering, talked amiably with all who approached him and obviously enjoyed himself hugely as guests clustered about to laud him and the orchestra for its contribution to summertime pleasures in the Berkshires.

Transcend Praises

But it was not long before Mr. Munch made it clear that, for him, the priceless art treasures to be seen at the Institute transcended the praises heaped upon him, and that he was more disposed to talk of art than of music.

Standing enchanted before some of the works of art in the galleries, Mr. Munch said that it would be necessary to lapse into lyrical French to express properly the charm of the Institute for him.

"Speak of quality and there is nothing like it anywhere," he exclaimed again and again. "New York, Paris, London, anywhere, there is nothing better. I count myself honored to be here."

Mr. Munch also revealed that art, rather than music, is his first love and he minimized his own attainments in the music world while disclosing that he himself is an art collector.

Among the guests on hand was Talcott M. Banks, Jr., of Cambridge, a native and former resident of Williamstown and a graduate of Williams College, who now is a member of the board of trustees of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Others attending included President James Phinney Baxter III of Williams College, Charles Makepeace, Williams treasurer emeritus, President Julian K. Sprague of the Sprague Electric Co. and Mrs. Sprague, and several members of the Williams faculty and their wives.

ADMIRES TREASURES — Director Munch admires treasures of silver at the Art Institute, reversing the tribute paid him and the orchestra, by saying "There is nothing better. I count myself honored to be here."

ENJOYS PLAUDITS — Dr. Munch obviously enjoys plaudits heaped upon him and Boston Symphony Orchestra for its contribution to summertime in the Berkshires, as he chats with reception guests.

MAESTRO PRAISES ART MUSEUM — Charles Munch (center) world famed conductor of Boston Symphony Orchestra, lauds art works on exhibition at Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown as he chats with President James P. Baxter III of Williams College (left) and Peter Guille, Institute director, during reception given by Institute for the orchestra yesterday afternoon. In background is one of 32 paintings by Renoir which Institute has on display.

Tasue

Top level chat is held by Williams College president, James Phinney Baxter III, with Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch and Peter Guille, director of Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown. The Boston Symphony was entertained at the Art Institute last evening at a party given by Mr. Guille. More than 100 persons attended. Mr. Munch, who is a great admirer of Renoir, is standing in front of Renoir's "Portrait of Mademoiselle Therese Berard," part of the permanent collection at the Clark Art Institute.

NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 25 1957

Reception Planned For Symphony Orch. At Art Institute

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, will be guests at a reception to be given by the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute next Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock at the Institute in Williamstown.

Peter Guille, director of the Institute, said no formal program is planned, but that the event will serve to bring together representatives of two of the county's most distinguished cultural assets. The reception will take place in the building on South Street and will be informal in nature, with invitations having been sent to both art and music lovers in the area.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 25 1957

Art Institute To Honor Dr. Munch, Orchestra Members

Invitations have been issued by the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, Williamstown, to a reception [illegible] Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and members of the orchestra.

The reception will be at 5 Tuesday evening.

[213]

Dr. Munch, Boston Symphony Guests of Art Institute

Famous Conductor Reverses Tribute Before Evening Ends

By MAYNARD LEAHEY

Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and several of its members were guests of the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown at a reception in their honor last night, but before the evening had ended the distinguished conductor succeeded in reversing the tribute.

150 Attend Party

Some 150 art and music lovers from every section of the county attended the party, arranged by Peter Guille, director of the Institute as a means of bringing together two of the area's finest cultural assets and to afford an opportunity to show appreciation for the pleasure given to thousands by the orchestra at the annual Berkshire Symphonic Festival, now in progress at Tanglewood, Lenox.

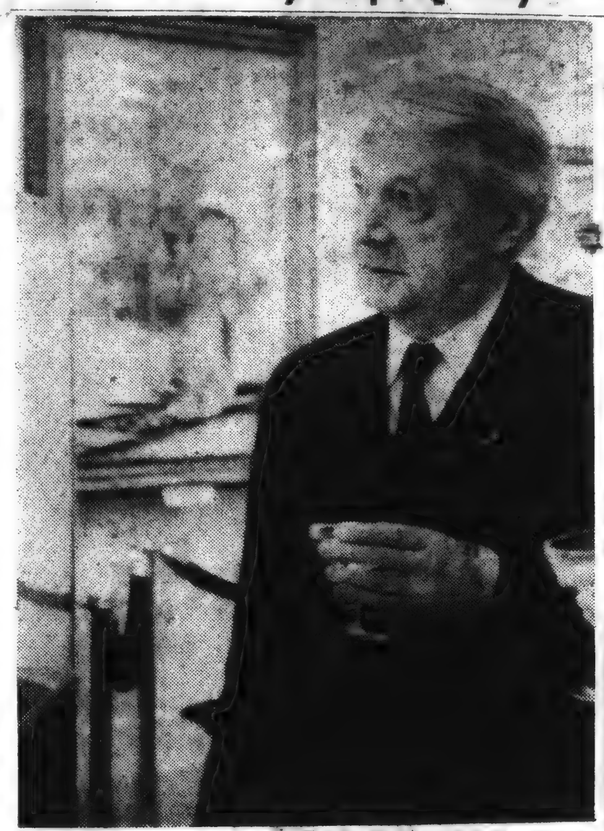
The reception, from 5 to 7 o'clock, was informal in nature with the guests strolling through the galleries of the famed Institute chatting with Mr. Munch and the orchestra members and exchanging notes on this season's Tanglewood concerts.

The famous conductor, who succeeded Serge Koussevitsky in 1951 and whose shock of iron-gray hair made him stand out in last night's gathering, talked amiably with all who approached him and obviously enjoyed himself hugely as guests clustered about to laud him and the orchestra for its contribution to summertime pleasures in the Berkshires.

Transcend Praises

But it was not long before Mr. Munch made it clear that, for him, the priceless art treasures to be seen at the Institute transcended the praises heaped upon him, and that he was more disposed to talk of art than of music.

Standing enchanted before some of the works of art in the galleries, Mr. Munch said that it would be



ADMIRES TREASURES — Director Munch admires treasures of silver at the Art Institute, reversing the tribute paid him and the orchestra, by saying "There is nothing better. I count myself honored to be here."

ENJOYS PLAUDITS — Dr. Munch obviously enjoys plaudits heaped upon him and Boston Symphony Orchestra for its contribution to summertime in the Berkshires, as he chats with reception guests.

Cottons and L... Skirts $3.89

Swim Caps 59c
Close Out. Regular 79c and $1.00

Swim Suits by Cole
Values $10.95 to $22.50
$7.00 - $9.00 - $13.00

The riot's end came only a few hours before some 200 Montana National Guardsmen and peace officers were poised to invade Cell Block 8, where the convicts held the guards hostage.

Eight guards were swept up by shouting convicts when the riot broke out in the exercise yard at 3:30 p.m. Two were released shortly afterward, and a third went free minutes before the riot ended when Anderson made his pledge to the prisoner by loudspeaker.

The prisoners freed the five [illegible] said they

Rules N. J. Pupils May Not Say Grace in School Rooms

be no legal or constitutional objection, however, to the reading of passages from the Old Testament or the repeating of the Lord's Prayer immediately prior to the noon meal."

—Controversy rages in this tiny town over whether elementary school children here can say grace before lunch.

EDGEWATER PARK, N.J. (AP)

Ruled Illegal

where they have received expert[illegible] view of the director.

8—The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, July 31, 1957

BSO Entertained at Clark Art Institute

Tague

Top level chat is held by Williams College president, James Phinney Baxter III, with Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch and Peter Guille, director of Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute in Williamstown. The Boston Symphony was entertained at the Art Institute last evening at a party given by Mr. Guille. More than 100 persons attended. Mr. Munch, who is a great admirer of Renoir, is standing in front of Renoir's "Portrait of Mademoiselle Therese Berard," part of the permanent collection at the Clark Art Institute.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

JUL 25 1957

Reception Planned For Symphony Orch. At Art Institute

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, will be guests at a reception to be given by the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute next Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock at the Institute in Williamstown.

Peter Guille, director of the Institute, said no formal program is planned, but that the event will serve to bring together representatives of two of the county's most distinguished cultural assets. The reception will take place in the building on South Street and will be informal in nature, with invitations having been sent to both art and music lovers in the area.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 25 1957

Art Institute To Honor Dr. Munch, Orchestra Members

Invitations have been issued by the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, Williamstown, to a reception for Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and members of the orchestra.

The reception will be at 5 Tuesday evening.

[214]

Sculpture Magic Turns Lady Into Clay

By RICHARD V. HAPPEL

SINCE SUMMER hereabouts is full of a number of remarkable things, it seemed no more than fitting that we should undertake to attend at least one of the more novel of the offerings. This was the first of three demonstrations in clay modeling presented by sculptor Peter Abate (pronounced Ah-Bahty) at Chesterwood in Stockbridge.

His program had all manner of virtues to recommend it. Chief among them was the fact that Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, was to be his model.

The locale, Chesterwood, also was a further attraction since it was the home of the late famous sculptor, Daniel Chester French. His studio and 20 acres of the big estate were given as a public museum to the Trustees of Reservations of Massachusetts in 1955 by his daughter, Mrs. William Penn Cresson, who occupies the large residence on the property.

Illusion Gone

Out-dated as we are, it had been our adamant conviction that all musicians, painters and sculptors, and especially sculptors, were rather a breed apart—dreamy, bearded and quite limp. So when Mr. Abate pulled up in a spanking Pontiac station wagon, jumped out briskly and whipped open the tailgate, our dreamy illusion took to the woods, which are plentiful at Chesterwood.

Introduced by Robert Underwood Johnson, Mr. Abate shook our hand with a grip as solid as a woodchopper's, beamed pleasantly and started to haul a marble sculpture from the car. It was "The Beginning of Life," he told us, a cleverly carved representation of two intertwined figures forming a circle about the size of a 7.10 x 16 tire, if we may be permitted a mundane description.

Scrubbing Up

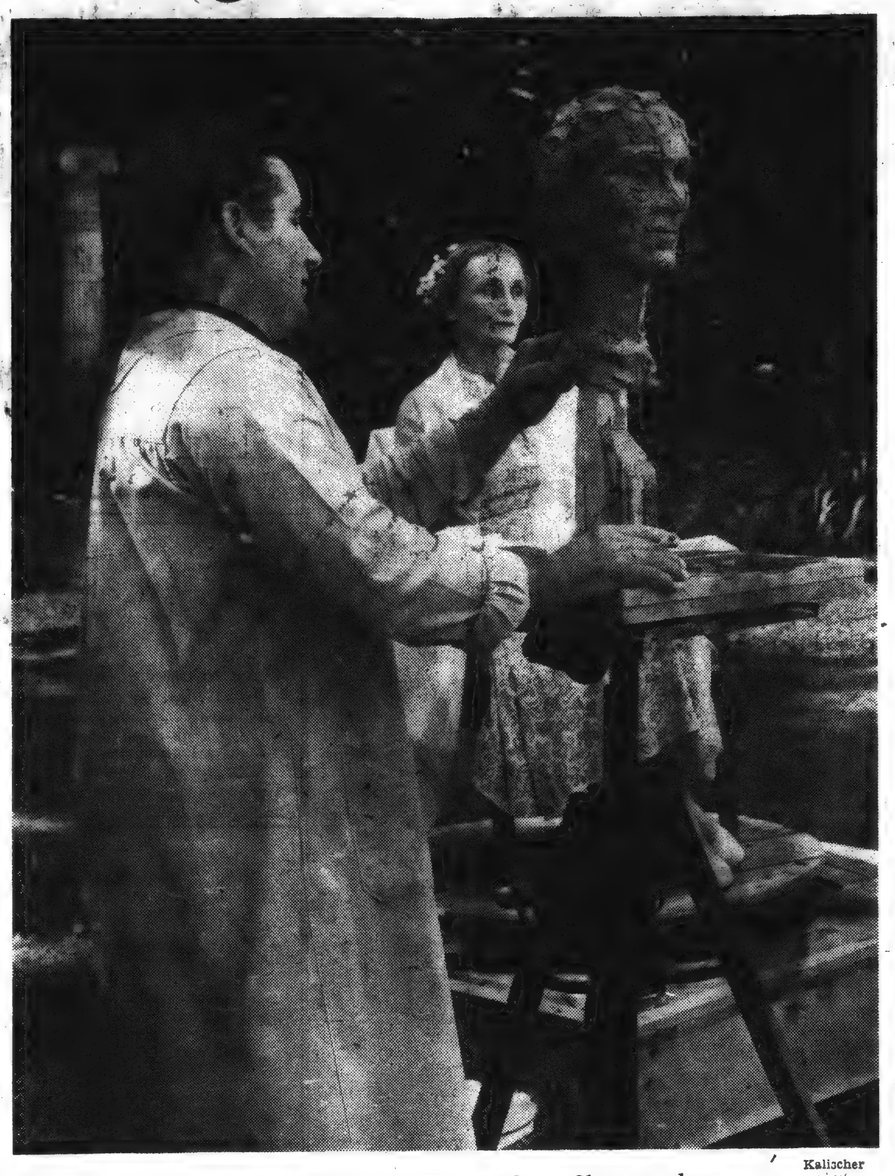
He loaded it carefully into a wheelbarrow provided by a Chesterwood attendant, and wheeled it through an opening in the hedge, past the big studio and out onto the east lawn where the demonstration would take place. He had brought this for atmosphere, we gathered. He set it up on a pedestal well in front of a semicircle of chairs and Indian blankets that had been placed on the grass.

After lingering a few minutes in the lofty studio, we came upon Mr. Abate on the lawn just as he was briskly cleaning the marble with an ordinary scrubbing brush. He told us it would be exhibited later at Tanglewood. His young assistant, David Smith, age 11, of Pittsfield, lugged up a covered galvanized pail that seemed quite heavy. It contained the clay that would be turned into the likeness of Mrs. Koussevitzky, who had not yet arrived.

Gray and Gold

Mr. Abate uncovered the pail, and let us handle the material. We must say in all honesty that it felt slimy. It was slate-color and left a white film on our hands. The sculptor grinned and handed us a turkish towel he carried for cleaning up.

The demonstration was open to the public, and an audience was gathering by now. They were to total 104 before the demonstration closed after more than an hour.



Kalischer

Sculptor Abate and Mrs. Koussevitzky at Chesterwood

Promptly at 3 Mrs. Koussevitzky arrived, a shy, quiet-spoken woman with striking, high cheekbones and deep-set eyes. She wore a light, afternoon dress which Mrs. Cresson kindly explained to us was gray and gold voile.

'Fifth Wheel'

A place for the model had been set up well in advance, a low wooden platform on which rested a sculptor's "fifth wheel," an expression which Mr. Abate told us stemmed from the fact that it revolved on roller bearings so the model might be turned during the work. The wheel was actually a flat dais on which rested a mahogany sidechair with a white coat thrown over it. Mrs. Koussevitzky mounted the platform, settled into the chair, and thenceforth seemed scarcely to breathe. She was, Mr. Abate said later, a wonderful model indeed.

For modeling, there was a sculptor's stand bearing an upright, rough length of wood which Mr. Abate called an armature. This would form the inner structure of the bust he proposed to build on and around it.

Mr. Abate slipped into a spotless smock the exact color of the clay, dug into the pail and formed a rather small knob at the top of the armature. This would fatten, he said, into a full-size head.

Then a peculiar thing happened. As he studied his model and carefully added clay, shaped it and smoothed it, he assumed a dreamy look. No longer was he a youngish, stocky man who might be an insurance salesman. He became an artist, a kind of breed apart. Indeed, the atmosphere on the lawn became charged with the mystic force of an artist at work, and people in his audience began to speak to each other in whispers, if at all.

Rapidly the clay assumed the shape of his model's face, and all of us were so drawn into the work that when he suddenly took his thumb and gouged an eye into the material we, for one, winced and blinked. So, we noticed, did several others, but not Mrs. Koussevitzky. She sat as impassive as would be the final marble bust for which the clay likeness would form the working

After a half hour the artist paused and asked Mrs. Koussevitzky if she were tired and wished to rest. She said no.

"I feel as if I were part of the work; drawn into it," she murmured.

So the modeling continued another half hour, Mr. Abate rolling strips of clay into cylinder-like sausages, pressing them into shape, and adding tiny pinches of clay for nostrils, eyelids and accents.

Then he stepped back, wiped his hands and said so much for that sitting. Two more at least would be required to complete the bust.

"But don't think," he told the audience quickly, "that it requires only three hours to do this. There is a lot of detail besides what you see."

More To Come

Future sessions a week apart would be devoted to refining and smoothing the clay. But already, though criss-crossed with cracks and lines caused by the cylindrical shape of the clay pieces, the work could be taken for no one other than the model.

The entranced audience stirred, rose and crowded around the incomplete bust to marvel at the likeness that in so short a time had emerged. The spell cast by Mr. Abate faded slowly. As we indicated in the beginning, artists—or at least sculptors—when at work are really dreamy and a breed apart.

●

Directory Is a Boon To Chamber Musicians

MUSIC for fun is the object of the Amateur Chamber Music Players of America. Miss Helen Rice, a New Yorker who spends summers in Stockbridge, is secretary.

A national organization, the chamber music outfit has a membership of more than 3,000. It publishes a directory listing players, where they live, what instruments they play and the degree of talent each possesses, according to his own estimate.

Members meet in private homes in groups numbering up to 40 players for evenings of Haydn, Beethoven or modern. Members away from home, and who feel the urge for a musical evening, find the directory priceless for rounding up other players in a strange city.

Notes and Footnotes

RICHARD V. HAPPEL

COINCIDENCE at work: Sculptor Peter Abate who is demonstrating in three sittings at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, how a clay model is made, tells how Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, his model, first engaged him to do the marble memorial to the late Boston Orchestra conductor in the Lenox Cemetery-on-the-Hill. She was impressed by work of his she had seen, but was unaware that he had studied under Frederick W. Allen at the Boston Museum. Mr. Allen had created some years ago the famous casting of Dr. Koussevitzky's expressive hands.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 8 - 1957

Tanglewood Programs

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I wish to congratulate your columnist Mrs. Katharine Annin on her excellent comments ["Our 'Berkshires," Aug. 6] in reference to programs at Tanglewood.

I think she said, in a very fine way, something which very much needed to be said.

FRANKLIN C. PILLSBURY.
Pittsfield.

6—The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 29, 1957

Mrs. Koussevitzky Will Model for Sculptor Abate

A new schedule was announced today for the demonstration by Peter Abate, sculptor, at Chesterwood, Stockbridge studio of the late Daniel Chester French. The demonstration will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday this week and next.

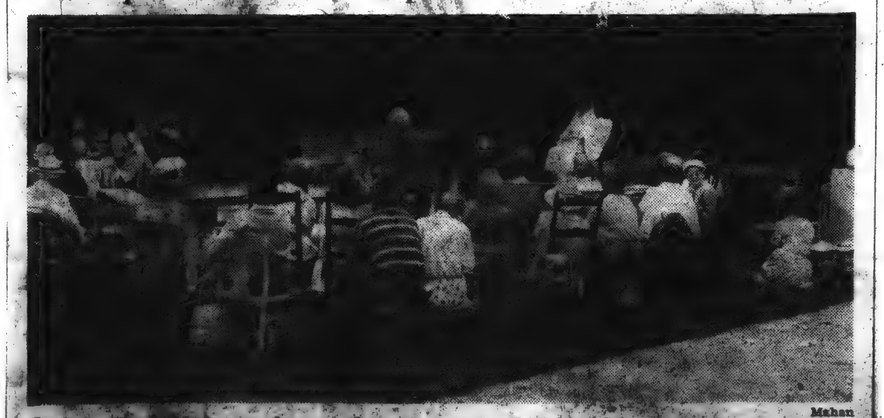
Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the noted composer, is model for the public demonstration of the three successive stages required to complete a sculptured head.

Mr. Abate, head of the sculpture department of the Boston Museum School of Art, is conducting sculpture classes this summer at the Berkshire Museum. He is winner of a Prix-de-Rome and a Fulbright Scholarship.

Chesterwood is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 9, 1957

Sculptor Abate Completes Work on Portrait



Mahan

Sculptor Peter Abate completes work on portrait head of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky Wednesday afternoon at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, studio of the late Daniel Chester French. About 30 watched the noted sculptor work. The portrait head of the widow of the late BSO conductor will be offered for sale. Mrs. Koussevitzky and Mr. Abate donated their services.

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957

Sculptor Abate To Complete Portrait Of Mrs. Koussevitzky

Sculptor Peter Abate will complete the portrait head of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at 3 tomorrow afternoon at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, studio of the late Daniel Chester French.

The public is invited to the demonstration, which will be the last of three to show the successive stages required to complete a sculptured head. During the demonstration, Mrs. Koussevitzky will furnish recorded music conducted by her late husband. Both Mrs. Koussevitzky and Mr. Abate are donating their services to Chesterwood. The portrait head of Mrs. Koussevitzky will be offered for sale.

Chesterwood, a gift of Mrs. William Penn Cresson, Mr. French's daughter, to the Trustees of Reservations, is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Sculptor Abate, Prix de Rome and Fulbright scholarship winner, is head of the sculpture department at the Museum School of Fine Arts, Boston. He is conducting classes this summer at the Berkshire Museum.

[214]

Sculpture Magic Turns Lady Into Clay

By RICHARD V. HAPPEL

SINCE SUMMER hereabouts is full of a number of remarkable things, it seemed no more than fitting that we should undertake to attend at least one of the more novel of the offerings. This was the first of three demonstrations in clay modeling presented by sculptor Peter Abate (pronounced Ah-Bahty) at Chesterwood in Stockbridge.

His program had all manner of virtues to recommend it. Chief among them was the fact that Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, was to be his model.

The locale, Chesterwood, also was a further attraction since it was the home of the late famous sculptor, Daniel Chester French. His studio and 20 acres of the big estate were given as a public museum to the Trustees of Reservations of Massachusetts in 1955 by his daughter, Mrs. William Penn Cresson, who occupies the large residence on the property.

Illusion Gone

Out-dated as we are, it had been our adamant conviction that all musicians, painters and sculptors, and especially sculptors, were rather a breed apart—dreamy, bearded and quite limp. So when Mr. Abate pulled up in a spanking Pontiac station wagon, jumped out briskly and whipped open the tailgate, our dreamy illusion took to the woods, which are plentiful at Chesterwood.

Introduced by Robert Underwood Johnson, Mr. Abate shook our hand with a grip as solid as a woodchopper's, beamed pleasantly and started to haul a marble sculpture from the car. It was "The Beginning of Life," he told us, a cleverly carved representation of two intertwined figures forming a circle about the size of a 7.10 x 16 tire, if we may be permitted a mundane description.

Scrubbing Up

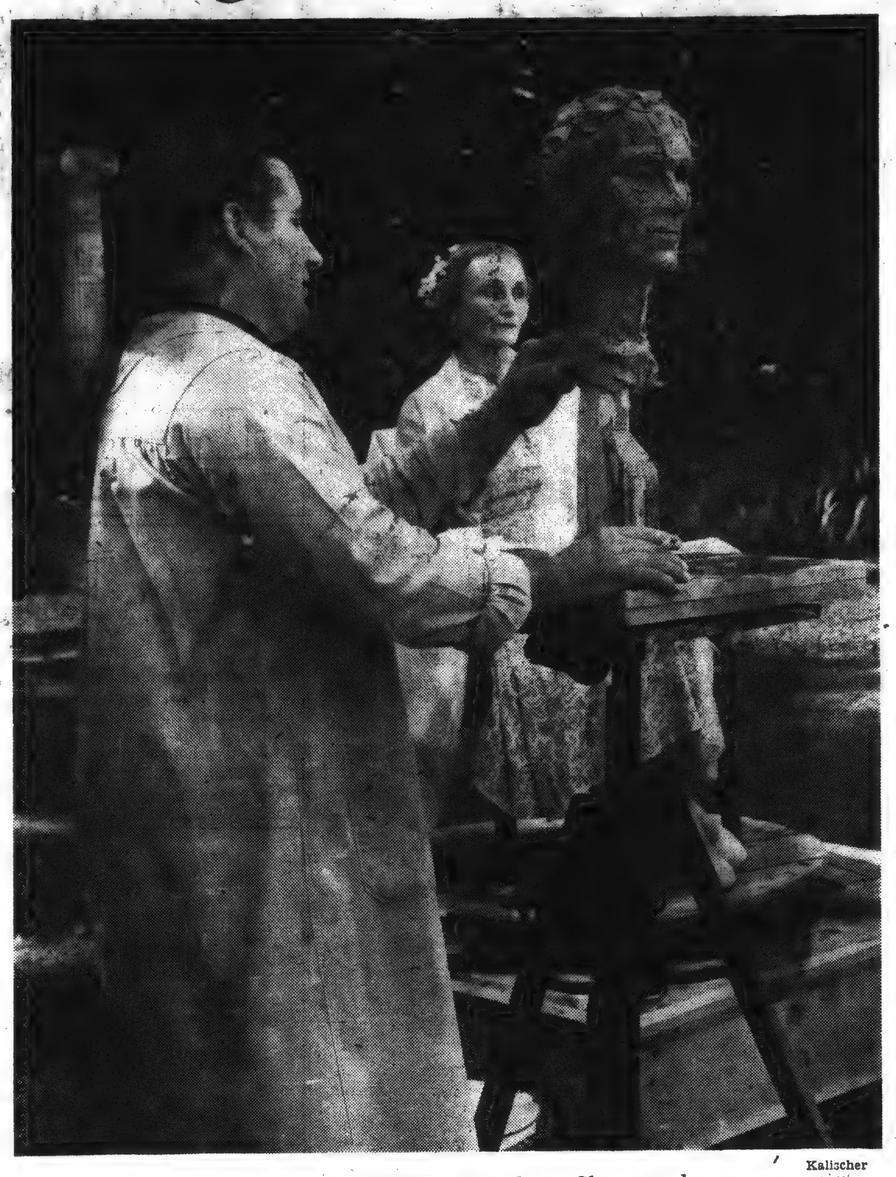
He loaded it carefully into a wheelbarrow provided by a Chesterwood attendant, and wheeled it through an opening in the hedge, past the big studio and out onto the east lawn where the demonstration would take place. He had brought this for atmosphere, we gathered. He set it up on a pedestal well in front of a semicircle of chairs and Indian blankets that had been placed on the grass.

After lingering a few minutes in the lofty studio, we came upon Mr. Abate on the lawn just as he was briskly cleaning the marble with an ordinary scrubbing brush. He told us it would be exhibited later at Tanglewood. His young assistant, David Smith, age 11, of Pittsfield, lugged up a covered galvanized pail that seemed quite heavy. It contained the clay that would be turned into the likeness of Mrs. Koussevitzky, who had not yet arrived.

Gray and Gold

Mr. Abate uncovered the pail, and let us handle the material. We must say in all honesty that it felt slimy. It was slate-color and left a white film on our hands. The sculptor grinned and handed us a turkish towel he carried for cleaning up.

The demonstration was open to the public, and an audience was gathering by now. They were to total 104 before the demonstration closed after more than an hour.



Kalischer

Sculptor Abate and Mrs. Koussevitzky at Chesterwood

Promptly at 3 Mrs. Koussevitzky arrived, a shy, quiet-spoken woman with striking, high cheekbones and deep-set eyes. She wore a light, afternoon dress which Mrs. Cresson kindly explained to us was gray and gold voile.

'Fifth Wheel'

A place for the model had been set up well in advance, a low wooden platform on which rested a sculptor's "fifth wheel," an expression which Mr. Abate told us stemmed from the fact that it revolved on roller bearings so the model might be turned during the work. The wheel was actually a flat dais on which rested a mahogany sidechair with a white coat thrown over it. Mrs. Koussevitzky mounted the platform, settled into the chair, and thenceforth seemed scarcely to breathe. She was, Mr. Abate said later, a wonderful model indeed.

For modeling, there was a sculptor's stand bearing an upright, rough length of wood which Mr. Abate called an armature. This would form the inner structure of the bust he proposed to build on and around it.

Mr. Abate slipped into a spotless smock the exact color of the clay, dug into the pail and formed a rather small knob at the top of the armature. This would fatten, he said, into a full-size head.

Then a peculiar thing happened. As he studied his model and carefully added clay, shaped it and smoothed it, he assumed a dreamy look. No longer was he a youngish, stocky man who might be an insurance salesman. He became an artist, a kind of breed apart. Indeed, the atmosphere on the lawn became charged with the mystic force of an artist at work, and people in his audience began to speak to each other in whispers, if at all.

Rapidly the clay assumed the shape of his model's face, and all of us were so drawn into the work that when he suddenly took his thumb and gouged an eye into the material we, for one, winced and blinked. So, we noticed, did several others, but not Mrs. Koussevitzky. She sat as impassive as would be the final marble bust for which the clay likeness would form the working model.

After a half hour the artist paused and asked Mrs. Koussevitzky if she were tired and wished to rest. She said no.

"I feel as if I were part of the work; drawn into it," she murmured.

So the modeling continued another half hour, Mr. Abate rolling strips of clay into cylinder-like sausages, pressing them into shape, and adding tiny pinches of clay for nostrils, eyelids and accents.

Then he stepped back, wiped his hands and said so much for that sitting. Two more at least would be required to complete the bust.

"But don't think," he told the audience quickly, "that it requires only three hours to do this. There is a lot of detail besides what you see."

More To Come

Future sessions a week apart would be devoted to refining and smoothing the clay. But already, though criss-crossed with cracks and lines caused by the cylindrical shape of the clay pieces, the work could be taken for no one other than the model.

The entranced audience stirred, rose and crowded around the incomplete bust to marvel at the likeness that in so short a time had emerged. The spell cast by Mr. Abate faded slowly. As we indicated in the beginning, artists—or at least sculptors—when at work are really dreamy and a breed apart.

●

Directory Is a Boon To Chamber Musicians

MUSIC for fun is the object of the Amateur Chamber Music Players of America. Miss Helen Rice, a New Yorker who spends summers in Stockbridge, is secretary.

A national organization, the chamber music outfit has a membership of more than 3,000. It publishes a directory listing players, where they live, what instruments they play and the degree of talent each possesses, according to his own estimate.

Members meet in private homes in groups numbering up to 40 players for evenings of Haydn, Beethoven or modern. Members away from home, and who feel the urge for a musical evening, find the directory priceless for rounding up other players in a strange city.

Notes and Footnotes

RICHARD V. HAPPEL

COINCIDENCE at work: Sculptor Peter Abate who is demonstrating in three sittings at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, how a clay model is made, tells how Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, his model, first engaged him to do the marble memorial to the late Boston Orchestra conductor in the Lenox Cemetery-on-the-Hill. She was impressed by work of his she had seen, but was unaware that he had studied under Frederick W. Allen at the Boston Museum. Mr. Allen had created some years ago the famous casting of Dr. Koussevitzky's expressive hands.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 8 - 1957

Tanglewood Programs

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I wish to congratulate your columnist Mrs. Katharine Annin on her excellent comments ["Our 'Berkshires," Aug. 6] in reference to programs at Tanglewood.

I think she said, in a very fine way, something which very much needed to be said.

FRANKLIN C. PILLSBURY.
Pittsfield.

Mrs. Koussevitzky Will Model for Sculptor Abate

A new schedule was announced today for the demonstration by Peter Abate, sculptor, at Chesterwood, Stockbridge studio of the late Daniel Chester French. The demonstration will be at 3 p.m. Wednesday this week and next.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the noted composer, is model for the public demonstration of the three successive stages required to complete a sculptured head.

Mr. Abate, head of the sculpture department of the Boston Museum School of Art, is conducting sculpture classes this summer at the Berkshire Museum. He is winner of a Prix-de-Rome and a Fulbright Scholarship.

Chesterwood is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Sculptor Abate Completes Work on Portrait

Mahan

Sculptor Peter Abate completes work on portrait head of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky Wednesday afternoon at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, studio of the late Daniel Chester French. About 30 watched the noted sculptor work. The portrait head of the widow of the late BSO conductor will be offered for sale. Mrs. Koussevitzky and Mr. Abate donated their services.

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957

Sculptor Abate To Complete Portrait Of Mrs. Koussevitzky

Sculptor Peter Abate will complete the portrait head of Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky at 3 tomorrow afternoon at Chesterwood, Stockbridge, studio of the late Daniel Chester French.

The public is invited to the demonstration, which will be the last of three to show the successive stages required to complete a sculptured head. During the demonstration, Mrs. Koussevitzky will furnish recorded music conducted by her late husband. Both Mrs. Koussevitzky and Mr. Abate are donating their services to Chesterwood. The portrait head of Mrs. Koussevitzky will be offered for sale.

Chesterwood, a gift of Mrs. William Penn Cresson, Mr. French's daughter, to the Trustees of Reservations, is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Sculptor Abate, Prix de Rome and Fulbright scholarship winner, is head of the sculpture department at the Museum School of Fine Arts, Boston. He is conducting classes this summer at the Berkshire Museum.

BSO CONDUCTOR Dr. Charles Munch is greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn of Lenox at annual party given by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith to honor members of Boston Symphony. Party was held after yesterday's concert at Miss Robinson Smith's home, Stockbridge.

NOTED VIOLINIST Zino Francescatti of Monterey with Mrs. Alexander Brailowsky, wife of noted pianist summering in Richmond.

Photos by Tague

HOSTESS Miss Robinson Smith visits with Carl Schuricht, well-known German conductor, and Mrs. M. Giovanni Bagarotti of Seal Harbor, Maine. Mr. Schuricht made his first appearance at Tanglewood last week and will conduct again at the Festival concert on Saturday evening.

[215]

Eagle, Thursday, July 25, 1957

Miss Smith To Entertain for Boston Symphony

Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith will entertain Sunday, Aug. 4, at a garden party in honor of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at her home, the Residence, in Glendale.

The party will be held after the Boston Symphony concert at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood.

LAST WEEKEND at Tanglewood many folks who were active in the Pittsfield General Hospital capital fund campaign two years ago were happy to meet Miss Gwendolyn Zosel, one of the professional staff who helped make the effort a success. Miss Z is now running a $350,000 hospital campaign in Claremont, N. H. Claremont couldn't have a better person helping them.

—o—

SOMETHING new may have been added by the railroads in their unremitting efforts to discourage passenger travel. An anonymous writer after attending the Tanglewood programs reports that soon after leaving Springfield in a day coach, a real, live bat began soaring about the car. Wonders if it was a "plant."

RICHARD V. HAPPEL.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 2, 1957

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 5 - 1957

Miss Smith Hostess at Party

LENOX — Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, founder of Tanglewood music festival, entertained yesterday at a garden party in honor of members of Berkshire Symphony Orchestra, at her home "The Residence," Glendale. The party followed the Boston Symphony concert at Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood.

ire Eagle, Tuesday, July 30, 1957

Dr. Munch To Meet Berkshire Night Group

Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will meet members of the Berkshire Night Committee at a reception Friday evening after the concert at Tanglewood. The reception will be in the chamber music hall.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

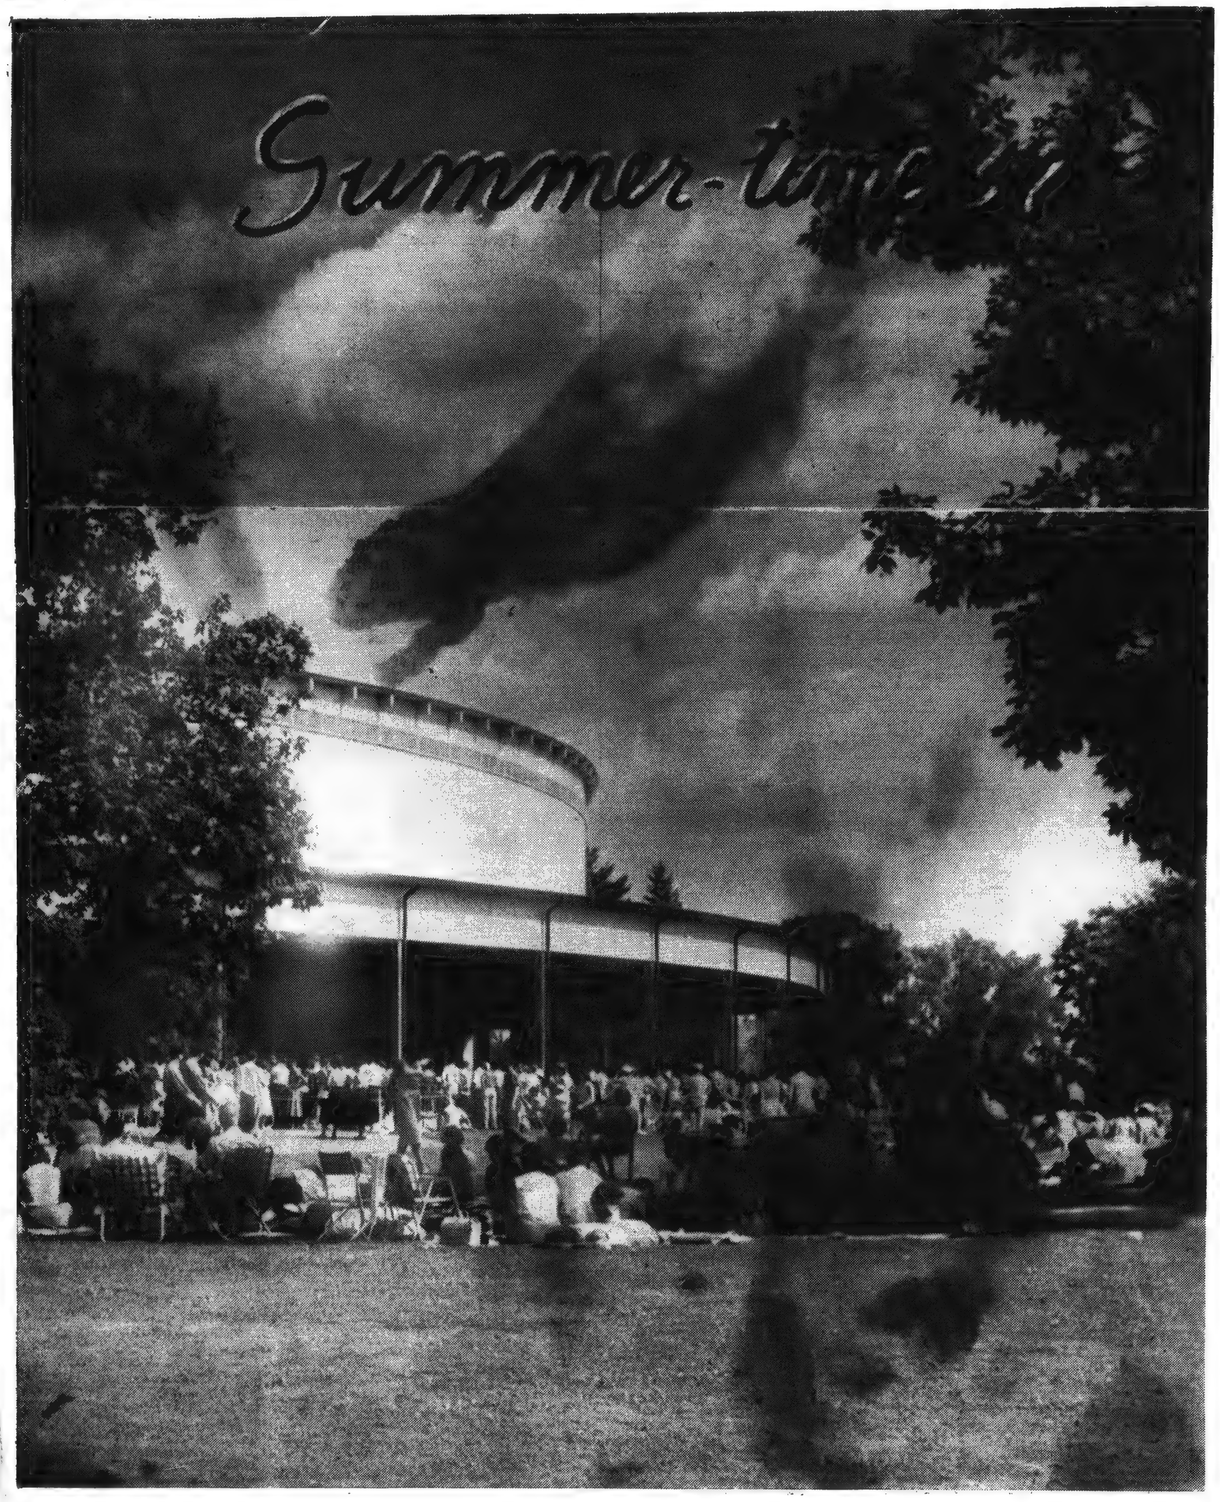
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 8 - 1957

Stockbridge Bowl Assn. Honors Contributors

Clark

Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., wife of the Boston Symphony Orchestra manager, and Miss Sara Hempel of the Boston Symphony staff, with the dedicatory bowl of the Stockbridge Bowl Assn., which is being exhibited in the Glass Reception Room at Tanglewood. The bowl has been awarded to those who have contributed to the preservation of the Stockbridge Bowl area: Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, the Rev. Arthur Phelps Stoker, George E. Judd, and Mrs. William Norton Bullard. The 200 members of the Stockbridge Bowl Assn. include residents of Stockbridge, Lenox, Lee and Pittsfield.



Free Press (m)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent Republican
Circ. 29,196

AUG 17 1957

By ELIZABETH KIRKNESS

For more than 30 years the dream of seeing a music shell in unique Battery Park has lingered in the mind of Dr. "Joe" Lechnyr, beloved Burlington musician and band director.

A shell which could be used not only for summer band concerts but also for symphony orchestras, theatrical productions, folk dancing, special speakers, choral groups—the possibilities would be almost limitless, said Dr. Lechnyr, his face lighting up.

"Even when I came to Burlington, in the early '20s, we had park bandstands—circular affairs with no top," he recalled.

"But I had played in places with shells—my home town of Cleveland, Ohio, and in El Paso, Tex., and I knew the advantages of having proper acoustics."

In an open stand, music goes up in the air or is distorted by the breeze, he explained.

"It's impossible to give a good rendition because the music goes in every direction. Even with amplifiers we don't hit the crowd."

Lechnyr thought of the Boston's Hatch Shell on the Charles River Bank, where thousands gather on summer evenings along the Esplanade to enjoy beautiful music in beautiful surroundings.

'Burlington Ideal'

"I believed then and believe now, more strongly than ever, that Burlington would be ideal for such programs if we had the shell," he affirmed.

"Musical interest has always been strong here and is growing every year.

"And where could one find a lovlier natural setting than Battery Park with the panorama of Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks?"

Lechnyr's comments on the shell were at first made incidentally in an interview on his work in community music.

Meeting responsive interest from a number of persons he warmed to the subject with the enthusiasm of a man who has sound ideas behind his idea.

"I even went so far as to get blueprints from the Conn Band Instrument people, pictures of the Hatch shell from Boston and sent copies and a letter to each alderman," he said, "trying to explain what could be done and how fine it would be.

"That was years ago, during Mayor Jackson's administration. At that time the idea didn't even get to first base."

Several fine music shells have been built in New England, in addition to the Hatch Shell in Boston.

Summer music programs under the stars at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., attract visitors from all over the country.

At New England Music Camp in Maine, where many Burlington young people have studied, hundreds of music lovers flock to Sunday concerts performed in a woodland setting.

Both places have the excellent acoustics afforded by shells.

Would Be Costly

Lechnyr has no figures as to the probable cost of such a project at the present time. It would undoubtedly be costly, he said.

But with renewed interest in waterfront improvement and in attracting people to Burlington through special programs, a way might be found if sufficient interest were developed.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 3 - 1957

Tanglewood Opera Teacher Writes Book on Costuming

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"Costuming for the Modern Stage" by Laura Zirner of the Berkshire Music Center opera department is a short, compact, ring-bound book which applies a practical touch to a highly imaginative subject.

Published by the University of Illinois Press in Urbana at three dollars a copy, the book proposes a fresh approach to theatrical costuming "as the premise for a fresh approach to theatrical production." The author has not only been on the Tanglewood staff for six years, where her husband, Ludwig Zirner, is department head, but also is on the faculty of the opera workshop of the University of Illinois. She also taught at the Institute of Design in Chicago from 1947 to 1951. By theory and by application she knows whereof she speaks.

Mrs. Zirner is concerned mainly with ventures in which inexhaustible funds are not available, and thus she speaks of matters in which thrift is essential and expenses are decidedly limited.

That she can show, within these hampering bounds, such latitude of design and such a wealth of possibilities is the mark of the book and its author. The main thesis of the book is the explanation of one of Mrs. Zirner's original projects, a convertible costume, which can be varied by the use of different materials and of color, embellished by small and inexpensive trimming details, to serve school and community theatrical groups in any drama where contemporary dress is not required.

Simple Design

Mrs. Zirner is not a visionary author but speaks from intimate knowledge of her craft. She realizes that costumes may be required to express every manner of differentiation, such as social rank, character, age, etc. The costumes she proposes are marked by simplicity, and yet there is no suggestion of meagerness in her planning.

The book is illustrated by photographs, drawings and color graphs. These latter Mrs. Zirner uses to portray what she considers one of the most important factors in her basic costume designing. This part of her subject is developed with the greatest emphasis and should interest those of us whose participation in theatrical matters is from an audience viewpoint almost as much as it will those working on the other side of the footlights.

[216]

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,192

AUG 8 - 1957

Visit Tanglewood

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie S. Smith of Park street, recently returned from a camping trip in the Berkshire Mountains. During their trip they attended a performance of at Tanglewood. Tanglewood is a the Boston Symphony Orchestra former estate, located at Lenox, and is now the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Gazzetta
del Massachusetts
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,857

AUG 9 - 1957

PATRICIA L. CAPONE A FESTIVAL MUSICALE

La signorina Patricia L. Capone, soprano, diciottenne figlia di Mr e Mrs Louis P. Capone, del 251 Lowell St., é elencata nell'Albo d'onore degli studenti che si sono distinti per speciali meriti nei loro corsi al New England Conservatory of Music.

Ella veniva invitata alla Mme. Lorna Cooke de Varon, Direttrice del Coro del detto Conservatorio di Musica, a partecipare [illegible] mana, in "Tanglewood, [illegible] Berkshire Music Festival [illegible] mantenuto dalla Boston Symphony Orchestra, sotto la direzione del maestro Charles Munch.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 2, 1957

In Brief

Now that Arthur Burdick is embarked on his biennial demonstration that this is a free country, the municipal political season can be officially declared to have started . . . Mohawk Airlines' establishment of a new record last month in the percentage of local flights completed is another bit of evidence in support of the proposition that the rainless July had its compensations . . . Yesterday's picture story on Tanglewood's Berkshire staff was a valuable reminder that the Festival is a significant economic asset for its payroll as well as for its pre-eminence as a tourist attraction and cultural landmark.

Berkshire County's deep and continuing interest in the progress of the Shadowbrook rebuilding plans was well demonstrated by the spontaneous and unexpectedly large turnout of more than 600 persons at the cornerstone-laying ceremonies Tuesday . . . Local TV fans may be a

Free Press (m)
BURLINGTON, Vt.
Independent Republican
Circ. 29,196

AUG 17 1957

By ELIZABETH KIRKNESS

For more than 30 years the dream of seeing a music shell in unique Battery Park has lingered in the mind of Dr. "Joe" Lechnyr, beloved Burlington musician and band director.

A shell which could be used not only for summer band concerts but also for symphony orchestras, theatrical productions, folk dancing, special speakers, choral groups—the possibilities would be almost limitless, said Dr. Lechnyr, his face lighting up.

"Even when I came to Burlington, in the early '20s, we had park bandstands—circular affairs with no top," he recalled.

"But I had played in places with shells—my home town of Cleveland, Ohio, and in El Paso, Tex., and I knew the advantages of having proper acoustics."

In an open stand, music goes up in the air or is distorted by the breeze, he explained.

"It's impossible to give a good rendition because the music goes in every direction. Even with amplifiers we don't hit the crowd."

Lechnyr thought of the Boston's Hatch Shell on the Charles River Bank, where thousands gather on summer evenings along the Esplanade to enjoy beautiful music in beautiful surroundings.

'Burlington Ideal'

"I believed then and believe now, more strongly than ever, that Burlington would be ideal for such programs if we had the shell," he affirmed.

"Musical interest has always been strong here and is growing every year.

"And where could one find a lovlier natural setting than Battery Park with the panorama of Lake Champlain and the Adirondacks?"

Lechnyr's comments on the shell were at first made incidentally in an interview on his work in community music.

Meeting responsive interest from a number of persons, [illegible] warmed to the subject with the [illegible] husiasm of a man who has s[illegible]d ideas behind his ideal.

"I even went so far [illegible] to get blueprints from the Co[illegible] Band Instrument people, pict[illegible]s of the Hatch shell from Bosto[illegible] and some copies and a letter to [illegible] alderman," he said, "trying [illegible] explain what could be done an[illegible]ow fine it would be.

"That was years ag[illegible] during Mayor Jackson's simi[illegible]ration. At that time the idea d[illegible]t even get to first base."

Several fine music s[illegible]lls have been built in New Engla[illegible], in addition to the Hatch She[illegible] in Boston.

Summer music progra[illegible]s under the stars at Tanglewo[illegible] Lenox, Mass., attract visitors [illegible]om all over the country.

At New England Mu[illegible]c Camp in Maine, where many Burlington young people have stu[illegible]ed, hundreds of music lovers flock to Sunday concerts perfor[illegible]ed in a woodland setting.

Both places have the excellent acoustics afforded by s[illegible]lls.

Would Be Costly

Lechnyr has no figures as to the probable cost of such a project at the present time. It would undoubtedly be costly, he said.

But with renewed interest in waterfront improvement and in attracting people to Burlington through special programs, a way might be found if sufficient interest were developed.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 3 - 1957

Tanglewood Opera Teacher Writes Book on Costuming

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"Costuming for the Modern Stage" by Laura Zirmer of the Berkshire Music Center opera department is a short, compact, ring-bound book which applies a practical touch to a highly imaginative subject.

Published by the University of Illinois Press in Urbana at three dollars a copy, the book proposes a fresh approach to theatrical costuming "as the premise for a fresh approach to theatrical production." The author has not only been on the Tanglewood staff for six years, where her husband, Ludwig Zirmer, is department head, but also is on the faculty of the opera workshop of the University of Illinois. She also taught at the Institute of Design in Chicago from 1947 to 1951. By theory and by application she knows whereof she speaks.

Mrs. Zirmer is concerned mainly with ventures in which inexhaustible funds are not available, and thus she speaks of matters in which thrift is essential and expenses are decidedly limited.

That she can show, within these hampering bounds, such latitude of design and such a wealth of possibilities is the mark of the book and its author. The main thesis of the book is the explanation of one of Mrs. Zirmer's original projects, a convertible costume, which can be varied by the use of different materials and of color, embellished by small and inexpensive trimming details, to serve school and community theatrical groups in any drama where contemporary dress is not required.

Simple Design

Mrs. Zirmer is not a visionary author but speaks from intimate knowledge of her craft. She realizes that costumes may be required to express every manner of differentiation, such as social rank, character, age, etc. The costumes she proposes are marked by simplicity, and yet there is no suggestion of meagerness in her planning.

The book is illustrated by photographs, drawings and color graphs. These latter Mrs. Zirmer uses to portray what she considers one of the most important factors in her basic costume designing. This part of her subject is developed with the greatest emphasis and should interest those of us whose participation in theatrical matters is from an audience viewpoint almost as much as it whose working on the other side of the fo[illegible]

Eagle (m)
LAWRENCE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,192

AUG 8 - 1957

Visit Tanglewood

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie S. Smith of Park street, recently returned from a camping trip in the Berkshire Mountains. During their trip they attended a performance of at Tanglewood. Tanglewood is a the Boston Symphony Orchestra former estate, located at Lenox, and is now the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Gazzetta
del Massachusetts
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,857

AUG 9 - 1957

PATRICIA L. CAPONE A FESTIVAL MUSICALE

La signorina Patricia L. Capone, soprano, diciottenne figlia di Mr. e Mrs Louis P. Capone, del 251 Bowell St., è elencata nell'Albo d'onore degli studenti che si sono distinti per speciali meriti nel loro corsi al New England Conservatory of Music. W [illegible]

Ella venivа invitata da Mme. Lorna Cooke de Varon, Direttrice del Coro del detto Co[illegible] musica, a partecipar[illegible] mana, in "Tang[illegible] rkshire Music Festi[illegible] mantenuto dalla Bosto[illegible]ony Orchestra, sotto la direzione del maestro Charles Munch.

Berkshire Eagle, Friday, Aug. 2, 1957

In Brief

Now that Arthur Burdick is embarked on the biennial demonstration that this is a free country, the municipal political season can be officially declared to have started . . . Mohawk Airlines' establishment of a new record last month in the percentage of local flights completed is another bit of evidence in support of the proposition that the rainless July had its compensations . . . Yesterday's picture story on Tanglewood's Berkshire staff was a valuable reminder that the Festival is a significant economic asset for its payroll as well as for its pre-eminence as a tourist attraction and cultural landmark.

Berkshire County's deep and continuing interest in the progress of the Shadowbrook rebuilding plans was well demonstrated by the spontaneous and unexpectedly large turnout of more than 600 persons at the cornerstone-laying ceremonies Tuesday . . . Local TV fans may be a

[216]

C2173

BOX OFFICE attendants at Tanglewood include George Bagley of Pittsfield, left, and Robert Edwards of Lenox.

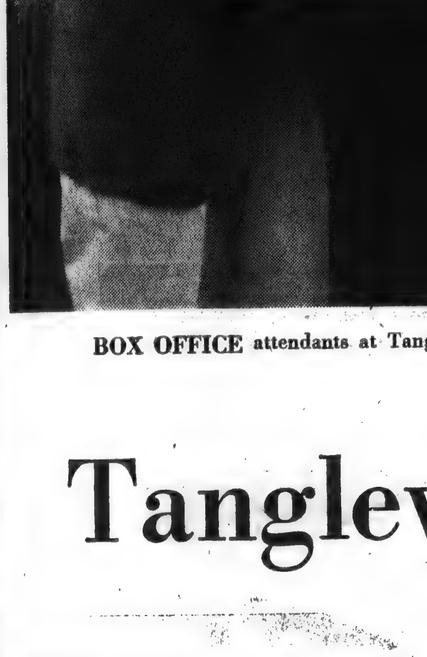
PRESS DEPARTMENT personnel includes, in foreground, Walter Howard of Tyringham and Miss May Thayer of Pittsfield.

Tanglewood's Berkshire Staff

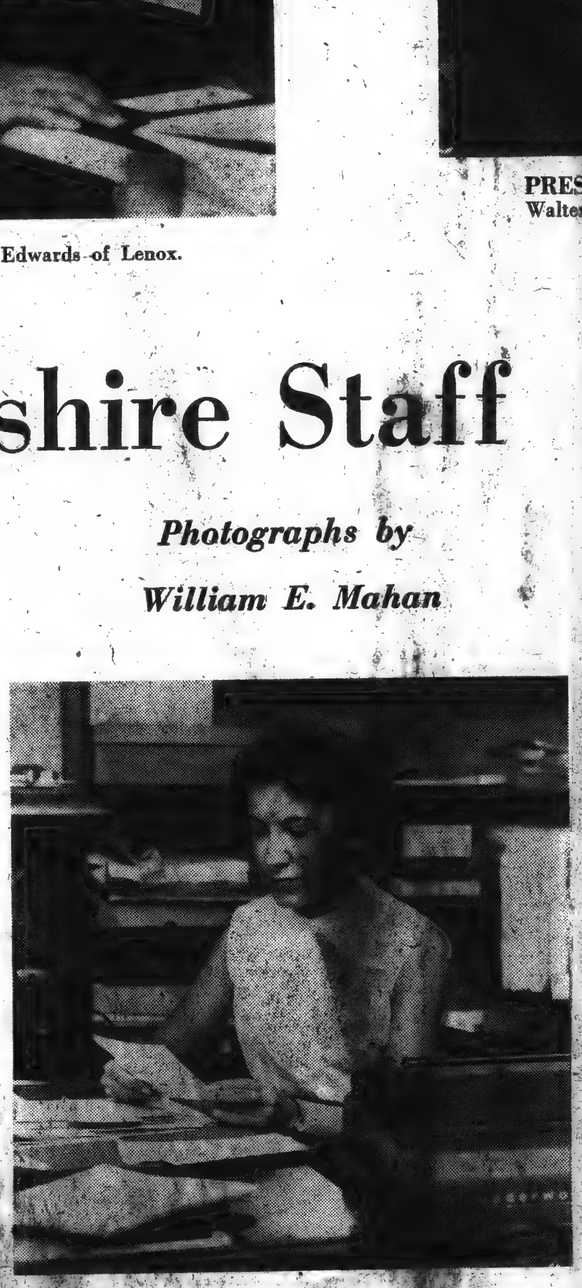
Photographs by

William E. Mahan

BACK IN THE DAYS when Tanglewood was a quiet, modest estate, known mostly for its historic connection with Nathaniel Hawthorne, comparatively few Berkshire people ever set foot on the premises. Since 1937, however, when the property was given to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan and Mrs. Gorham Brooks, county residents have played an important part in its development as a great musical center. A few members of the staff have been identified with the operation since 1934, when the Berkshire Symphonic Festival was founded by a small group of Berkshire residents, headed by Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge. Today, the staff includes 35 Berkshire people, some of whom are pictured at their jobs on this page.



SECRETARY to dean of Music Center is Mrs. Nora Dailey, Lenox.



MUSIC CENTER secretary to administrator of the school is Miss Josephine Testa, Pittsfield.

WRITING down reservations for a concert is David J. Haylon of Pittsfield, a teacher.

OPERATOR of the switchboard at Tanglewood is Robert Kanzler, a Richmond resident.

FRIENDS of the Berkshire Music Center get their information on student events from these two members of the staff, Miss Margo Miller, left, and Miss Susan Connors, both of Pittsfield, who are discussing the programs with Michael Nieland of Boston.

ASSISTANTS to Harvey Genereux, stage manager of the BSO, are Frederick Vohr Jr. of Lee, left, and Roger Clapp of Tyringham, who keep busy moving seats in the $100,000 Music Shed.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794

AUG 7 - 1957

[218]

The New England Scene

Lenox and Lee, Mass., Offer Treats in Music and Dancing

By CAL CAMERON

Although the Berkshire Hills have long been famed as an ideal summer vacation area because of their natural beauty, for many years Lenox has offered special treats for music lovers, while Lee has done the same for dance enthusiasts.

Today this draws more and more people for the Turnpike affords the opportunity to drive from the outskirts of Boston all the way to Lee without a single traffic light, cross road, sharp turn or steep hill.

The Boston Symphony's Tanglewood season is rapidly drawing to its Aug. 11 close. However, for those who enjoy jazz, the Berkshire Barn, just outside Lenox offers well known artists in that field every Sunday through Sept. 1 at 8:40 p. m.

If you are a devotee of the dance, you should make at least one trip to Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, eight miles east of Lee.

Origin Interesting

Two separate activities are carried on there. A school trains dancers, and professional talent from all over the world gives outstanding performances at the Ted Shawn Theater.

The origin of this is quite an interesting story. Twenty-five years ago Shawn decided to train an all-male group of dancers. A farm he had bought on Jacob's Ladder in the Berkshires seemed the logical place to do this.

While he was training them, a theater director, watching the sessions found them so interesting, he urged Shawn to open them to the public, giving "lecture demonstrations" to help defray expenses.

Shawn felt no one would travel eight miles over what was then a rutted mountain road to see such things. So he offered tea and sandwiches as an added inducement. With some publicity and great misgivings, the idea was launched.

There was no help at the farm, so the dancers had to turn to and prepare the sandwiches. They then doubled as parking lot attendants when the audience arrived. Still later they served the sandwiches and tea before changing into dancing togs.

Forty-five people appeared for this first performance. Each week the size of the audience increased, till the capacity of the barn they were then using was insufficient and late comers peeked in windows.

Money Raised for Theater

In 1941 the Dance Festival was incorporated and money raised to build the Ted Shawn Theater, where the first performance was given in July of the following year.

This is reputed to be the only theater in the world ever built solely for the dance. It is so constructed that the entire back wall may be removed, providing nature's own backdrop of wooded hills, if that be the setting a particular dance required.

There are afternoon and evening performances Fridays and Saturdays through August, with a few additional during the week, early in the month.

Sundays there will be talks and demonstrations of different types of dances such as the hula, religious, Spanish and Hindu by outstanding dancers.

Some people confuse the school and theater. The students are required to attend at least one performance at the theater as spectators. This is part of their education in dance technique. It is top notch professionals who perform in the theater, not students.

School and theater are entirely separate and those who come to theater performances are not normally permitted within the school grounds.

To reach this part of the Berkshires, from the south follow Route 7; from the east, the Turnpike or Route 20.

PETERSBURG, VA.
PROGRESS-INDEX
Circ. D. 17,445 - S. 17,641

JUL 17 1957

RICHARD SPONG REPORTS:

Vacation Music

The annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., is but one of many such summer activities.

Thousands of Americans begin their "musical vacations" the first week in July, which ushers in music festivals at Cincinnati; Lenox, Mass.; Ipswich, Mass., and elsewhere. And not to be outdone by their long-haired cousins, jazz aficionados will set sedate Newport, R. I., rocking in the annual four-day hot-music festival beginning July 4.

These al fresco concerts are getting to be the central events around which many vacations are planned. More than 80 festivals of music are held during the summer months, and that doesn't take into account the municipal outdoor concerts.

Attendance at the annual Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., has grown from 15,000 to more than 136,000 since its first season in 1936. The six-week program, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra in weekend performances, extends through Aug. 11.

And when the main show closes at Tanglewood this year, the hot men will take over on Aug. 12 for the first session of the School of Jazz at the Berkshire Music Barn, adjacent to Tanglewood. Lecturing will be such jazz stars as Duke Ellington, Wilbur de Paris, and Lennie Tristano.

The king of the jazz summer festivals, though, is the one at Newport. This year more than 125 instrumentalists and singers will perform in the seven concerts. Louis Armstrong, who will be playing at Newport on his birthday, July 4, then moves on to Lewisohn Stadium, New York City, where Satchmo's fans are whomping up a belated birthday celebration, to climax what they're calling "Satchmo Festival Week."

Over in Interlochen, Mich., the National Music Camp is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year in a season running from June 23 to Aug. 18. The camp is an outgrowth of a National High School Orchestra assembled in 1927 to play for a School Superintendents' convention in Dallas, Texas.

Over the years its permanent Michigan home has spread over 700 acres, embracing two lakes. The camp now has buildings and equipment valued at $2 million. More than 1200 students will attend this year, forming seven orchestras, five bands and 12 choruses.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 10 1957

More Summer People Than Ever

Berkshire Hills Bustling With City Folk, But Emphasis Is On Country-Style Ways

By A STAFF REPORTER

Lenox, Aug. 9—From a dandelion dell in the Berkshires one day last week rose the citified clatter of too many people reaching for the aspirin.

Cluttered Byway

These harried folk were Manager Jule Foster and his 35 helpers at the Music Barn, barely a good millstone's throw south of Tanglewood. The honeysuckled byway leading to the barn was suddenly a clutter of fins and fumes. Lowslung cars richocheted in over a highslung country lane. At the entrance to the barn itself, only a frail white picket storm barrier, erected more for decor than defense, held off a full siege by matinee-goers who had seen sturdier gates than these crashed.

More than 2000 vacationers were jostling for position in the tiny, 960-seat Music Barn to hear a group of folk singers, the Weavers. Manager Foster, a slim 25-year-old Texan, who teaches [illegible] Tech in the winter, recalls the afternoon with something akin to a cringe.

"It was shattering, absolutely shattering. I've never been through anything like that before. They were ready to knock me down to get in here. We've got to expand next year, that's all there is to it."

Foster's cry echoed in varying degrees all over Berkshire Coun-

See BERKSHIRE HILLS
Page Nine

hillsides, the Berkshires may take the summer play away from Cape Cod.

Berkshire County is a mere two hours drive from the heart of New York City. The opening in May of the Massachusetts Turnpike has brought the Berkshires within 130 straight-arrow, six-lane miles of Greater Boston and even closer to Worcester and Springfield.

In fact, business is so good, men like John Downing already have started some calculated worrying, lest the Berkshire boom boomerang. They know only too well the secret of the region's lure for harassed city people: city-slick culture served up country style.

Culture entertainment in the Berkshires already is slick [illegible] it country style.

The almost ultra-picturesque Music Barn, only three years old, offers a blue-ribbon lineup of advance-guard and traditional jazz artists, big names like Dave Brubeck, Ella Fitzgerald, Gerry Mulligan, Ethel Waters, Lionel Hampton, Woody Herman and Duke Ellington. The Barn is bidding fair to overshadow Newport, R. I.'s highly-touted and also brand new jazz festival.

School for Dancers

Also in Lenox, Tanglewood, in its 24th season, offers the Berkshire Music Festival, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other aristocrats of American music in concerts al fresco. In the tiny town of Becket, Ted Shawn, the combination Ted Williams and Ted Mack of American ballet, is presenting his 25th season of choeography in a country jewel box, Jacob's Pillow, plus a school for young dancers.

On Great Barrington's Lake Buel, meanwhile, amateur talent mogul Ted Mack has started a summer camp for young, would-be popular music and dance performers. His campers have played to big crowds in outdoor shows at the camp every Wednesday night for the past five weeks. Other talent camps are Beaupre (music and art) in Lenox and Indian Hill Music Workshop in Stockbridge.

Two major cultural attractions have grown up in Williamstown over the past three years. One is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, with a startlingly good collection of French impressionists, including 33 Renoirs. The other, the Williamstown Summer Theater, already vying with Stockbridge's 26-year-old perennial, the Berkshire Playhouse, in summer-svelt, 14-carat-cast renditions of Broadway hits.

But Berkshire business men are the first to tell you that not all the Ted Shawns, Dave Brubecks, Renoirs and Boston Symphonies in the world will keep tourists streaming over the Berkshires' Indian-file highways, once the country charm itself is spoiled.

Same Old Assets

The greatest asset of the Berkshires today is the same mountain air, mountain greenery, low humidity and low pressure living that made the Berkshires such a popular summer grazing place for the Astors, Roosevelts, Webbs, Goelets, Harrimans, Pulitzers, Colliers, Sargents, Saltonstalls, Amorys and Biddles in the late 19th century.

Lush to the point of plush, the Berkshire greenery is everyman's Hollywood concept of an American countryside. If anything, the splitrail fences are almost too preciously warped; the clapboard houses in trim, prim Stockbridge, pure white with more permaplex than old-fashioned rural purity.

But withal, Berkshire towns have changed remarkably little for the past 70 years. The county population in 1880 was about 74,000. It is only 130,000 today, even with two giant electrical plants, General Electric in Pittsfield and Sprague in North Adams.

So far, the towns have held up well under the heavier and heavier influx of summer people. Tourist tradesmen like John Downing of the Berkshire Hills Conference have taken a slight croquet-malleting from the older, socially elite Berkshire townspeople who object to so many city folk stripped down to Bermuda shorts for a summer of haute culture in the highlands.

"But when I tell them that tourism is our second biggest industry (the electrical plants are number one)," says Downing, "our people are generally only too willing to try to make the summers here a success for everybody."

For one thing, Downing and his Berkshire Hills Conference are watch and warders as well as tub thumpers. This summer, more than ever, they have kept a jittery, dollarwise eye on their priceless countryside. In one campaign, they co-operate with state conservation authorities to keep Dutch elm disease and other natural blights out of the Berkshires' rolling greeneries. In another, they fight off money grubs along the roadside.

Homely Histories

They fear the Tanglewood-Jacob's Pillow cultural atmosphere, which pervades the Berkshires like a pine scent, will vanish like last night's attar of roses once the honkytonks, hot dog and souvenir shops move in.

At present, almost all of the county's big attractions have quaint, almost homely histories to back them up and belie the big business history they are making today.

The Music Barn, for example, is located on the old Whately estate. Stephanie and Phil Barber, who own the Barn, had operated the Whately cottage as the Music Inn, for years an adjunct to Tanglewood. About five years ago, Stephanie and Phil began playing jazz and folk music records in the Music Inn lounge as Sunday evening entertainment for the inn's culture-minded guests.

Three years ago, when the sessions outgrew the Music Inn lounge, Stephanie and Phil took jazz down the slope to the stone barn. Into its 1830-rage decor of French provincial style shingled gables, its ramble of stables and granaries, they brought live jazz, only the best.

Many Music Barn patrons this summer have come from a resort in South Egremont, the Jug End Barn. The Jug End Barn has a cracker barrel (with teakwood staves) history of its own and illustrates even more perfectly what is happening in the Berkshires.

ADRIAN, MICH.
TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 15,600

JUL 26 1957

The Music Season

The winter months long have been accepted as the official "concert season." But summer vacation music has increased in popularity by leaps and bounds in recent years. The summer programs not only attract audiences. They attract artists as well.

The Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., features the Boston Symphony Orchestra in week end performances for six weeks. The first program attracted about 15,000 in 1936. Now the attendance is more than 136,000. The long hair artists by no means have the field to themselves. The Newport, Rhode Island, jazz festival has made headlines in recent years with Louis Armstrong and all the rest having their day in the sun. This year some 125 jazz instrumentalists and singers were heard in seven concerts.

Michigan has its famous National Music Camp at Interlochen. The 700 acre camp and site now are valued at $2 million. More than 1,200 music students will attend the camp this year. They will make the woods ring and resound with music from seven orchestras, five bands and 12 choruses. Parents and music lovers from miles around will journey to Interlochen for the concerts. And this camp and project has grown in spite of the efforts of Mr. James C. Petrillo, the music union czar, to clip its wings.

Numerous Adrian musicians attend the Interlochen camp, and have attended it in the past. It is an outgrowth of a national high school orchestra assembled in 1927 to play for a school superintendent's convention in Dallas, Texas. A group of Adrian high school musicians also made the trip to Dallas to play in that orchestra under the direction of the late Miss Juva Highee who later taught in the University School of Music in Ann Arbor.

The growth of music in the life of the nation can be found in many places: in summer concert programs at municipal parks, in successful community concert programs during the winter, in the interest shown in high school and college music circles and of course over the air waves. There's no telling where it will end. It may even produce an American Beethoven if we continue to play and sing at the present tempo.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794

AUG 7 - 1957

[21F]

The New England Scene

Lenox and Lee, Mass., Offer Treats in Music and Dancing

By CAL CAMERON

Although the Berkshire Hills have long been famed as an ideal summer vacation area because of their natural beauty, for many years Lenox has offered special treats for music lovers, while Lee has done the same for dance enthusiasts.

Today this draws more and more people for the Turnpike affords the opportunity to drive from the outskirts of Boston all the way to Lee without a single traffic light, cross road, sharp turn or steep hill.

The Boston Symphony's Tanglewood season is rapidly drawing to its Aug. 11 close. However, for those who enjoy jazz, the Berkshire Barn, just outside Lenox offers well known artists in that field every Sunday through Sept. 1 at 8:40 p. m.

If you are a devotee of the dance, you should make at least one trip to Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, eight miles east of Lee.

Origin Interesting

Two separate activities are carried on there. A school trains dancers, and professional talent from all over the world gives outstanding performances at the Ted Shawn Theater.

The origin of this is quite an interesting story. Twenty-five years ago Shawn decided to train an all-male group of dancers. A farm he had bought on Jacob's Ladder in the Berkshires seemed the logical place to do this.

While he was training them, a theater director, watching the sessions found them so interesting, he urged Shawn to open them to the public, giving "lecture demonstrations" to help defray expenses.

Shawn felt no one would travel eight miles over what was then a rutted mountain road to see such things. So he offered tea and sandwiches as an added inducement. With some publicity and great misgivings, the idea was launched.

There was no help at the farm, so the dancers had to turn to and prepare the sandwiches. They then doubled as parking lot attendants when the audience arrived. Still later they served the sandwiches and tea before changing into dancing togs.

Forty-five people appeared for this first performance. Each week the size of the audience increased, till the capacity of the barn they were then using was insufficient and late comers peeked in windows.

Money Raised for Theater

In 1941 the Dance Festival was incorporated and money raised to build the Ted Shawn Theater, where the first performance was given in July of the following year.

This is reputed to be the only theater in the world ever built solely for the dance. It is so constructed that the entire back wall may be removed, providing nature's own backdrop of wooded hills, if that be the setting a particular dance required.

There are afternoon and evening performances Fridays and Saturdays through August, with a few additional during the week, early in the month.

Sundays there will be talks and demonstrations of different types of dances such as the hula, religious, Spanish and Hindu by outstanding dancers.

Some people confuse the school and theater. The students are required to attend at least one performance at the theater as spectators. This is part of their education in dance technique. It is top notch professionals who perform in the theater, not students.

School and theater are entirely separate and those who come to theater performances are not normally permitted within the school grounds.

To reach this part of the Berkshires, from the south follow Route 7; from the east, the Turnpike or Route 20.

PETERSBURG, VA.
PROGRESS-INDEX
Circ. D. 17,445 - S. 17,641

JUL 17 1957

RICHARD SPONG REPORTS:

Vacation Music

The annual Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Mass., is but one of many such summer activities.

Thousands of Americans begin their "musical vacations" the first week in July, which ushers in music festivals at Cincinnati; Lenox, Mass.; Ipswich, Mass., and elsewhere. And not to be outdone by their long-haired cousins, jazz aficionados will set sedate Newport, R. I., rocking in the annual four-day hot-music festival beginning July 4.

These al fresco concerts are getting to be the central events around which many vacations are planned. More than 80 festivals of music are held during the summer months, and that doesn't take into account the municipal outdoor concerts.

Attendance at the annual Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., has grown from 15,000 to more than 136,000 since its first season in 1936. The six-week program, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra in weekend performances, extends through Aug. 11.

And when the main show closes at Tanglewood this year, the hot men will take over on Aug. 12 for the first session of the School of Jazz at the Berkshire Music Barn, adjacent to Tanglewood. Lecturing will be such jazz stars as Duke Ellington, Wilbur de Paris, and Leonie Tristano.

The king of the jazz summer festivals, though, is the one at Newport. This year more than 125 instrumentalists and singers will perform in the seven concerts. Louis Armstrong, who will be playing at Newport on his birthday, July 4, then moves on to Lewisohn Stadium, New York City, where Satchmo's fans are whomping up a delayed birthday celebration, to climax what they're calling "Satchmo Festival Week."

Out in Interlochen, Mich., the National Music Camp is celebrating its 30th anniversary this year in a season running from June 23 to Aug. 18. The camp is an outgrowth of a National High School Orchestra assembled in 1927 to play for a School Superintendents' convention in Dallas, Texas.

Over the years its permanent Michigan home has spread over 700 acres, embracing two lakes. The camp now has buildings and equipment valued at $2 million. More than 1200 students will attend this year, forming seven orchestras, five bands and 12 choruses.

Union
SPRINGFIE
Repu
Circ

KELLEY'S LOBSTER
Holyoke, Mass. Appleton and Race Sts. Tel.
OPEN SHRIMP PRIME RIBS OF BEER AU JUS
PRIME SIRLOIN STEAK SANDWICH
PRIME SIRLOIN STEAK WITH FRESH Mushro

Berk... Dining

Continued From Pa...

ty this week. From Pittsfield, John Downing, executive secretary of the Berkshire Hills Conference (a chamber of commerce for the Berkshire tourist business), announced the heady results of a survey he has just completed. Business in the Berkshires jumped a bustling, full-bin 20 per cent in July over the same period last season.

Shift to West

So many people from New York and every metropolitan center in Massachusetts are shifting for the summer from the seaside to these Western Massachusetts hillsides, the Berkshires may take the summer play away from Cape Cod.

Berkshire County is a mere two hours drive from the heart of New York City. The opening in May of the Massachusetts Turnpike has brought the Berkshires within 130 straight-arrow, six-lane miles of Greater Boston and even closer to Worcester and Springfield.

In fact, business is so good, men like John Downing already have started some calculated worrying, lest the Berkshire boom boomerang. They know only too well the secret of the region's lure for harassed city people: city-slick culture served up country style.

Culture entertainment in the Berkshires already is slick ... The problem is to keep it country style.

The almost ultra-picturesque Music Barn, only three years old, offers a blue-ribbon lineup of advance-guard and traditional jazz artists, big names like Dave Brubeck, Ella Fitzgerald, Gerry Mulligan, Ethel Waters, Lionel Hampton, Woody Herman and Duke Ellington. The Barn is bidding fair to overshadow Newport, R. I.'s highly-touted and also brand new jazz festival.

School for Dancers

Also in Lenox, Tanglewood, in its 24th season, offers the Berkshire Music Festival, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other aristocrats of American music in concerts al fresco. In the tiny town of Becket, Ted Shawn, the combination Ted Williams and Ted Mack of American ballet, is presenting his 25th season of choeography in a country jewel box, Jacob's Pillow, plus a school for young dancers.

On Great Barrington's Lake Buel, meanwhile, amateur talent mogul Ted Mack has started a summer camp for young, would-be popular music and dance performers. His campers have played to big crowds in outdoor shows at the camp every Wednesday night for the past five weeks. Other talent camps are Beaupre (music and art) in Lenox and Indian Hill Music Workshop in Stockbridge.

Two major cultural attractions have grown up in Williamstown over the past three years. One is the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute, with a startlingly good collection of French impressionists, including 33 Renoirs. The other, the Williamstown Summer Theater, already vying with Stockbridge's 26-year-old perennial, the Berkshire Playhouse, in summer-svelt, 14-carat-cast renditions of Broadway hits.

But Berkshire business men are the first to tell you that not all the Ted Shawns, Dave Brubecks, Renoirs and Boston Symphonies in the world will keep tourists streaming over the Berkshires' Indian-file highways, once the country charm itself is spoiled.

Same Old Assets

The greatest asset of the Berkshires today is the same mountain air, mountain greenery, low humidity and low pressure living that made the Berkshires such a popular summer grazing place for the Astors, Roosevelts, Webbs, Goelets, Harrimans, Pulitzers, Colliers, Sargents, Saltonstalls, Amorys and Biddles in the late 19th century.

Lush to the point of plush, the Berkshire greenery is everyman's Hollywood concept of an American countryside. If anything, the splitrail fences are almost too preciously warped; the clapboard houses in trim, prim Stockbridge, pure white with more permaplex than old-fashioned rural purity.

But withal, Berkshire towns have changed remarkably little for the past 70 years. The county population in 1880 was about 74,000. It is only 130,000 today, even with two giant electrical plants, General Electric in Pittsfield and Sprague in North Adams.

So far, the towns have held up well under the heavier and heavier influx of summer people. Tourist tradesmen like John Downing of the Berkshire Hills Conference have taken a slight croquet-malleting from the older, socially elite Berkshire townspeople who object to so many city folk stripped down to Bermuda shorts for a summer of haute culture in the highlands.

"But when I tell them that tourism is our second biggest industry (the electrical plants are number one)," says Downing, "our people are generally only too willing to try to make the summers here a success for everybody."

For one thing, Downing and his Berkshire Hills Conference are watch and warders as well as tub thumpers. This summer, more than ever, they have kept a jittery, dollarwise eye on their priceless countryside. In one campaign, they co-operate with state conservation authorities to keep Dutch elm disease and other natural blights out of the Berkshires' rolling greeneries. In another, they fight off money grubs along the roadside.

Homely Histories

They fear the Tanglewood-Jacob's Pillow cultural atmosphere, which pervades the Berkshires like a pine scent, will vanish like last night's attar of roses once the honkytonks, hot-dog-puppy and souvenir shops move in.

At present, almost all of the county's big attractions have quaint, almost homely histories to back them up and belie the big business history they are making today.

The Music Barn, for example, is located on the old Whately estate. Stephanie and Phil Barber, who own the Barn, had operated the Whately cottage as the Music Inn, for years an adjunct to Tanglewood. About five years ago, Stephanie and Phil began playing jazz and folk music records in the Music Inn lounge as Sunday evening entertainment for the inn's culture-minded guests.

Three years ago, when the sessions outgrew the Music Inn lounge, Stephanie and Phil took jazz down the slope to the stone barn. Into its 1890-rage decor of French provincial style shingled gables, its ramble of stables and granaries, they brought live jazz, by the best.

Many Music Barn patrons this summer have come from a resort in South Egremont, the Jug End Barn. The Jug End Barn has a cracker barrel (with teakwood staves) history of its own and illustrates even more perfectly what is happening in the Berkshires.

...th City Folk, ...ry-Style Ways

...lung ... teaches ... Tech in
...rance ... the winter, recalls the afternoon
...fran... with something akin to a cringe.
...rrier, "It was shattering, absolutely
...n de- shattering. I've never been
...ge by through anything like that before.
...l seen They were ready to knock me these down to get in here. We've got to expand next year, that's all there is to it."

...ationers ... Foster's cry echoed in varying ...n in the degrees all over Berkshire Coun-
...to hear ...
...ers, the ...oster, a
...an, who

See BERKSHIRE HILLS
Page Nine

ADRIAN, MICH.
TELEGRAM
Circ. D. 15,600

JUL 26 1957

The Music Season

The winter months long have been accepted as the official "concert season." But summer vacation music has increased in popularity by leaps and bounds in recent years. The summer programs not only attract audiences. They attract artists as well.

The Tanglewood Festival at Lenox, Mass., features the Boston Symphony Orchestra in week end performances for six weeks. The first program attracted about 15,000 in 1936. Now the attendance is more than 136,000. The long hair artists by no means have the field to themselves. The Newport, Rhode Island, jazz festival has made headlines in recent years with Louis Armstrong and all the rest having their day in the sun. This year some 125 jazz instrumentalists and singers were heard in seven concerts.

Michigan has its famous National Music Camp at Interlochen. The 700 acre camp and site now are valued at $2 million. More than 1,200 music students will attend the camp this year. They will make the woods ring and resound with music from seven orchestras, five bands and 12 choruses. Parents and music lovers from miles around will journey to Interlochen for the concerts. And this camp and project has grown in spite of the efforts of Mr. James C. Petrillo, the music union czar, to clip its wings.

Numerous Adrian musicians attend the Interlochen camp, and have attended it in the past. It is an outgrowth of a national high school orchestra assembled in 1927 to play for a school superintendent's convention in Dallas, Texas. A group of Adrian high school musicians also made the trip to Dallas to play in that orchestra under the direction of the late Miss Juva Higbee who later taught in the University School of Music in Ann Arbor.

The growth of music in the [illegible] tion can be found in many places, [illegible] mer concert programs at municipal parks, in successful community concert programs during the winter, in the interest shown in high school and college music circles and of course over the air waves. There's no telling where it will end. It may even produce an American Beethoven or two. One thing is certain, it will continue to play and sing on the present high pitch.

England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931

UG 15 1957

Soaking Up

By Martha Cliffo...

...ll this cloud-seeding and rain-m...
...waste of time, if you ask me.
...make it rain is for me to plan ...
...doorsy, like washing my car or ...
...going to Tanglewood.

Be Sporting

Tanglewood, as every New En...
...musical event that comes in t...
...door forms. You can buy an ...
...t entitles you to both a chair ar...
...concert, but this is not really ...

This is what I had planned to ... rained.

Apparently one should also ...
...ber boots and umbrellas a...
...o tents, if available. This is ...
...d this is probably the main ...
It did not rain immediately, ...
...til hordes of us sporting ...
ready spread out our blanke...
...om shelter, and then it raine...
The more experienced Tangl...
...raftily brought slickers and ...
...ut their foul-weather gear and ...
...had no choice but to bundle ...
...viches and thermos jug and lun...
...blanket and sprint for The She...

I was not alone; there were l...
...apparently as improvident as I ...
...fied men wearing lunch boxes ...
...dignified ladies paddling in ba...
were all kinds of people wea...
...milling around eating their lu...

The smug people out on th...
...ing under their tents and u...
...each other that maybe it wil...
...it over with, but it did not. It ...

Once the concert began it ...
...the acoustics are not too goo...
...tarpaulin, because one by ...
...folded up their gear and slunk ...

The Tanglewood people mad...
...us would-be lawn-sprawlers, ...
...men with official badges kept ...
...forth clearing aisles and telling ...
...and camp stools that they w...
...them up.

This was too bad, because ...
...not thought to bring a camp st...
...clear that music sounds less ...
...standing up than it does wh...
...down.

Off-Beat Raindrops

I tried to remedy this by sit...
...jug for a while. However, my ...
...occupied entirely by the hip po...
...in Bermuda shorts; on my left ...
...stole dangled at just the right ...
...in the nose; on my right was a...
...umbrella which dripped comple...
...the music, and right behind ...
...who kept tapping his foot a...

The worried-looking me...
...could not seem to decide ...
...qualified as a chair and shoul...
...but I finally had to give it up ...
...By that time the standing roo...

BALTIMORE,
SUN (Sunda...
Circ. S. 321,7...
AUG 11 19...

Visito...

PITTSFIE...

YOU don't have to ...
Guernsey from a l... to enjoy going nativ...
Berkshires.

Even those travel... came here especially ...
attractions at the ...
Symphony Orchestra ...
shire Festival at Tan... or Ted Shawn's Jac... low Dance Festival ... the strictly local c...
just as entertaining.

Many repeat sum...
tors to the Berkshires ...
ing it is a lot of fun ...
part in the affairs pu...

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931

AUG 15 1957

Soaking Up Music At Tanglewood

By Martha Clifford

All this cloud-seeding and rain-making and stuff is a waste of time, if you ask me. The surest way to make it rain is for me to plan to do something outdoorsy, like washing my car or going swimming or going to Tanglewood.

Be Sporting

Tanglewood, as every New Englander knows, is a musical event that comes in both indoor and outdoor forms. You can buy an indoorsy ticket that entitles you to both a chair and a roof during the concert, but this is not really sporting.

The sporting way to go to Tanglewood is to pack up sandwiches and goodies and thermos jugs and folding chairs and blankets, and go camp on the lawns outside The Music Shed, soaking up song and sunshine.

This is what I had planned to do, and this is why it rained.

Apparently one should also pack raincoats and rubber boots and umbrellas and tarpaulins and pup tents, if available. This is what I did not do, and this is probably the main reason it rained.

It did not rain immediately, of course. It waited until hordes of us sporting music-listeners had already spread out our blankets and goodies far from shelter, and then it rained like mad.

The more experienced Tanglewooders, who had craftily brought slickers and pup tents, broke out their foul-weather gear and smugly stayed put. I had no choice but to bundle up my soggy sandwiches and thermos jug and lunch bag in my soggy blanket and sprint for The Shed.

I was not alone; there were lots of soggy people apparently as improvident as I. There were dignified men wearing lunch boxes for hats; there were dignified ladies paddling in barefooted, and there were all kinds of people wearing tarpaulins and milling around eating their lunches standing up.

The smug people out on the lawn kept cowering under their tents and umbrellas and telling each other that maybe it will rain hard and get it over with, but it did not. It just rained hard.

Once the concert began it became apparent that the acoustics are not too good inside a rained-on tarpaulin, because one by one the lawn-sitters folded up their gear and slunk into The Shed.

The Tanglewood people made standing room for us would-be lawn-sprawlers, but worried-looking men with official badges kept prowling back and forth clearing aisles and telling people with chairs and camp stools that they would have to fold them up.

This was too bad, because even though I had not thought to bring a camp stool, it soon became clear that music sounds less good when you are standing up than it does when you are sitting down.

Off-Beat Raindrops

I tried to remedy this by sitting on my thermos jug for a while. However, my field of vision was occupied entirely by the hip pocket of a large man in Bermuda shorts; on my left was a lady whose stole dangled at just the right height to swat me in the nose; on my right was a young man with an umbrella which dripped completely out of time with the music, and right behind me was a connoisseur who kept tapping his foot against my thermos jug.

The worried-looking men with official badges could not seem to decide whether my thermos qualified as a chair and should be folded up or not, but I finally had to give it up and stand up anyway. By that time the standing room was so thoroughly occupied that I could rest my arches now and then by surreptitiously leaning into the crowd.

The remarkable thing is that in spite of all this the music still sounded very good, and at the end everybody jumped onto the benches and chairs and bravoed the orchestra.

Except me. I jumped up on my thermos jug and fell off before I could even yell bravo once.

Immediately after the last curtain call the rain stopped and the sun came out, but it was too late—Tanglewood had already had the best rain it's gotten all summer, thanks to me, no doubt.

I must admit, though, that Tanglewood's music is worth standing in the rain to hear. I'm going back again next week end, and I'm warning you, don't plan any picnics or anything.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA.
ADVERTISER
Circ. D. 21,969

JUL 17 1957

MISCELLANY—talk

Honor Trai

By Catherine Bliss Enslow

Jean Thomas, the Traipsin' Woman who is the founder of the American Folk Song Festival, will leave Ashland, Ky., July 30 for Denver, Colo., to attend the opening of the play "The Traipsin' Woman" written by Dan Totheroh, playwright, who attended the festival here several years ago.

"The Traipsin' Woman" is a heartwarming folk drama with music involving an indomitable woman of the hills to be played by Beulah Bondi, motion picture, stage and TV actress. This renowned character actress was also a visitor here a few years ago for the festival in Ashland.

The play will be presented at the University theatre of the University of Denver during the seventh annual Terrace Theatre Festival, August 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Dan Totheroh, playwright, novelist, screen writer, director and actor is one of the outstanding theatre men of our times. Guthrie McClintock, husband of Katherine Cornell, produced one of Dan's plays "Distant Drums," with Beulah Bondi in it and several other plays written by Dan. At 30 Dan Totheroh was named one of American's 10 leading playwrights.

Jean will visit in Phoenix, Ariz., with Golda Mathie, sculptress formerly of Akron, O., widely known here. Mrs. Mathie recently completed a bronze of the late Marion Kirby and Beulah Bondi.

After her visit in Denver and Phoenix, Jean will go to Hollywood and will be a guest at the home of the late Miss Kirby who was a close friend. Living there is Hado Langworthy Jackson, a former Huntingtonian.

—o—

Dr. Walter H. Perl of the Marshall faculty just told me about an ideal spot for a nice vacation in a beautiful place with artistic events for lovers of music, theatre and dance, which is about 150 miles north of New York in the Berkshires in the little town of Lee, Mass.

It is only about four miles south of Lenox the Tanglewood, the heart of the Americans summer music life, where every year the respected Boston Symphony orchestra under Charles Munch plays six weeks of unforgettable music.

Nearby is Jacob's Pillow, Ted Shawn's famous dance-school, also called, the University of the Dance, which had its silver-anniversary this year. At this occasion even Shawn, age 66 and his Wife Ruth St. Denis, 78, will be on the stage and dance.

Dr. Perl attended the opening week in both places, heard a magnificent Bach - cycle at Tanglewood with all Brandenburg - concerti, several Bach-suites and as climax the performance of the St. Matthews Passion at the great Tanglewood shed, with Adele Addison, Donald Gramm, Frances Kopleff and John McCullum as soloists, an unforgettable impression.

At Jacob's Pillow Maria Talchief and Andre Eglewsky danced marvellous Pas de Deux, Tom Tom Arrows brought exciting American Indian dances and Bruce McClure delighted the audience with fine Scottish Highland and Sword dances. The following week brought 8 solo dancers from the Danish ballet.

Tanglewood is playing until August 11, Jacob's Pillow has shows until September 1st. Numerous summer theatres as Stockbridge, Malden, Williamstown are in the neighborhood and make a trip to the Berkshires a most delightful summer event, nicely blending nature, a pleasantly cool and dry summer climate with marvellous art and music events.

Lovers of the seashore can easily cross Massachusetts in a few hours on the new exciting Turnpike and go to cool breezy Cape Cod with its many colorful resorts. One can also take a very pleasant boat - ride from Boston over to Province town in about 3 hours on the Boston Belle; the nice excursion boat.

— o —

PARENTS' MAGAZINE
NEW YORK, N. Y.

JUL 1957

MASSACHUSETTS

Lenox

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood takes place July 3 through August 11 and features the Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch. Pierre Monteux and Carl Schuricht will be guest conductors. Prices for three concerts in any one of the Music Shed series range from $6 to $15. A series is held each weekend on Friday and Saturday eves. at 8:30 and Sun. at 2:30 P.M. Subscription for three Chamber Orchestra Concerts in the Theatre-Concert Hall is $10 or $12. Single admission, $4 or $5. Subscription for six Wed. eve. Chamber Music Concerts in the Hall is $8 or $10. Single admission, $2 or $3. For lodgings for more than one night write to the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield 26, Mass., or call Pittsfield 2-7437. Write to the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., for further information.

July 5-7—All-B

July 12-14—Al tre.

July 19-21—To ith Isaac Stern, Shed.

July 26-28—Berlioz, Shed.

MT. VERNON, N. Y.
ARGUS
Circ. D. 17,580
JUL 23 1957

C219

Many New Expressways Opening For Travelers

Some people go to Broadway openings or collect new postage stamps for kicks. Others—a lot more—like to be among the first to travel on the USA's ever-increasing number of fabulous new highways.

The National Association of Travel Organizations says this is an especially good Summer for Americans to auto-adventure on brand new roads.

Massachusetts, for instance, has a spanking new turnpike extending from Boston's suburbs to the New York state line. It's expected a lot of proper Bostonians this year will get a sudden urge to visit the Berkshires. This may not be so much because of the attraction of the Berkshire Music Festival—desirable as that may be—as to keep from being left out of the conversation when Massachusetts' new toll-road is compared with the thruways of neighbor states.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078. Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Advertiser
PITTSFIELD, Maine
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,453
AUG 29 1957

Vacation High[illegible]s

Throughout New England there are hundreds of beautiful places that are "musts" for everyone to see. Of these we have picked out only one in each state, an area that has been tried by thousands of delighted vacationers over a number of years and has fully lived up to their expectations.

Picturesque Piscataquis County in the north central part of Maine is better known as the "county of lakes." It's the home of the largest lake in Maine and one of the loveliest in the state — Moosehead Lake. The Moosehead Lake region rates as one of Maine's most popular hunting, fishing and vacation areas. Forty miles long and twenty miles wide, the lake has several large islands, many bays and inlets, and is fed by scores of streams and lesser lakes. Hemmed in by rugged mountains and forests the lake is perfect for sailing and fishing. Every year it draws thousands of vacationers who love the great outdoors. Around the shores of Moosehead Lake, dozens of hotels and camps provide excellent accommodations of every kind.

047

High, cool and delightful to the eye, New Hampshire's White Mountains offer scenery and vacation facilities hard to beat anywhere in the Northeast. Throughout the mountain area there are countless wonders for the visitor to discover — Alpine flowers, the Flume, Lost River, Glacial Park, and the famous mountain Notches (Franconia, Kinsman, Crawford, Dixville, Oliverian, Pinkham, Evens and Bear). And of course, there is the unsurpassed beauty of the mountains themselves, headed by Mt. Washington. There is a variety of things to do in the way of outdoor sports and activities, and there are special attractions for the younger set—Santa's Village in Jefferson, the wild-life menagerie at Crawford Notch State Park, Story Land at Glen, and many others. The accommodations are very good, making the mountain region of New Hampshire ideal for a happy vacation.

The natural beauty of the Vermont countryside needs little advertising in New England. In fact, it was difficult to select any one region as being the most outstanding — Lake Champlain is beautiful, so is Lake Willoughby and so are many others. Therefore, in Vermont we have chosen an area for you to see which is unusual and interesting rather than just scenic. It is Barre, "The Granite Center of the World" in the hill country of north central Vermont. The granite quarries and the new plant of the Rock of Ages Corporation outside of Barre as well as the many plants in the city are worth visiting. The interesting operations in the quarries attract tourists from all over the country.

(continued on page 8)

The wooded, gracious Berkshire hills in western Massachusetts are both a playground as well as a cultural center during the summer season. The area has over 73,000 acres of beautiful state forests, 13 rivers, 69 lakes, 23 camping sites and 14 golf courses, so that opportunities for outdoor activities of every kind are limitless. Massachusetts' highest mountain, Mt. Greylock, is in this part of the state, as well as scenic Mohawk Trail. During July and August, music lovers can enjoy the finest, presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in their summer camping grounds in Tanglewood. The best in art, dancing and drama are within easy reach. And true New England hospitality greets every visitor in every pleasant inn, guest house and motel in the Berkshires.

BALTIMORE, MD.
SUN (Sunday)
Circ. S. 321,709
AUG 11 1957

Visitors Go Native

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

YOU don't have to know a Guernsey from a Hereford to enjoy going native in the Berkshires.

Even those travelers who came here especially for such attractions at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood or Ted Shawn's Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival find that the strictly local culture is just as entertaining.

Many repeat summer visitors to the Berkshires are finding it is a lot of fun to take part in the affairs put on by local social and civic organizations.

For example, Hose Company No. 1 (there's only one in the town) of Stockbridge for years has been attracting many tourists to its annual ball. This year it will be held August 23. For those who have never attended a volunteer fire company's annual fling, this is not an event to be lightly turned aside as lacking in culture.

And, more than one happy woman visitor has found the answer to her Christmas shopping problems in the various hand-made articles on sale.

REDUCTION

RATIO

18x

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

A5

A4

A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178
AUG 4 1957

Berkshire Valley Nourishes the Arts

By ORMONDE PLATER

IN the mountains that separate New York State from Massachusetts lies a long, high valley. It stretches 35 miles from Williamstown in the north to Lee in the south. This thin ribbon, as green as English countryside, is alive with the arts.

The Berkshire region, virtually snowbound in winter, in summer turns into one of this country's most spirited centers of music, drama, art and the dance. Financed largely through the patronage of summer residents, who came there in the first place because of the valley's beauty, the cultural events, by their merit, have renewed and even increased the summer influx.

America's chief summer music event, the Berkshire Festival, moved into the valley in 1936 when the late Mrs. Andrew Hepburn and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan gave their 210-acre estate, Tanglewood, near Lenox, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Begun while the late Sedge Koussevitsky was conductor of the orchestra, the festival emerged as a major musical event. Charles Munch, the present conductor, plans and directs the six-week season.

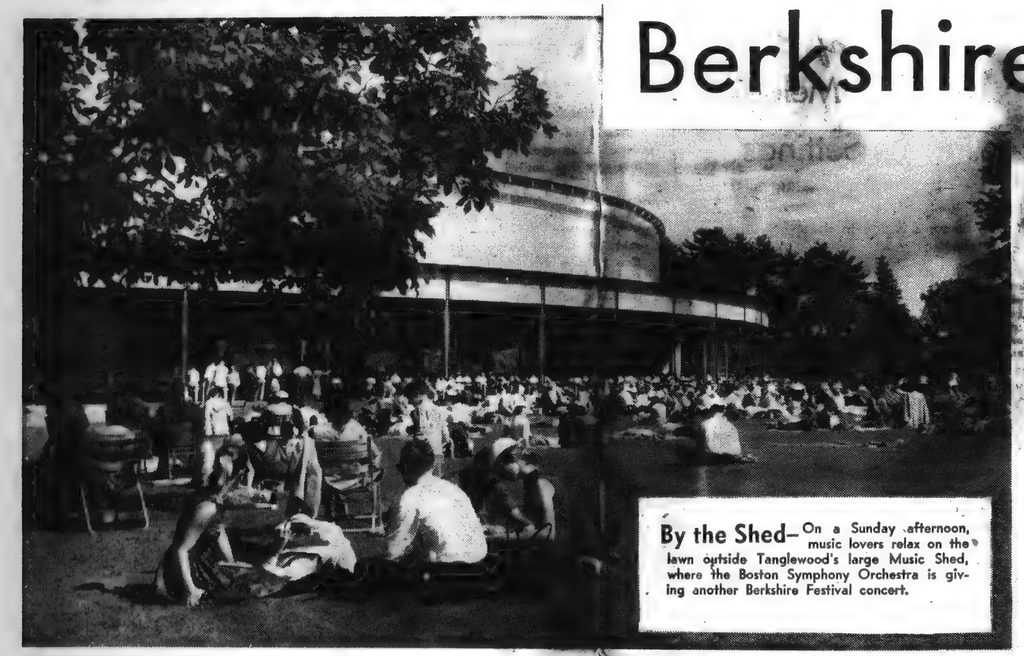
If the Berkshire Festival is the leading musical event in the country, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, a few miles east of Lee, holds the same place for the dance. Ted Shawn founded the festival just 25 years ago this coming Tuesday, and its summer programs include leading classical, modern and ethnic dancers from throughout the world.

If your taste runs to chamber music, there is the South Mountain Temple, on a mountaintop outside of Pittsfield, where small ensembles play on Saturday afternoons.

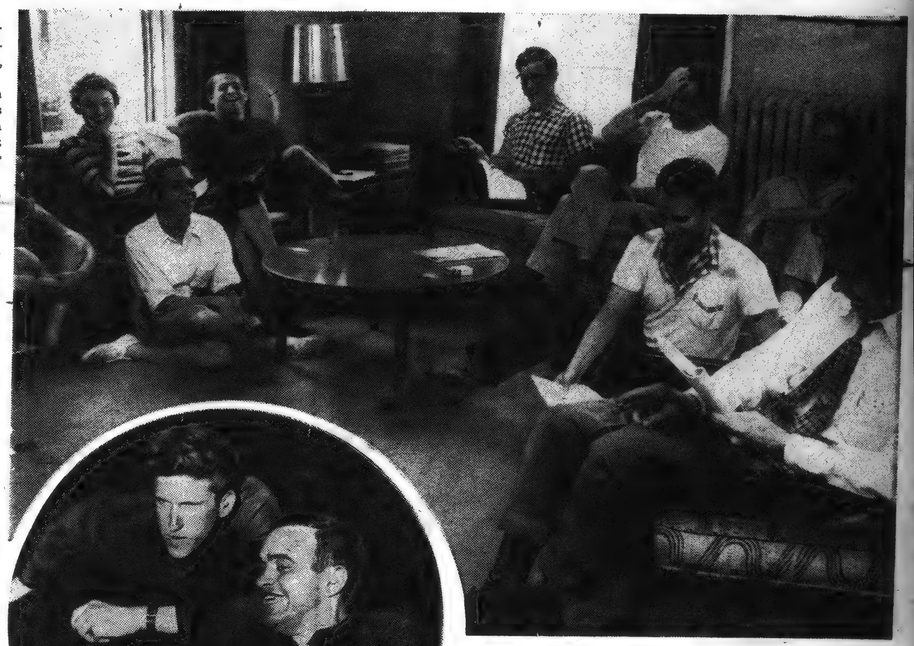
And if you are a jazz fiend, there is the Berkshire Music Barn, where top jazz and folk music artists make merry. Sunday night is jazz night.

Two summer theaters furnish drama in the valley. One is at Williamstown, and the other — the Berkshire Playhouse—is at Stockbridge, in the southern end.

There are painters and sculptors all over, but most of all around Lenox. The Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield provides exhibition space for local artists, and the Clark Art Institute in Williamstown has a fine collection of the masters, Renoir in particular. In Stockbridge, Daniel Carter French, who made the statue of Lincoln for the Lincoln Memorial, has a studio open to the public.



By the Shed— On a Sunday afternoon, music lovers relax on the lawn outside Tanglewood's large Music Shed, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra is giving another Berkshire Festival concert.



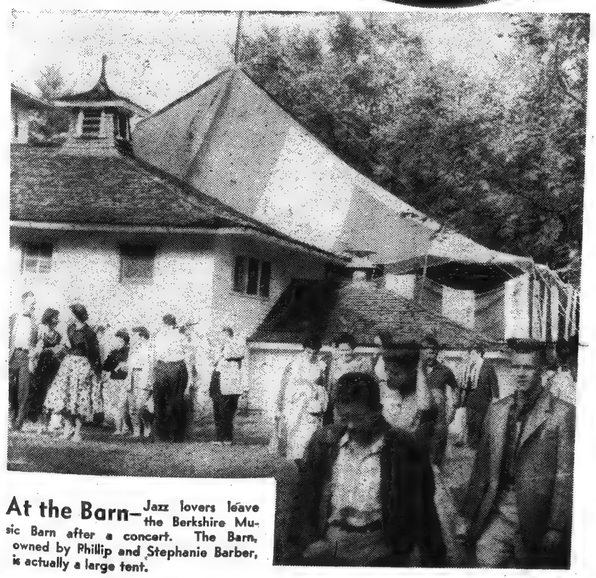
Play Rehearsal— Getting ready for their next play, actors at the Williamstown Summer Theater settle down in a rehearsal room to read their lines. The theater started an apprentice school this summer for fledging actors.

Conversation— Nikos Psacharapoulos, managing director of the Williamstown Summer Theater, and Converse M. Converse, his assistant, sit in the orchestra to watch a stage rehearsal and make changes in the play.

Students— Berkshire Festival is not only for the listeners. It also conducts a summer school in opera, orchestra, chorus and composition. Here, some members of the student orchestra practice for their weekly concert.

Oom-pah— A tuba goes oom-pah while a study group gives an outdoor concert at the annual Tanglewood on Parade, a day of music for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the school section of the festival. This summer's Tanglewood on Parade will be held Thursday.

Tanglewood Outing— A group of women bring picnic lunches and settle down to an afternoon of listening at the Berkshire Festival. Tanglewood is a favorite spot for [illegible] and the parking lot is filled with cars from throughout the country.



At the Barn— Jazz lovers leave the Berkshire Music Barn after a concert. The Barn, owned by Phillip and Stephanie Barber, is actually a large tent.

Young Singer— An attentive audience listens as a young, untried singer named Barbara Lee makes an appearance on the Music Barn stage. Among others there this summer have been Duke Ellington, Dave Brubeck and Ella Fitzgerald.

REDUCTION RATIO 14x

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm

A3

A4

A5

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

2.0 mm

2.5 mm

1.0

1.1

1.25

1.4

1.6

1.8

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century

A&P

1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

[220]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. [illegible]
AUG 4 1957

Berkshire Valley

By ORMONDE PLATER

IN the mountains that separate New York State from Massachusetts lies a long, high valley. It stretches 35 miles from Williamstown in the north to Lee in the south. This thin ribbon, as green as English countryside, is alive with the arts.

The Berkshire region, virtually snowbound in winter, in summer turns into one of this country's most spirited centers of music, drama, art and the dance. Financed largely through the patronage of summer residents, who came there in the first place because of the valley's beauty, the cultural events, by their merit, have renewed and even increased the summer influx.

Amrica's chief summer music event, the Berskshire Festival, moved into the valley in 1936 when the late Mrs. Andrew Hepburn and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan gave their 210-acre estate, Tanglewood, near Lenox, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Begun while the late Sedge Koussevitsky was conductor of the orchestra, the festival emerged as a major musical event. Charles Munch, the present conductor, plans and directs the six-week season.

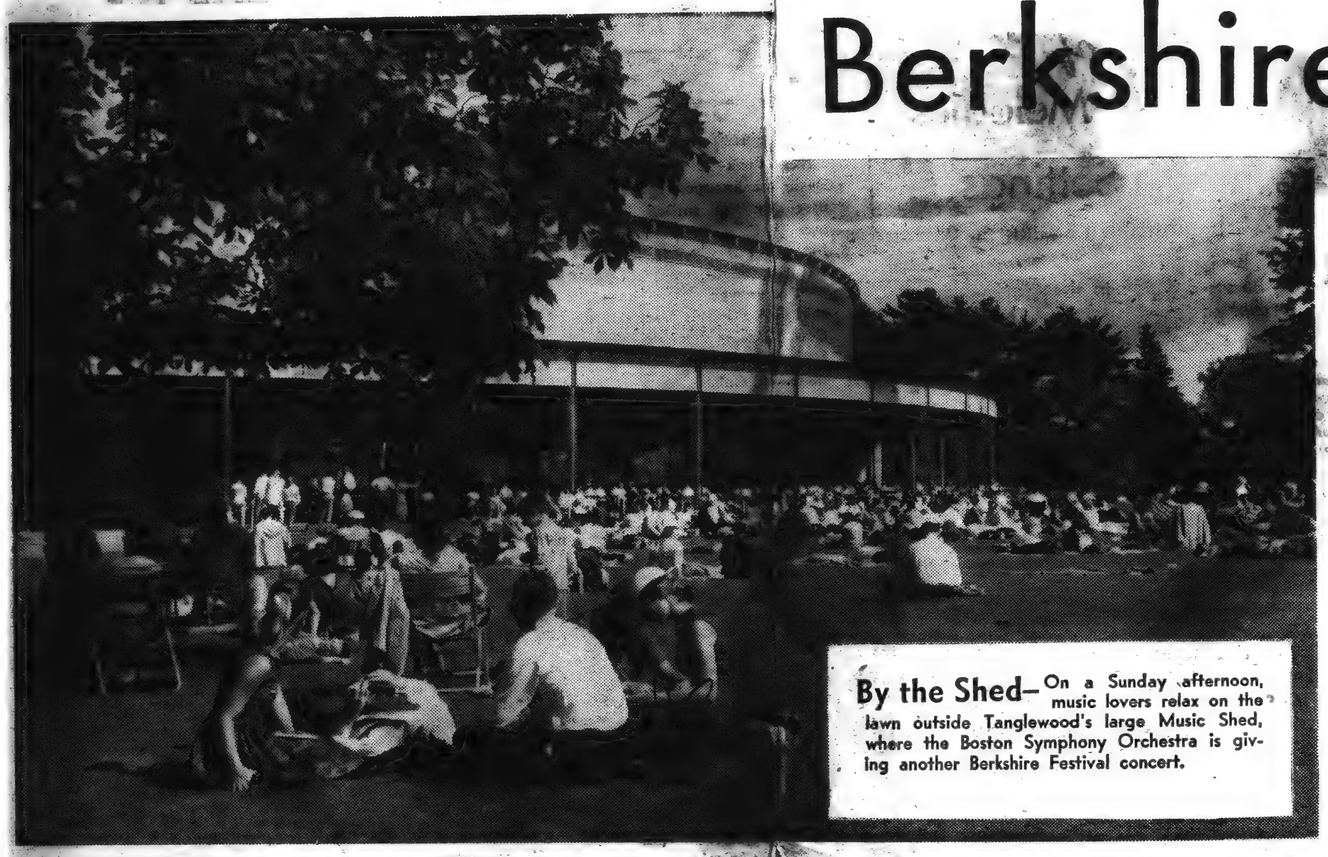
If the Berkshire Festival is the leading musical event in the country, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, a few miles east of Lee, holds the same place for the dance. Ted Shawn founded the festival just 25 years ago this coming Tuesday, and its summer programs include leading classical, modern and ethnic dancers from throughout the world.

If your taste runs to chamber music, there is the South Mountain Temple, on a mountaintop outside of Pittsfield, where small ensembles play on Saturday afternoons.

And if you are a jazz fiend, there is the Berkshire Music Barn, where top jazz and folk music artists make merry. Sunday night is jazz night.

Two summer theaters furnish drama in the valley. One is at Williamstown, and the other — the Berkshire Playhouse—is at Stockbridge, in the southern end.

There are painters and sculptors all over, but most of all around Lenox. The Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield provides exhibition space for local artists, and the Clark Art Institute in Williamstown has a fine collection of the masters, Renoir in particular. In Stockbridge, Daniel Carter French, who made the statue of Lincoln for the Lincoln Memorial, has a studio open to the public.



By the Shed— On a Sunday afternoon, music lovers relax on the lawn outside Tanglewood's large Music Shed, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra is giving another Berkshire Festival concert.

Students— Berkshire Festival is not only for the listeners. It also conducts a summer school in opera, orchestra, chorus and composition. Here, some members of the student orchestra practice for their weekly concert.

Oom-pah— A tuba goes oom-pah while a study group gives an outdoor concert at the annual Tanglewood on Parade, a day of music for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the school section of the festival. This summer's Tanglewood on Parade will be held Thursday.

Tanglewood Outing— A group of fans bring picnic lunches and settle down for an afternoon of listening at the Berkshire Festival. Tanglewood is a favorite spot for [illegible] and the parking lot is filled with cars from throughout the country.

At the Barn— Jazz lovers l[illegible] the Berkshire [illegible]sic Barn after a concert. The B[illegible] owned by Phillip and Stephanie Bar[illegible] is actually a large tent.

Berkshire Valley Nourishes the Arts

By ORMONDE PLATER

IN the mountains that separate New York State from Massachusetts lies a long, high valley. It stretches 35 miles from Williamstown in the north to Lee in the south. This thin ribbon, as green as English countryside, is alive with the arts.

The Berkshire region, virtually snowbound in winter, in summer turns into one of this country's most spirited centers of music, drama, art and the dance. Financed largely through the patronage of summer residents, who came there in the first place because of the valley's beauty, the cultural events, by their merit, have renewed and even increased the summer influx.

America's chief summer music event, the Berkshire Festival, moved into the valley in 1936 when the late Mrs. Andrew Hepburn and Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan gave their 210-acre estate, Tanglewood, near Lenox, to the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Begun while the late Sedge Koussevitsky was conductor of the orchestra, the festival emerged as a major musical event. Charles Munch, the present conductor, plans and directs the six-week season.

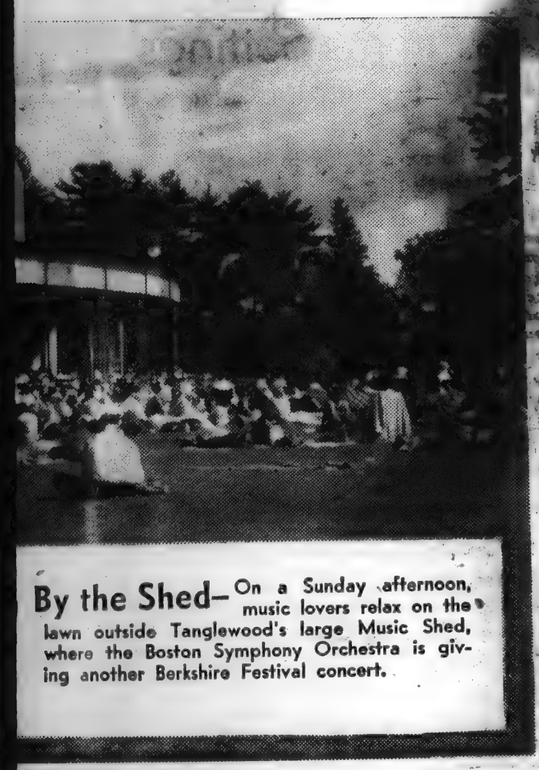
If the Berkshire Festival is the leading musical event in the country, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, a few miles east of Lee, holds the same place for the dance. Ted Shawn founded the festival just 25 years ago this coming Tuesday, and its summer programs include leading classical, modern and ethnic dancers from throughout the world.

If your taste runs to chamber music, there is the South Mountain Temple, on a mountaintop outside of Pittsfield, where small ensembles play on Saturday afternoons.

And if you are a jazz fiend, there is the Berkshire Music Barn, where top jazz and folk music artists make merry. Sunday night is jazz night.

Two summer theaters furnish drama in the valley. One is at Williamstown, and the other — the Berkshire Playhouse—is at Stockbridge, in the southern end.

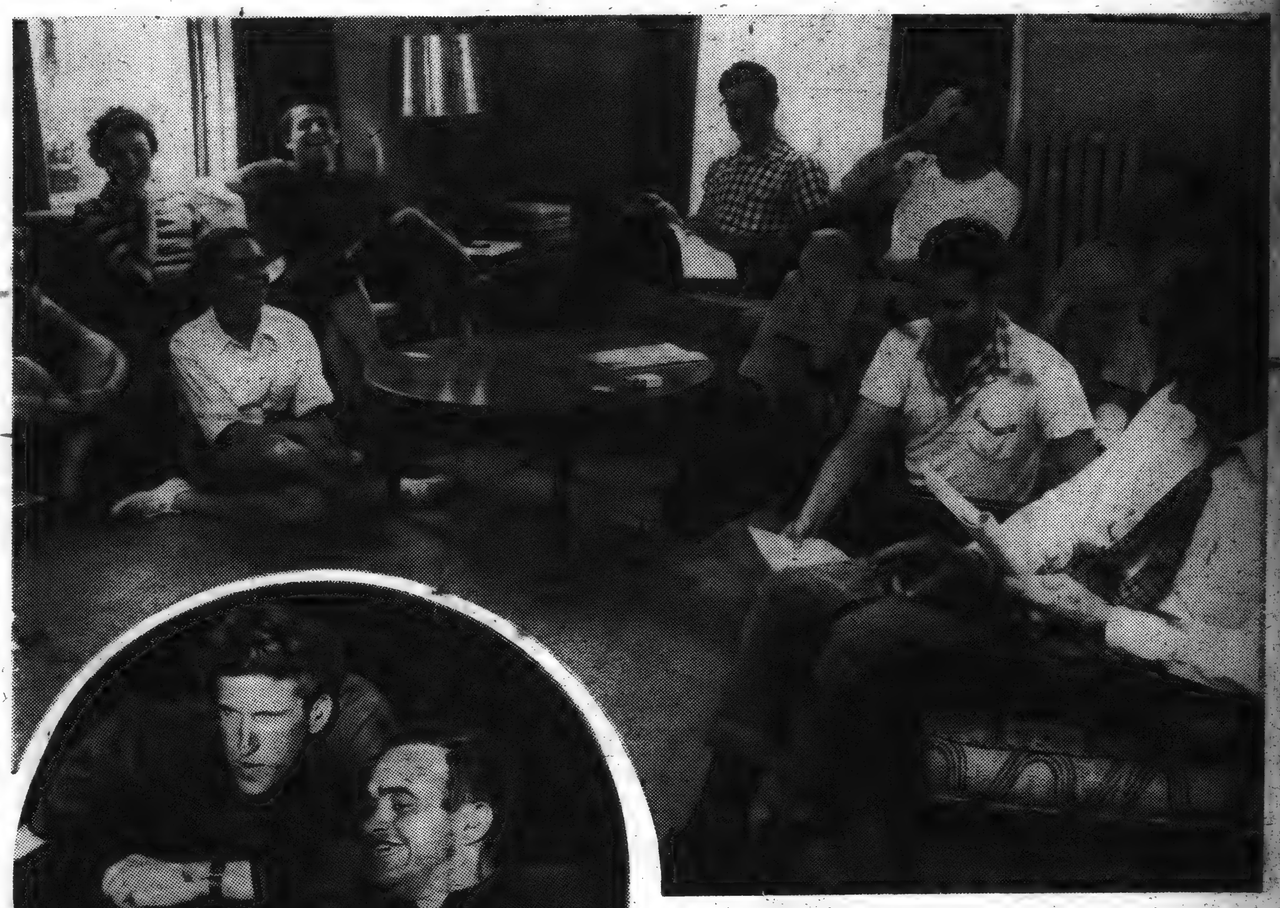
There are painters and sculptors all over, but most of all around Lenox. The Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield provides exhibition space for local artists, and the Clark Art Institute in Williamstown has a fine collection of the masters, Renoir in particular. In Stockbridge, Daniel Carter French, who made the statue of Lincoln for the Lincoln Memorial, has a studio open to the public.



By the Shed— On a Sunday afternoon, music lovers relax on the lawn outside Tanglewood's large Music Shed, where the Boston Symphony Orchestra is giving another Berkshire Festival concert.

Oom-pah— A tuba goes oom-pah while a study group gives an outdoor concert at the annual Tanglewood on Parade, a day of music for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, the school section of the festival. This summer's Tanglewood on Parade will be held Thursday.

Tanglewood Outing— A group of [illegible] bring picnic lunches and settle down to an afternoon of listening at the Berkshire Festival. Tanglewood is a favorite spot for [illegible] and the parking lot is filled with cars from throughout the country.



Play Rehearsal— Getting ready for their next play, actors at the Williamstown Summer Theater settle down in a rehearsal room to read their lines. The theater started an apprentice school this summer for fledging actors.

Conversation— Nikos Psacharapoulos, managing director of the Williamstown Summer Theater, and Converse M. Converse, his assistant, sit in the orchestra to watch a stage rehearsal and make changes in the play.

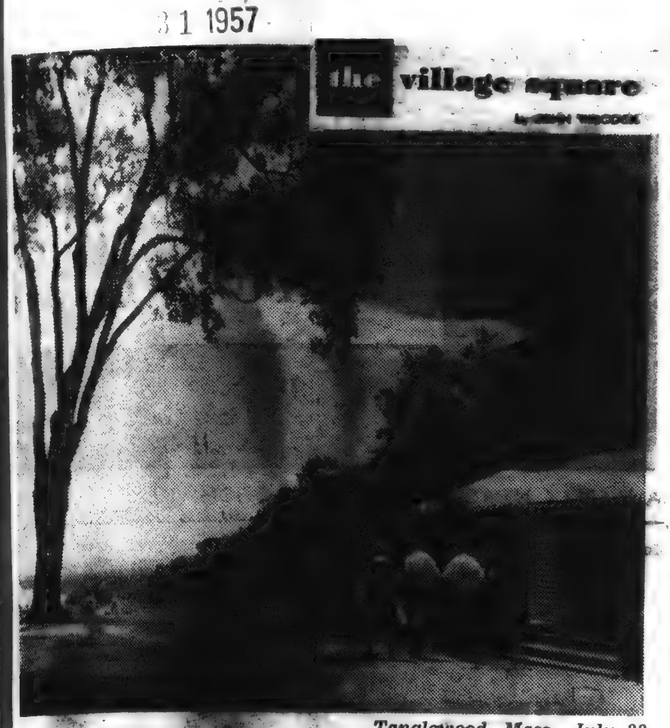
At the Barn— Jazz lovers leave the Berkshire Music Barn after a concert. The Barn, owned by Phillip and Stephanie Barber, is actually a large tent.

Young Singer— An attentive audience listens as a young, untried singer named Barbara Lee makes an appearance on the Music Barn stage. Among others there this summer have been Duke Ellington, Dave Brubeck and Ella Fitzgerald.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
VILLAGE VOICE
W.

3 1 1957

the village square



Tanglewood, Mass., July 28

A noisy airliner roared overhead during the performance of some Berlioz last night, and conductor Charles Munch promptly halted the orchestra until the spluttering intruder had passed by. It wouldn't happen in New York, even with such a reverent attitude toward the music. Too many airliners.

Apart from this minor interruption, last night's concert went off without a visible hitch. Concerts at Tanglewood have been apt to be for 20 summers. I can't imagine more pleasant conditions under which to listen to music than this: lying comfortably on blankets under the stars, with a faint breeze rustling through the trees and canned beer at one's elbow.

They are the sort of conditions, in fact, that sometimes bring up to 20,000 visitors here on a week-end, and with such support you would imagine that the Boston Symphony Orchestra would be one of the few able to break even on a year-round operation.

It doesn't, though. Like most symphony orchestras, the Boston's degree of public-spiritedness is far beyond its means, and an excellent (money-losing) music school coupled with the massive operations of the symphony itself keep it consistently in the red. Ironically, the popularity of the open-air concerts in the orchestra's summer home contribute to the deficit, but ocials philosophically shrug it off with the consoling thought that it does at least keep the musicians working for more of the year than an otherwise possible.

The people who attend these concerts somehow seem to have a commoner bond than love of music. The only way I can describe it is to say that they seem like representatives of an "in-group" from the four neighboring states. Intelligent, alert, and, mainly, young, they are of a type I would unhesitatingly seek out in any corner of the world I happened to find myself. (But they wouldn't be found dead in the places that you and I dislike).

Among the few interlopers that had crept in were a couple of cigar-smoking refugees from the clubroom of some local racetrack, along with their middle-aged, bejewelled wives. To prove they were squares, they'd brought folding chairs.

As most of you undoubtedly know, there are many fringe activities taking place near here during the summer, among them being ballet at Jacob's Pillow and jazz at the Berkshire Music Barn. A well-planned week-end therefore can offer a great deal of variety in what the travel agents like to call "relaxed surroundings."

My own relaxation has extended to airing a tent and cooking meals over an outdoor grill at adjoining October Mountain state park, and although I'm getting a little old for Boy Scout activities (I'll be 30 next Sunday), it does same money.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 119,412

AUG 7 1957

AROUND TOWN:

Enjoy 'The 3 B's' At Tanglewood Site

By EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

We are continually surprised by having people say to us: "I have never been to Tanglewood," implying that they have set up a defense mechanism against the "Three Bs," Bach, Beethoven and Brahms. We confess, that some of the modern composers leave us, not only baffled but cold when the Boston Symphony Orchestra or any other major organization sneaks in one of the dissonant works as a kind of guinea pig for future generations. The youngsters eat up this new music, but the box-holders, the "Proper Bostonians" are conspicuous by their absence.

IN BACKYARD

Here, virtually in our back yard, is the finest musical festival in the world, which brings music lovers to the Berkshires from every state in the Union, Canada and Mexico each July and August, and has been doing it, yearly, for 20 years. It all began on the old Hanna Farm, with members of the N. Y. Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by the late Henry Hadley, through the ministrations of the late Serge Koussevitzky, to its highest point of perfection under Charles Munch. The original audiences of some 1,800 persons have grown to the understandable Sunday afternoon masses of some 14,000 if the weather is propitious 6,000 in the shed and 8,000 on the beautiful lawns outside. The most heartening thing about the Tanglewood Music Festival is the great number of young people, armed with scores, blankets and raincoats, who defy the elements, much the same as Beethoven is pictured in many of his symphonies.

However, the management of the festival, cognizant of the fact that there are "squares" and "pounds" among the public who only need exposition to the best music—Walter Damrosch once truly said: "Popular music is merely familiar music"—have arranged a pageant of music which they call: "Tanglewood on Parade," an all-out music gala, from 6 to 11 P. M. tomorrow, rain or shine.

WIDE VARIETY

At that time, one can hear the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch; the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler (and his inimitable encores); the Festival Chorus, directed by Aaron Copland; grand and light opera, with something taking place continuously in the Theatre-Concert Hall, the Big Shed and on the steps of the Administration Building. As a special attraction, Odgen Nash, master of humorous verse, will read his owned rhymed commentaries of the various bi and quadrupeds in the Saint-Saens delightful tone painting: "The Carnival of the Animals," with the Pops.

DOVER, N. J.
LAKE LAND NEWS
Circ. W. 6,726

JUL 25 1957

Music Makers

By HAROLD T. PLARTEY

News And Views About Music And The People Who Make It

Tanglewood Tales

Want to spend a pleasant vacation weekend? Ask a silly question and get, in this case, an intelligent answer. Pack your weekend case and head for Lenox, Mass., in the Berkshire Hills. Here in the murmering pines and hemlocks is a 210-acre tract of land known as "Tanglewood" which was laid out by William Aspinwall Tappan in 1849. Nathaniel Hawthorne lived at Tanglewood in 1851-53 and here he planned his "Tanglewood Tales" and wrote "The Wonder Book" and assembled the material for "The House of Seven Gables."

In the winter of 1936 the estate of "Tanglewood" was presented to the Boston Symphony Orchestra by Mrs. Gorham Brooks and her aunt, Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan. The Berkshire Music Festival had started in the summer of 1934, so the gift to the organization started things on the way to where we find them today.

The Music Shed, inaugurated Aug. 4, 1938, seats 6,000. Shaped like a huge piece of pie, the shed is open all around. The orchestra shell is acoustically perfect so that the slightest pianissimo carries to the farthest seat, and even out across the vast lawn in front of the shell.

Symphony Under The Stars

It is here that hundreds of people stretch out on blankets or sit in their own folding chairs and listen to the symphony under the stars.

We attended an all Mozart concert on a Saturday night. A large yellow moon hung in the sky behind the shed like a tremendous cheddar cheese. Six thousand people were so deathly quiet while Charles Munch directed The Boston Symphony Orchestra that you could hear a toad noisely hopping across the grass.

The festival runs from July 1 to Aug. 11, so get going. Cross the George Washington Bridge and head for the Merritt Parkway. Exit at function of Rt. 7 and follow through to Danbury, Conn., and all the way up to Lenox on 7. The Toconic Parkway is an alternate route that will take you through some of New York's scenic mountains to the Berkshires in Mass.

The Curtis Hotel seems to be the big operation in Lenox or there are a great many Motels and tourist homes. This year, or next, plan a trip to Lenox.

Connecticut
Western News
NORTH CANAAN,
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 2,604

SEP 26 1957

irst festival.

Music At Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Berkshire Festival grew from a local project for outdoor concerts in Lenox, Massachusetts, first undertaken in 1934 by the citizens of Berkshire County. At first an orchestra from the New York Philharmonic Symphoney Society was engaged and two years later the entire Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky was imported from Boston, with a shell for the musicians and hired tent for the audience.

In 1938 the present Music Shed, shown on the calendar page, was erected. The shed seats 6,000 and by virtue of the open sides and back, permits good hearing on the lawns outside for the thousands more. The annual attendance during the six-week period through July and early August exceeds 150,000.

In 1940 the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood was established and holds its annual session with the Festival. The school was the realization of the lifelong ambition of Serge Koussevitzky to bring into being a center of the arts where talented young people, especially musicians on the thresholds of their careers, could meet with the best of professional musicians, work with them, broaden themselves as artists, and develop their insight as interpreters.

Charles Munch, the Conductor of the Boston Symphony, after the death of Dr. Koussevitzky, became the Director of the Festival and the Berkshire Music Center in 1951.

Maplewood-S. Orange, N. J.
NEWS-RECORD
Circ. W. 5,282

AUG 22 1957

Music Notes

By Gertrude H. Hale

A humorous New York columnist claims that "the biggest, most diverse and concentrated culture klatch in the nation is in New England!

"Barn doors open on box offices, also barns where we expect to be placed herds to locate, are now filled with actors, musicians, ballet dancers, writers, painters etc.

"In the beautiful Berkshire hills, there is something for everyone, from the long hair to the crew cut."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has just concluded its 8-week season in the Berkshire Shed, or Barn, with nearly 15,000 paying customers. This Berkshire Music Center, connected with the Boston Symphony's season, was a great exhibition of Serge Koussevitsky, the orchestra's late conductor. Its program this summer has been devoted to the 3 B's — Beethoven, Bach, Brahms—music which seems to be loved in these poetic hills. The Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund has aided more than 5000 musicians.

The above-mentioned columnist speaks of another trio of Bs that looms almost as large. 'In order of importance they are Blankets, Beer and Baskets; also instead of paying good money for seats into the Tanglewood Music Shed, which seats 6000, she could have had seats for $2.00. and thereby acquires squatter rights to the acres of tree shaded lawns that surround the Shed."

Shed listeners sit on proper seats as decorous as any Carnegie Hall audience, but nature-loving boys and girls cheerfully set up housekeeping on the grass and equate with Bach.

"The $2.00 audience begins to arrive 2 or 3 hours before a concert and comes laden with enough camp equipment to cross the continent. Besides folding chairs, blankets, packs of beer, lunch baskets filled with fried chicken, sandwiches, potato salad and cake; thermos bottles of martinis and hot coffee, small portable ice boxes are lugged into Tanglewood and help support the inner man while his soul feasts on music.

"When 6000 to 8000 music lovers are thus spread over Tanglewood with their gear, it might take on the look of a refugee camp, or maybe an Elks' picnic with long-haired Musah.

"This outdoor audience was as decorous as the indoor, during the music and equally as quiet. Anyway, for next season; I have already taken an option on Blanket, Basket and Beer, and the $2.00."

The press accounts of music summer festivals, national and international, are startling. Such an increase of great music heard everywhere. And new American compositions coming, for our native music fared well in relation to imported music this past season.

Robert McFerrin, 28-year-old baritone, appearing with many of our symphonies, won the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air, by unanimous vote of the judges, and is the first Negro singer to be given a scholarship in the K. T. Long Opera Course. He has given his second Town Hall recital.

[222]

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.

JUL 1957

Charles Munch has invited three guests to share conducting duties for the Boston Symphony's 77th season, 1957-58. Pierre Monteux, who was the orchestra's regular conductor 1919-24, and who has been a frequent guest with the Boston Symphony, will direct for 3 weeks. Two American conductors will appear for the first time with the orchestra in Boston, Robert Shaw in January and Thomas Schippers in February.

Speaking of the Boston Symphony brings to mind the delightful summer home of the orchestra, Tanglewood. This will be the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival, July 3 to Aug. 11. The six weekends of concerts will be under the direction of Dr. Munch, Pierre Monteux and Carl Suricht. Each weekend will highlight a particular composer. The first two, by an orchestra of chamber size, will be all-Bach (July 5, 6, 7) and all-Mozart (July 12, 13, 14). The last 4 weekends, by the full Boston Symphony, will feature Tschaikowsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven, and contemporary works by such composers as Stravinsky, Hindemith, Egk, Barber, Piston, Honegger, Blacher and Copland. A special feature will be a salute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky with performances of his "Canticum Sacrum" (July 21), "Jeu de Cartes" (July 19) and "Sacre du Printemps" (July 20). Dr. Munch will direct 3 large choral works: Part II of Bach's St. Matthew's Passion, July 7, Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," July 27, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the closing concert, Aug. 11. The Festival also will include six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts.

Concurrent with the Berkshire Festival is the Berkshire Music Center, now under the leadership of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, and Aaron Copland, who is Chairman of the faculty. The Music Center consists of 5 major departments: instrumental music, choral music, composition, opera, and the Tanglewood Study Group.

CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS
Circ. D. 588,576
AUG 22 1957

MARION, IND.
LEADER TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 8,613
AUG 17 1957

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 21,563
AUG 16 1957

CAMDEN, N. J.
COURIER-POST
Circ. D. 77,080
AUG 16 1957

TRENTON, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 63,062
AUG 20 1957

RUTLAND, VT.
HERALD
Circ. D. 20,336
AUG 16 1957

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502
AUG 16 1957

LYNCHBURG, VA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 14,591 - S. 22,720

EASTON, PA.
EXPRESS
Circ. D. 47,940
AUG 16 1957

FORT MYERS, FLA.
NEWS-PRESS
Circ. D. 9,345 - S. 9,345

THE NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN, Sunday Morning, Aug. 11, 1957 3-E

Our Artists Aren't Resting

Instead of Summering at Shore or Mountain, They're Busy Catering to Musical Tastes

By LOUIS NICHOLAS, TENNESSEAN Music Critic

FOR MOST musicians, summer used to be a time for rest and vacations—in Europe, at the seashore or in the mountains—or of quiet preparation for the coming season's program.

Nowadays, with the tremendous upsurge in outdoor concert series and the growing number of summer music camps and festivals, many of the more important soloists keep busy through the summer.

Nicholas

Among those who have appeared in Nashville in recent years the following important summer engagements have been noted: Alexander Brailowsky (Nashville Symphony — '55) opened both the Lewisohn Stadium (NYC) and Robin Hood Dell (Philadelphia) series, Tossy Spivakovsky (Community Concerts—'47, N.S.—'53), Eileen Farrell (N. S.—51, C. C.—'57), and Erica Morini (last presented here in '46 by David Lipscomb college, and to be soloist with the symphony in January) were also stadium soloists.

Jennie Tourel (C. C. — '46) opened the Chicago Grant park series, and Eugene Istomin (C. C.—'45, Ward Belmont—'46, N.S.—'50) the Ravinia park series in Evanston.

Tanglewood soloists have included Cesare Valletti (N.S.—'57), Isaac Stern (N. S.—'52), Rudolf Serkin (C.C.—'43-'44 season), and Florence Kopleff, the black-velvet-voiced contralto soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale on its last three visits here. And again Boris Goldovsky (Ward Belmont—'51) has been doing exciting things as head of the opera department at Tanglewood.

For Music Under The Stars

By Inez Robb

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — Temples to the muses cover the Berkshires. Any music buff, whether a Bartok or a Bix Biederbecke aficionado, can find something to his taste. (Come to think of it, if there is a temple to rock 'n' roll, it has so far mercifully escaped my attention. Fans talk learnedly of everything from Stravinsky to Jellyroll Morton, but I have heard no mention so far of E. Presley.)

I have cased the Berkshire Music Barn, dedicated to the serious disciples of jazz. But I am a real square myself who worships at Tanglewood, the Summer home away from home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. I came here for the final concerts of the orchestra's six-week season and can report that the three Bs of classical music, Beethoven, Bach and Brahms, are very big in these poetic hills.

But there is another trio of Bs that looms almost as large. In order of importance they are blankets, beer and baskets (lunch). And thereby hangs the tale of the major blooper I made in my arrangements to hear the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

For the final performances, I made the mistake of buying seats in the Music Shed, the big, wedge-shaped auditorium, open to the elements on three sides, that houses the orchestra and seats 6,000. In the future, a pox on seats in the Shed! I shall simply join the other thousands of music-lovers who pay $2 for admission to Tanglewood and thereby acquire squatter's rights to the acres of tree-shaded lawns that surround the Shed.

Bock With Bach

The outdoor contingent always rivals and often surpasses the size of the SRO audience in the Shed. The Shed audience sits on proper seats, as decorous as any Carnegie Hall audience, while the nature boys and girls cheerfully set up light housekeeping on the grass and equate bock with Bach.

The $2 audience begins arriving two to three hours before a concert. It comes laden with enough camp equipment to cross the continent. Many bring folding chairs, but the majority carry heavy blankets on which to sprawl and enjoy the music, which wells from the open Shed and fills the countryside.

Packs of beer, lunch baskets filled with fried chicken, sandwiches, potato salad and cake; thermos jugs of Martinis and hot coffee and small, portable iceboxes are lugged into Tanglewood and help support the inner man while his oversoul feasts on music.

When 6,000 to 8,000 music lovers are thus spread over Tanglewood with their goods and gear, it takes on the look of a refugee camp, or maybe an Elks' picnic with long-hair Muzak.

And there is another "B" that I have failed to mention so far because it still puzzles me. This "B" stands for bassinets. Whether the occupants are musical moppets or their young parents drug or slug them, deponent knoweth not. But I never heard a peep out of any of these infant listeners.

Decorous As Indoors

There were a few young couples, carried away by the beauty of the night and music under the stars, who might well have included a screen as well as a blanket and beer among their equipment. But otherwise the outdoor audience was as decorous as the indoor during the music and equally as quiet. And I think it had a lot more fun.

Anyway, for next season I have already taken an option on blanket, basket and beer.

[222]

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
JUL 1957

Charles Munch has invited three guests to share conducting duties for the Boston Symphony's 77th season, 1957-58. Pierre Monteux, who was the orchestra's regular conductor 1919-24, and who has been a frequent guest with the Boston Symphony, will direct for 3 weeks. Two American conductors will appear for the first time with the orchestra in Boston, Robert Shaw in January and Thomas Schippers in February.

Speaking of the Boston Symphony brings to mind the delightful summer home of the orchestra, Tanglewood. This will be the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival, July 3 to Aug. 11. The six weekends of concerts will be under the direction of Dr. Munch, Pierre Monteux and Carl Suricht. Each weekend will highlight a particular composer. The first two, by an orchestra of chamber size, will be all-Bach (July 5, 6, 7) and all-Mozart (July 12, 13, 14). The last 4 weekends, by the full Boston Symphony, will feature Tschaikowsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven, and contemporary works by such composers as Stravinsky, Hindemith, Egk, Barber, Piston, Honegger, Blacher and Copland. A special feature will be a salute to the 75th birthday of Igor Stravinsky with performances of his "Canticum Sacrum" (July 21), "Jeu de Cartes" (July 19) and "Sacre du Printemps" (July 20). Dr. Munch will direct 3 large choral works: Part II of Bach's St. Matthew's Passion, July 7, Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ," July 27, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the closing concert, Aug. 11. The Festival also will include six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts.

Concurrent with the Berkshire Festival is the Berkshire Music Center, now under the leadership of Charles Munch, the Orchestra's Music Director, and Aaron Copland, who is Chairman of the faculty. The Music Center consists of 5 major departments: instrumental music, choral music, composition, opera, and the Tanglewood Study Group.

CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS
Circ. D. 588,576
AUG 22 1957

RUTLAND, VT.
HERALD
Circ. D. 20,336
AUG 16 1957

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502
AUG 16 1957

ALLENTOWN, PA.
CHRONICLE
Circ. D. 21,543
AUG 16 1957

LYNCHBURG, VA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 14,591 - S. 22,720
AUG 16 1957

CAMDEN, N. J.
COURIER-POST
Circ. D. 77,080
AUG 16 1957

EASTON, PA.
EXPRESS
Circ. D. 47,940
AUG 16 1957

TRENTON, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 63,062
AUG 21 1957

FORT MYERS, FLA.
NEWS-PRESS
Circ. D. 9,345 - S. 9,345
AUG 18 1957

For Music Under The Stars

By Inez Robb

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — Temples to the muses cover the Berkshires. Any music buff, whether a Bartok or a Bix Biederbecke aficionado, can find something to his taste. Come to think of it, there is a temple to rock 'n' roll, it is the only one so far mercifully escaped my attention. Fans talk learnedly of everything from Stravinsky to Jellyroll Morton, but I have heard no mention as far as E. Presley.)

I have cased the Berkshire Music Barn, dedicated to the serious disciples of jazz. But I am a real square myself who worships at Tanglewood, the summer home away from home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. I came here for the final concerts of the orchestra's six-week season and can report that the three Bs of classical music, Beethoven, Bach and Brahms, are very big in these poetic hills.

But there is another trio of Bs that looms almost as large. In order of importance they are blankets, beer and baskets (lunch). And thereby hangs the tale of the major blooper I made in my arrangements to hear the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

For the final performances, I made the mistake of buying seats in the Music Shed, the big, wedge-shaped auditorium, open to the elements on three sides, that houses the orchestra and seats 6,000. In the future, a pox on seats in the Shed! I shall simply join the other thousands of music-lovers who pay $2 for admission to Tanglewood and thereby acquire squatter's rights to the acres of tree-shaded lawns that surround the Shed.

Rock With Bach

The outdoor contingent always rivals and often surpasses the size of the SRO audience in the Shed. The Shed audience sits on proper seats, as decorous as any Carnegie Hall audience, while the nature boys and girls cheerfully set up light housekeeping on the grass and equate bock with Bach.

The $2 audience begins arriving two to three hours before a concert. It comes laden with enough camp equipment to cross the continent. Many bring folding chairs, but the majority carry heavy blankets on which to sprawl and enjoy the music, which wells from the open Shed and fills the countryside.

Packs of beer, lunch baskets filled with fried chicken, sandwiches, potato salad and cake; thermos jugs of Martinis and hot coffee and small, portable iceboxes are lugged into Tanglewood and help support the inner man while his overeool feasts on music.

When 6,000 to 8,000 music lovers are thus spread over Tanglewood with their goods and gear, it takes on the look of a refugee camp, or maybe an Elks' picnic with long-hair Muzak.

And there is another "B" that I have failed to mention so far because it still puzzles me. This "B" stands for bassinets. Whether the occupants are musical moppets or their young parents drug or slug them, deponent knoweth not. But I never heard a peep out of any of these infant listeners.

Decorous As Indoors

There were a few young couples, carried away by the beauty of the night and music under the stars, who might well have included a screen as well as a blanket and beer among their equipment. But otherwise the outdoor audience was as decorous as the indoor during the music and equally as quiet. And I think it had a lot more fun.

Anyway, for next season I have already taken an option on blanket, basket and beer.

THE NASHVILLE TENNESSEAN, Sunday Morning, Aug. 11, 1957 3-B

Our Artists Aren't Resting

Instead of Summering at Shore or Mountain, They're Busy Catering to Musical Tastes

By LOUIS NICHOLAS, TENNESSEAN Music Critic

FOR MOST musicians, summer used to be a time for rest and vacations—in Europe, at the seashore or in the mountains—or of quiet preparation for the coming season's program.

Nowadays, with the tremendous upsurge in outdoor concert series and the growing number of summer music camps and festivals, many of the more important soloists keep busy through the summer.

Among those who have appeared in Nashville in recent years the following important summer engagements have been noted: Alexander Brailowsky (Nashville Symphony — '55) opened both the Lewisohn Stadium (NYC) and Robin Hood Dell (Philadelphia) series, Tossy Spivakovsky (Community Concerts—'47, N.S.—'53), Eileen Farrell (N. S.—51, C. C.—'57), and Erica Morini (last presented here in '46 by David Lipscomb college, and to be soloist with the symphony in January) were also stadium soloists.

Jennie Tourel (C. C. — '46) opened the Chicago Grant park series; and Eugene Istomin (C. C.—'45, Ward Belmont—'46, N.S.—'50), the Ravinia park series in Evanston.

Tanglewood soloists have included Cesare Valletti (N.S.—'57), Isaac Stern (N. S.—'52), Rudolf Serkin (C.C.—'43-'44 season), and Florence Kopleff, the black-velvet-voiced contralto soloist with the Robert Shaw Chorale on its last three visits here. And again Boris Goldovsky (Ward Belmont—'51), has been doing exciting things as head of the opera department at Tanglewood.

Herald (m)
RUTLAND, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 20,150

AUG 15 1957

EVANSVILLE, IND.
PRESS
Circ. D. 48,496

AUG 15 1957

EASTON, PA.
EXPRESS
Circ. D. 47,940

AUG 15 1957

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 60,037 - S. 60,572

AUG 15 1957

FORT MYERS, FLA.
NEWS-PRESS
Circ. D. 9,345 - S. 9,345

AUG 17 1957

TRENTON, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 63,062

AUG 16 1957

HOUSTON, TEX.
PRESS
Circ., D. 120,736

AUG 16 1957

LYNCHBURG, VA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 14,591 - S. 22,720

AUG 15 1957

NORRISTOWN, PA.
TIMES HERALD
Circ. D. 23,467

AUG 17 1957

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.
MIRROR-NEWS
Circ. D. 319,636

AUG 16 1957

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.,
ENQUIRER & NEWS

AUG 15 1957

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502

AUG 15 1957

New England And The Arts

By Ines Robb

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — American citizens who yearn to be couth and cultured have only to head the family car into New England to find themselves in the midst of the biggest, most diverse and concentrated culture klatch in the nation.

Knock on any barn door north of Greenwich, Conn., and it opens on a box office. In the good, old Summertime, displaced herds wind slowly o'er the lea, their barns filled with actors, musicians, ballet dancers, writers, painters, composers and assorted artists.

Here in the lyric embrace of the beautiful Berkshire Hills is something for everyone, from the longhair to the crewcut. It is all rather wonderful and something to which the American can point with pride.

The music, for example, ranges from the Boston Symphony Orchestra, whose six-week season (just concluded) drew audiences of as many as 18,000 paying customers, to the Berkshire Music Barn, where huge audiences of jazz aficionados gather to worship at this temple of modern jive. (As a change of pace at the Barn, Mahalia Jackson is singing her marvelous spirituals and gospel songs.)

For those who dig chamber music, there is the Berkshire Quartet playing at Music Mountain. For dance fans, there is Jacob's Pillow, now celebrating its 25th year as the shrine of modern dance under the aegis of Ted Shawn. It does not require the talents of a Delphic oracle to predict that Jacob's Pillow will be mobbed this weekend when that indestructible high priestess of the dance, Ruth St. Denis, now 78, gives two recitals.

Theatre Everywhere

As for the Summer theater, the woods are full of them. They — the woods — are also full of students. The visiting fireman who takes a stroll through the lovely woods hereabouts must be prepared to flush a violinist playing to a clump of birches, or an embryo. Markova doing ballet nip-ups in a sunny glade.

The Berkshire Music Center, an offshoot of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire season, was founded in 1940 to fulfill the ambition of the orchestra's late, great conductor, Serge Koussevitsky. Since then, more than 5,000 musicians have studied at Tanglewood, often aided by the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Aaron Copland, distinguished American composer, is chairman of the center's faculty and head of its composition department. (His own work, "Quiet City," received an ovation when it was played in one of the symphony orchestra's final concerts.) The Lenox-Stockbridge sector provides a great teaching as well as looking-and-listening center of the arts.

If the barns are full of artists and the woods of students, then every spare room in this area is filled with a patron. Inns, hotels, motels, restaurants and bars are jammed with customers drawn here by the arts.

Rooms must be booked weeks in advance. The license plates on cars tell a fine story of pilgrims from as far away as California and Florida, all eager to enjoy fine music, dance and theatre.

Backed By Public

In Winter, Boston may lay claim to the title of "The Athens of America." But in Summer, the title passes to the Stockbridge-Lenox sector, where the seven lively arts are active to the point of St. Vitus and where they find ardent support from the American public.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PLAIN DEALER
Circ. D. 302,579 - S. 520,850
JUL 21 1957

Stratford Shakespearean Festival in Ontario Rates Well Musically

By Herbert Elwell

In the last few years summer music festivals throughout the United States and Canada have multipled to an astonishing degree. Vacation travelers who can trek as far as the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass., or to the Aspen Festival in Colorado, are, of course, lucky.

HERBERT ELWELL

Yet to hear good music in summer, it is no longer necessary to go so far away. Musical attractions of exceptional interest are now sprinkled throughout the Middle West and Ontario. Several programs of unusual interest, for example, are offered in August in an unlikely sounding place called Fish Creek, Wis., where for the last four years the Peninsula Music Festival has been successfully operating under the direction of Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Orchestra.

One of the most distinguished festivals within a reasonable distance of Cleveland is the Shakespearean Festival at Stratford, Ont., which for the third year is offering a series of concerts and opera in connection with the production of Shakespearean drama. Perhaps it was this example which led to the inclusion of music in "Shakespeare Under The Stars" at Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O., of which I wrote in this column last Sunday.

I have not attended the music festival at Stratford, but expect to do so before the summer is over. This festival opens Wednesday, July 31, and continues through August. Four concerts will be given by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation Orchestra, of which there have been reliable reports that compare it favorably with the former NBC Orchestra. On Aug. 20 a new opera by Benjamin Britten, "The Turning of the Screw," will have its premier at Stratford, and subsequent performances of it are billed. Full information about this festival may be had by writing to publicity headquarters at 109 Erie Street, Stratford, Ont., Canada.

Organized in 1952

The CBC Orchestra was organized in the fall of 1952. It has won high repute in its weekly broadcasts, which include performances with CBC Opera Company. Outside the standard repertoire in the summer of 1954, the orchestra presented 14 major contemporary compositions. It appears under various well known conductors. At the opening concert in Stratford, July 31, the conductor will be Heinz Unger, the soloist Lois Marshall.

Walter Susskind, who succeeded Sir Ernest MacMillan as conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra in 1956, will conduct Aug. 7. Geoffrey Waddington, director of music for CBC, and one of the leading figures of Canadian radio, will appear Aug. 14, with John Boyden, baritone, as soloist. On Aug. 21 the orchestra will be under the direction of Thomas Mayer. The soloist on that date will be the Canadian-born violinist, Betty-Jean Hagen, who has appeared with the Cleveland and other major orchestras here and abroad.

Mayer, conductor of the Halifax Orchestra, was born in Germany and educated in Berlin. He has conducted extensively in Europe and South America. He was assistant to Fritz Busch at the Metropolitan Opera in 1947, and led the Cincinnati Summer Opera. He has had guest appearances in Havana, Buffalo and Chicago, and last year he conducted Britten's "The Rape of Lucretia" at Stratford.

Miss Marshall has had a rapid rise to fame. It was only about eight years ago that I heard her in one of her first performances with the Toronto Orchestra under Sir Ernest. At that time she was unknown outside Canada. Since then, she has had enormous success, not only in the United States but in Europe. Last year, she appeared with the Royal Philharmonic under Sir Thomas Beecham in London's Festival Hall, also with Barbirolli at Halle, England, at the famous Eisteddfod in Wales, and in Hamburg, Germany. She has especially endeared herself to the Bach Festival at Baldwin-Wallace College, Berea, where last May she was given a standing ovation.

Stratford is about equi-distant from Buffalo and Detroit, so it does not much matter which way you go, if you travel by automobile. There is a ferry boat between Sandusky and Leamington, Canada, which could be used.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
AUG 4 1957

Public Lacks Musical Daring

By MILES KASTENDIECK

CONSERVATISM in the public's taste for music can be frustrating. The artistic success of the Empire State Music Festival is unquestioned, but the public did not attend in sufficient numbers to assure financial stability. Producing Strauss' "Elektra" was undoubtedly a bold stroke. When the report came through that "only a handful of people" attended the third performance, the management had a right to be disheartened.

Natural curiosity and the knowledge that the performance was good should have given people the impetus to find out what this forty-year-old masterpiece was like. People go to the movies with less motivation. Why should they hesitate to hear a recognized musical masterpiece?

The Berlioz weekend at the Berkshire Festival qualified as an artistic success, but the attendance was the poorest to date. Yet a few years ago Berlioz's "Harold in Italy" ranked as the top-selling record for Columbia that year.

Won an Ovation

Numerous recordings exist of the "Fantastic" Symphony. Yet listening to any of these recordings could not compare with being present when both works were played on one program. A tremendous ovation at the end confirmed that fact.

When Stokowski combined Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" with Orff's "Carmina Burana" at Ellenville, he created an ingenious program. Through the magic of his name the attendance swelled, but the event was far from a sell-out. People were suspicious of the Orff, to say nothing of the Stravinsky.

This hesitancy to accept "new" music that is 20 to forty years old — or even a hundred in the case of Berlioz — constitutes one of the most curious phenomena of the present day. New books, new plays, new movies, are all better risks than new music. Is it any wonder that impresarios become frustrated?

Actually the new music is no more daring than other forms of art. Why is it that people show such hesitancy in accepting it along with the rest of contemporaneous living? How serious to be at least a half-century behind the times!

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293
JUL 21 1957

A POLICY WANTED

Strauss Opera at Empire State Festival Shows Need for Long-Range Planning

By HOWARD TAUBMAN

THE Strauss-Hofmannsthal version of "Elektra" is concentrated in its fury and terror. Even to habitual operagoers it is strong meat. A man who sat through the performance presented at Ellenville, N. Y., some days ago by the Empire State Music Festival remarked ruefully, "I'm sure glad the thing didn't have another act."

Though it was a proud and courageous gesture for the Empire State people to produce "Elektra," they might well have asked themselves whether their choice was wise. There was no doubt that many of those who attended the presentation found the piece difficult to assimilate. Nor could there be any question that a more popular opera such as "Carmen" or "Traviata" or "Aida" would have drawn larger audiences.

Where does the obligation of a festival lie? Should it arrange programs that will attract sophisticated listeners? Or should it impress a repertory of well-established, familiar works and hope to reach a large audience which will make the enterprise profitable?

Program Problems

Music festivals, of course, have no problems of program. Bayreuth is committed to the music-dramas of Wagner. Salzburg has been built on the genius of Mozart. Edinburgh, which has the great guardian spirit to depend upon, combines the attractiveness of the city and country with a far-ranging selection of the performing arts from all over the Western world. Tanglewood, which is also blessed with a beautiful setting, has based itself on the reputation of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and its distinguished conductors.

The Empire State Festival is relatively new, and it has an agreeable locale. Now in its third season, the festival is still seeking to orient itself and to find a consistent frame of reference. It has attempted opera, symphonic and dance programs and dramatic works like Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" with Carl Orff's musical setting instead of Mendelssohn's. It is seeking to appeal to many different tastes.

Abresch
Frank Forest.

Civic-minded citizens of Ellenville and hotel owners in the Catskills have rallied to the support of the festival. But it remains fundamentally the special baby of Frank Forest, its general manager. He helped to found it, and he has carried the principal burden of arranging the programs and seeing to it that they were carried out. It is no secret that he has poured substantial sums of money into the enterprise.

The Empire State Festival has used the Symphony of the Air as its resident orchestra since [illegible] years ago. But the orchestra unhappily still lacks a powerful musical personality to give it leadership and a unified artistic policy. Its participation in the festival is valuable but does not carry with it that extra something that the Boston Symphony under a Serge Koussevitzky could bring to the dramatization of the Berkshire Festival.

Mr. Forest's aims have been high, and he has sought the cooperation of distinguished musicians. At the Empire State Festival's opening concerts in 1955 the conductor was Eduard van Beinum, one of the ablest in the middle-aged group, who deserves to be better known in New York. Leopold Stokowski, Igor Markevitch, Heitor Villa-Lobos and Laszlo Halasz are among this year's conductors.

To obtain the services of men of reputation the Empire State Festival must offer inducements beyond fees. It must give them the opportunity to do works they have a burning desire to conduct. Markevitch wishes to lead Beethoven's Ninth; Stokowski wants to conduct Stravinsky and Orff; Villa-Lobos naturally is interested in his own music; Halasz is eager to do "Elektra."

There is nothing wrong with any of these preferences. But they do not automatically add up to a coherent festival scheme. Nor are they guaranteed to cause the permanent and temporary residents of this area in the Catskills to storm the festival box office.

"Elektra," for example, is rarely performed even in the major opera houses. When it is produced, it must have an exceptional performance to enjoy a modest run.

Strong Points

The performance under the Empire State Festival's tent had impressive elements. Virginia Copeland, a young American soprano, sang the enormously exacting title role with unremitting vocal power. If she did not achieve the final vengeful ferocity and almost insane ecstasy that make Elektra one of the most challenging parts in the repertory, she accomplished enough to make one feel that she is growing as an artist. Elisabeth Hoengen was a striking figure of evil and corruption as Klytemnestra. Ellen Faull was touching as Chrysothemis. The Symphony of the Air played resourcefully, and Mr. Halasz conducted forcefully.

An "Elektra" of this caliber would be news in New York, and it is certainly an extraordinary accomplishment for a young festival. If it was not good box office, the Empire State Festival can console itself with the artistic achievement.

This consolation, however, cannot be a substitute for the funds needed to meet the deficits of such a festival. Deficits are likely to be recurrent, in any case, but those who meet them will probably do so more readily if they see that the enterprise is reaching an expanding public.

The Empire State Festival has not yet arrived at the point where it draws its audiences from people who come from large centers like New York just for the music. Nor has it made serious inroads into the summer resort clientele, which generally has all the entertainment it wants on the grounds of the hotels.

Artistic Direction

It is to be hoped that the Empire State Festival will continue to work hard to establish itself firmly. But to do so, it must take some uncompromising positions. It must find an artistic director with the drive and imagination of a Koussevitzky, and encourage him to give the programs a consistent point of view.

It must plan for the long view. If it wishes to undertake a work as demanding as "Elektra," it might be more rewarding to commission and mount a new American opera, possibly one reflecting the traditions of the Catskills. The result might not be a masterpiece like "Elektra," but it would begin to give the festival a character of its own.

BLANK PAGE

TIGHT BINDING

[224]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 5 - 1957

Picasso Print Exhibit Is Tanglewood Finale

Prints by Picasso are being exhibited in the class reception room at Tanglewood during this, the final week of the 1957 Berkshire Festival. The exhibit has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. The prints by Picasso have been lent by Robert B. Appleton, Albany, N. Y., real estate executive, from his large collection of prints and paintings by modern European artists.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 5 - 1957

Picasso Prints On Exhibition At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Prints by Picasso are being exhibited in the glass reception room at Tanglewood during the final week of the 1957 Berkshire Festival, Aug. 5-11. The exhibit has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

The prints by Picasso have been loaned by Robert B. Appleton, real estate executive, Albany, N.Y. They form a part of his large collection of prints and paintings by modern European artists.

The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 8, 1957

arrington

W. P. MOONEY Tel. 83

Tanglewood Soloists To Sing Sunday At First Church

GREAT BARRINGTON — Three Tanglewood soloists will sing at the 10:30 service at the First Congregational Church Sunday.

The trio will consist of Adele Addison, soprano; Mac Morgan, baritone; and John McCollum, tenor. Mrs. Mac Morgan will be organist.

The program will be divided into three numbers. Miss Addison and Mr. Morgan will sing the first, "Widow Scene" from "Elijah," by Mendelsohn.

The three will join in "My Soul Doth Magnify," from Christmas Oratorio," by Saint-Saens. Mr. McCollum will climax the program with a solo rendition of "Then Shall the Righteous Shine Forth," from "Elijah," by Mendelsohn.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 6 - 1957

Miss Dunn Named Accompanist Of St. Cecilia Group

Miss Florence A. Dunn, daughter of Mrs. Harland Dunn of 13 Thomas St. and the late Mr. Dunn, has been reappointed accompanist of the St. Cecilia Society of Boston, the second oldest choral organization in the United States.

Miss Dunn, who is on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, a position she has held for six summers, is also accompanist for the Appollo Club of Boston and is a member of the choir of Trinity Church, Boston. Miss Dunn teaches voice at the New England Conservatory of Music.

28 A THE BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, AUG. 6, 1957

'A Small, Primly Pruned Retreat'

Magazine for Reds Features Public Garden, Berkshires

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—Russian citizens are going to get a look at the Massachusetts Berkshires and Boston's Public Garden this month, thanks to the United States Information Agency.

The agency publishes a magazine entitled "America" which is distributed throughout the Soviet Union under an exchange agreement with the Russians. The Russians send a similar magazine to the United States.

LEAD ARTICLE

In the tenth edition of "America" which went on sale last week in the Soviet Union, a lead article covers the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, and the annual Boston Arts Festival. The article is a handsome, six-page spread, heavily illustrated with photographs that range from an air view of the festival grounds at Tanglewood to pictures of Bostonians staring perplexed at sculpture in the Public Garden and watching an artist with his back to Boylston street doing a painting of the Public Garden.

The Russian language text begins, "In summertime, the arts in America move outdoors" and goes on to say that the two Massachusetts festivals are among the most famous of such events in America. In a note scaled especially to Russian readers, the former private estate in the Berkshires where Tanglewood is held is described as being "eighty four hectares" in size. Russians don't use acreage measurements.

Adhering to the policy for "America" laid out by the USIA, the article on Massachusetts is devoid of any political reference or propaganda. "America" purports to present a factual picture of life in the United States without garnishment.

The magazine has been published since last autumn. It is not issued on a regular basis because of distribution problems in the Soviet Union. The current edition is the tenth. Fifty thousand copies are printed at a time and the United States Embassy in Moscow says they sell like hotcakes.

CAUTIOUS TEXT

The text of the article on Boston seems a little overly-cautious. It begins, "Until five years ago the Public Garden—a small, primly pruned retreat in the busy downtown—was best known for the swan boats which used to ferry children around its lake, barely rippling the calm.

"But now," the article continues, "that calm has been disturbed and the swanboats are an adjunct to a greater attraction—the Boston Arts Festival." The "America" story goes on to call the festival "a sturdy city institution at the age of only five." It tells of how Publisher Jerome Rosenfield and his wife were driving by the Public Garden one night and the inspiration for the Arts Festival struck them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 6 - 1957

Magazine 'America' Tells Russians Tanglewood Story

WASHINGTON — Russian citizens are going to get a look at the Massachusetts Berkshires and Boston's Public Garden this month, thanks to the United States Information Agency.

The agency publishes a magazine entitled "America" which is distributed throughout the Soviet Union under an exchange agreement with the Russians. The Russians send a similar magazine to the United States.

In the tenth edition of "America" which went on sale last week in the Soviet Union, a lead article covers the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox and the annual Boston Arts Festival. The article is a handsome six-page spread, heavily illustrated with photographs that range from an air view of the festival grounds at Tanglewood to pictures of Bostonians staring perplexed at sculpture in the Public Garden and watching an artist with his back to Boylston Street doing a painting of the Public Garden.

The Russian language text begins, "In summertime, the arts in America move outdoors" and goes on to say that the two Massachusetts festivals are among the most famous of such events in America. In a note scaled especially to Russian readers, the former private estate in the Berkshires where Tanglewood is held is described as being "84 hectares" in size. Russians don't use acreage measurements.

Adhering to the policy for "America" laid out by the USIA, the article on Massachusetts is devoid of any political reference or propaganda. "America" purports to present a factual picture of life in the United States without garnishment.

The magazine has been published since last autumn. It is not issued on a regular basis because of distribution problems in the Soviet Union. The current edition is the tenth. Fifty thousand copies are printed at a time and the United States Embassy in Moscow says they sell like hotcakes.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 28 1957

Music Results In Low Fares

"MUSIC Sundays" will be featured by the New Haven Railroad, from now until Aug. 11 inclusive, when the road launches special low trip fares in connection with the famous Tanglewood programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Lenox, Mass.

These famous outdoor musical programs are under the direction of Charles Munch.

The New Haven's special round-trip fare is at a package price including railroad transportation to Pittsfield, Mass., and return from Pittsfield, general admission to the music sites and transportation from and to the railroad station, and admission taxes. Tickets may be obtained either at the Grand Central Terminal, 125th st., or Stamford ticket office.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 8 - 1957

TWELVE

Expect Local Tourist Places To Be Jammed This Weekend

Operators of inns, motels and cabins are looking forward to another excellent week-end comparable to that of July 19 when parents' week-end was observed by many children's camps in this area.

While the number of overnight guests for the beginning of this week fell below the number stopping last week at many places offering overnight accommodations, another parents' week-end plus the fact this is the last week of the Tanglewood season, is expected to fill all available rooms. Some motels reported that all rooms for Friday and Saturday nights have been reserved for sometime.

Last Saturday night found overnight accommodations scarce with the attendant at the Board of Trade information booth stating that [illegible] the requests at the booth [illegible] rooms in places regularly [illegible] overnight guests were filled.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

AUG 6 1957

Academy Hosts Tanglewood Day

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, next Sunday.

The program on that Sunday, closing day of the festival, features Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano; Jan Peerce, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

"Sunday in Tanglewood" is a round trip transportation ticket on the New Haven Railroad, admission to the grounds of the Tanglewood estate, including a visit to the Hawthorne Cottage, a luncheon consisting of a buffet, relishes, beverage, dessert, plus, of course, the general admission to the concert. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a reserved seat, he may apply two dollars of the "Sunday at Tanglewood" price toward location seats at $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 or $6.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special leaves Grand Central Terminal August 11 at 8:30 a.m. (DST), returning at 11 p.m. Reservations may be made at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. (STerling 3-6700).

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
KINGS COURIER

AUG 3 1957

Bklyn Academy Sponsors Berkshire Day, Aug. 11th

"Sunday at Tanglewood," a one-day excursion, will be sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Sat., Aug. 11. It is the final day of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Tickets are $10. Included are railroad fare, a guided tour of the grounds, a luncheon, a visit to Hawthorne Cottage and general admission to the concert. The concert willfeatureBeethoven's Ninth Sympony.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Brooklyn Daily
Circ. D. 36,575

JUL 23 1957

Brooklyn Acad
'Sunday a Brooklyn Academy of M host for an annual fi its subscription series
ston Symphony Orchest sponsor "Sunday at Tan a special one-day exc
the Berkshire Festival,
y, August 11th. program on that Sund day of the festival, fe ethoven's Ninth Sym
ed by Aaron Co
City." Charles Mun director of the Bos hony, will conduct, and
's in the Ninth Sy
e Adele Addison, ce Kopleff, contra um, tenor, and n, baritone. The al Chorus, trained will be heard to Joy" during ment.
nday in Tan
e round trip he New d tour of ude inclu thorne Cott ting of a n, relishes, bever
rt, plus, of course,
admission to the co

BROOKLYN
BROOKLYN
Circ. W.

JUL 26

Tanglewood
Excursion Academy

The Brooklyn Aca
the host for an certs subscription Boston Symphony sponsor "Sunday special one-day exc
Berkshire Festival,
August 11th.
The program on t closing day of the fe Beethoven's Ni
y, preceded by A s "Quiet City." Cha c director of the Bo ay, will conduct, an in the Ninth Symph ele Addison, soprano poleff, contralto, John or, and Donald Gr
e. The Berkshire Fe
s, trained by Hugh Ro ard in Schiller's "Od ring the final movemen
"Sunday in Tanglewo only ten dollars
udes round trip transpo
e New Haven Railroad ur of the Tanglewoo cluding a visit to the ottage, a luncheon con roiled half-chiken, rel rage and dessert, plus, e general admission t
rt. Should the concert obtain a reserved sea pply two dollars of the ce" price toward loc
2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50
The "Sunday at Ta ecial leaves Grand C inal August 11 at DST), returning at 11
ervations may be ma e Brooklyn Academy
0 Lafayette Avenue, B
.Y. (STerling 3-6700)

FOREST HILLS
POST
Circ. W.

Sunday in Tang
The Brooklyn Academy host for an annual fi cription series by mphony Orchestra, w day at Tanglewood," day excursion to the ival on Sunday, Augu

TIGHT BINDING

[224]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 5 - 1957

Picasso Print Exhibit Is Tanglewood Finale

Prints by Picasso are being exhibited in the class reception room at Tanglewood during this, the final week of the 1957 Berkshire Festival. The exhibit has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield. The prints by Picasso have been lent by Robert B. Appleton, Albany, N. Y., real estate executive, from his large collection of prints and paintings by modern European artists.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 5 - 1957

Picasso Prints On Exhibition At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Prints by Picasso are being exhibited in the glass reception room at Tanglewood during the final week of the 1957 Berkshire Festival, Aug. 5-11. The exhibit has been arranged by the Berkshire Museum in Pittsfield.

The prints by Picasso have been loaned by Robert B. Appleton, real estate executive, Albany, N.Y. They form part of a large collection of prints and paintings by modern European artists.

The Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 8, 1957

arrington

W. P. MOONEY Tel. 83

Tanglewood Soloists To Sing Sunday At First Church

GREAT BARRINGTON — Three Tanglewood soloists will sing at the 10:30 service at the First Congregational Church Sunday.

The trio will consist of Adele Addison, soprano; Mac Morgan, baritone; and John McCollum, tenor. Mrs. Mac Morgan will be organist.

The program will be divided into three numbers. Miss Addison and Mr. Morgan will sing the first, "Widow Scene" from "Elijah," by Mendelsohn.

The three will join in "My Soul Doth Magnify," from Christmas Oratorio," by Saint-Saens. Mr. McCollum will climax the program with a solo rendition of "Then Shall the Righteous Shine Forth," from "Elijah," by Mendelsohn.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 6 - 1957

Miss Dunn Named Accompanist Of St. Cecilia Group

Miss Florence A. Dunn, daughter of Mrs. Harland Dunn of 13 Thomas St. and the late Mr. Dunn, has been reappointed accompanist of the St. Cecilia Society of Boston, the second oldest choral organization in the United States.

Miss Dunn, who is on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, a position she has held for six summers, is also accompanist for the Appollo Club of Boston and is a member of the choir of Trinity Church, Boston. Miss Dunn teaches voice at the New England Conservatory of Music.

28 A THE BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, AUG. 6, 1957

'A Small, Primly Pruned Retreat'

Magazine for Reds Features Public Garden, Berkshires

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—Russian citizens are going to get a look at the Massachusetts Berkshires and Boston's Public Garden this month, thanks to the United States Information Agency.

The agency publishes a magazine entitled "America" which is distributed throughout the Soviet Union under an exchange agreement with the Russians. The Russians send a similar magazine to the United States.

LEAD ARTICLE

In the tenth edition of "America" which went on sale last week in the Soviet Union, a lead article covers the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, and the annual Boston Arts Festival. The article is a handsome, six-page spread, heavily illustrated with photographs that range from an air view of the festival grounds at Tanglewood to pictures of Bostonians staring perplexed at sculpture in the Public Garden and watching an artist with his back to Boylston street doing a painting of the Public Garden.

The Russian language text begins, "In summertime, the arts in America move outdoors" and goes on to say that the two Massachusetts festivals are among the most famous of such events in America. In a note scaled especially to Russian readers, the former private estate in the Berkshires where Tanglewood is held is described as being "eighty four hectares" in size. Russians don't use acreage measurements.

Adhering to the policy for "America" laid out by the USIA, the article on Massachusetts is devoid of any political reference or propaganda. "America" purports to present a factual picture of life in the United States without garnishment.

The magazine has been published since last autumn. It is not issued on a regular basis because of distribution problems in the Soviet Union. The current edition is the tenth. Fifty thousand copies are printed at a time and the United States Embassy in Moscow says they sell like hotcakes.

CAUTIOUS TEXT

The text of the article on Boston seems a little overly-cautious. It begins, "Until five years ago the Public Garden—a small, primly pruned retreat in the busy downtown—was best known for the swan boats which used to ferry children around its lake, barely rippling the calm.

"But now," the article continues, "that calm has been disturbed and the swanboats are an adjunct to a greater attraction—the Boston Arts Festival." The "America" story goes on to call the festival "a sturdy city institution at the age of only five." It tells of how Publisher Jerome Rosenfield and his wife were driving by the Public Garden one night and the inspiration for the Arts Festival struck them.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 6 - 1957

Magazine 'America' Tells Russians Tanglewood Story

WASHINGTON — Russian citizens are going to get a look at the Massachusetts Berkshires and Boston's Public Garden this month, thanks to the United States Information Agency.

The agency publishes a magazine entitled "America" which is distributed throughout the Soviet Union under an exchange agreement with the Russians. The Russians send a similar magazine to the United States.

In the tenth edition of "America" which went on sale last week in the Soviet Union, a lead article covers the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, and the annual Boston Arts Festival. The article is a handsome, six-page spread, heavily illustrated with photographs that range from an air view of the festival grounds at Tanglewood to pictures of Bostonians staring perplexed at sculpture in the Public Garden and watching an artist with his back to Boylston Street doing a painting of the Public Garden.

The Russian language text begins, "In summertime, the arts in America move outdoors" and goes on to say that the two Massachusetts festivals are among the most famous of such events in America. In a note scaled especially to Russian readers, the former private estate in the Berkshires where Tanglewood is held is described as being "84 hectares" in size. Russians don't use acreage measurements.

Adhering to the policy for "America" laid out by the USIA, the article on Massachusetts is devoid of any political reference or propaganda. "America" purports to present a factual picture of life in the United States without garnishment.

The magazine has been published since last autumn. It is not issued on a regular basis because of distribution problems in the Soviet Union. The current edition is the tenth. Fifty thousand copies are printed at a time and the United States Embassy in Moscow says they sell like hotcakes.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 28 1957

Music Results In Low Fares

"MUSIC Sundays" will be featured by the New Haven Railroad, from now until Aug. 11 inclusive, when the road launches special low trip fares in connection with the famous Tanglewood programs of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Lenox, Mass.

These famous outdoor musical programs are under the direction of Charles Munch.

The New Haven's special round-trip fare is at a package price including railroad transportation to [illegible]bridge and return from Pittsfield, general admission to the music site, transportation from and to the railroad station, and all taxes. Tickets may be obtained either at the Grand Central Terminal, 125th st., or Stamford ticket office.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 8 - 1957

TWELVE

Expect Local Tourist Places To Be Jammed This Weekend

Operators of inns, motels and cabins are looking forward to another excellent week-end comparable to that of July 4 when parents' week-end was observed by many children's camps in this area.

While the number of overnight guests for the beginning of this week fell below the number stopping last week at many places offering overnight accommodations, another parents' weekend plus the fact this is the last week of the Tanglewood season is expected to fill all available rooms. Some motels reported that all rooms for Friday and Saturday nights have been reserved for some time.

Last Saturday night found overnight accommodations scarce with the attendant at the Board of Trade [illegible] stating that [illegible] the records at the booth [illegible] rooms in places regularly [illegible] overnight guests were filled.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Brooklyn Daily
Circ. D. 36,575

JUL 23 1957

Brooklyn Acad... 'Sunday a...

Brooklyn Academy of Mu... host for an annual fi... subscription series ... ston Symphony Orchest... sponsor "Sunday at Tang... a special one-day exc... the Berkshire Festival, ... August 11th.

The program on that Sund... day of the festival, fe... thoven's Ninth Sympho... ed by Aaron Copl... City." Charles Mun... director of the Bost... hony, will conduct, and ... ts in the Ninth Symph... e Adele Addison, ... ce Kopleff, contra... lum, tenor, and ... m, baritone. The ... al Chorus, trained ... will be heard in ... to Joy" during ... ment.

Sunday in Tan... round trip ... e New Haven ... ur of the ... cluding a visit to ... ottage, a luncheon ... roiled half-chiken, ... age and dessert, plus ... e general admission ... rt. Should the concert ... obtain a reserved se... pply two dollars of the ... re" price toward ... 2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5. ... The "Sunday at ... special leaves Grand ... minal August 11 at ... (DST), returning at 1 ... ervations may be m... the Brooklyn Academ... 10 Lafayette Avenue, ... N.Y. (STerling 3-670...

BROOKLYN ...
BROOKLYN ...
Circ. W. ...

JUL 26 19...

Tanglewood Excursion ... Academy L...

The Brooklyn Ac... the host for an ... certs subscription ... Boston Symphony ... sponsor "Sunday ... special one-day exc... Berkshire Festival, ... August 11th.

The program on ... closing day of the ... tures Beethoven's ... phony, preceded by ... "Quiet City." Cha... Munch, music director of ... Boston Symphony, will cond... and the soloists in the N... Symphony will be Adele A... son, soprano, Florence Kop... contralto, John McCol... tenor, and Donald Gramm, b... tone.

NEW YORK CITY, N. ...
JOURNAL AMERICA...
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

AUG 6 1957

Academy Hosts Tanglewood Day

The Brooklyn Academy ... Music, the host for an annu... five-concerts subscription ser... by the Boston Symphony O... chestra, is to sponsor "Sund... at Tanglewood," a special o... day excursion to the Berks... Festival, next Sunday.

The program on that Sund... closing day of the festival, ... tures Beethoven's Ninth Sy... phony, preceded by Aaron C... land's "Quiet City." Cha... Munch, music director of ... Boston Symphony, will cond... and the soloists in the N... Symphony will be Adele A... son, soprano, Florence Kop... contralto, John McCol... tenor, and Donald Gramm, b... tone.

of Music on Sat., Aug. 11. It is ... the final day of the Berkshire ... Music Festival.

Tickets are $10. Included are ... railroad fare, a guided tour of ... the grounds, a luncheon, a visit ... to Hawthorne Cottage and gen... eral admission to the concert. ... The concert willfeatureBeethov... en's Ninth Sympony.

TIGHT BINDING

[227]

...ALD, TUESDAY, AUG. 6, 1...

...uned Retreat'

...Features

...Berkshires

...n citizens are going to get a ...and Boston's Public Garden ... Information Agency.

...covers the Berkshire Music F...val at Tanglewood, near L... ...the annual Boston Arts ... The article is a hands... ...spread, heavily illus... ...with photographs that r... ...an air view of the fes... ...ds at Tanglewood to pict... ...musicians staring perplex... ...culpture in the Public Garden ...watching an artist with his ... Boylston street doing a p... ...t of the Public Garden. The Russian language text ...ing, "In summertime, the ... America move outdoors" ...oes on to say that the two M... ...usetts festivals are among ...most famous of such event... ...America. In a note scaled e... ...ly to Russian readers, the f... ...r private estate in the Berk... ...here Tanglewood is held i... ...cribed as being "eighty four ...res" in size. Russians don't ...reage measurements.

Adhering to the policy ... America" laid out by the ... ...e article on Massachuse... ...voidof any political refe... ...propaganda. "America" ... ...orts to present a factual p... ...life in the United States ...t garnishment.

The magazine has been ...shed since last autumn. ...t issued on a regular bas... ...use of distribution proble... ...e Soviet Union. The c... ...lition is the tenth. Fifty ...nd copies are printed at ...d the United States Emba... ...oscow says they sell lik... ...kes.

...AUTIOUS TEXT

The text of the articles on ...ems a little overly-cautio... ...egins, "Until five years ... ...ublic Gardens is small, ...rushed retreat in the bus... ...wn—was best known ... ...van boats which used t... ...children around its lake, ...ipping the calm.

"But now," the ... ...ues, "that calm has b... ...rbed and the swanboats ...jected to a greater natu... ...e summer Arts Festival ...America's story grows ot... ...ly fiv... ...ersfield and his wife we... ...by the Public Gard... ...ght and the inspiration ...ts Festival struck them

NEW YORK CI... JOURNAL AM... Circ. D. 653,991 - S...

AUG 6 ...

Academy H... Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Ac... Music, the host for ... five-concerts subscrip... ...by the Boston Symp... ...chestra, is to sponso... ...at Tanglewood," a sp... ...day excursion to the ...Festival, next Sunda...

The program on th... closing day of the fe... ...tures Beethoven's N... ...phony, preceded by A... ...land's "Quiet City." ...Munch, music direc... Boston Symphony, w... and the soloists in ... Symphony will be A...

BROOKLYN, N. ... KINGS COURIE... W.

AUG 3 195...

...Academy Sp... ...shire Day, Aug... ...nday at Tanglew... ...y excursion, will ... ...by the Brooklyn A... ...sic on Sat., Aug. ...day of ...

...luncheon ...Cottage ... to the ...willfeature... ...mpony.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Brooklyn Daily
Circ. D. 36,575

JUL 23 1957

...klyn Academy To Sponsor ...Sunday at Tanglewood

...klyn Academy of Mus... ...t for an annual five-... ...subscription series by ... Symphony Orchestra, ... "Sunday at Tangle... ...special one-day excur... ...Berkshire Festival, on ...August 11th.

...gram on that Sunday, ...y of the festival, feat... ...ven's Ninth Symhony, ... by Aaron Copland's ...Quiet City." Charles Munch, ...ector of the Boston ... will conduct, and the ...in the Ninth Symphony ...dele Addison, soprano, ...Kopleff, contralto, John ... tenor, and Donald ...baritone. The Berkshire ...Chorus, trained by Hugh ...be heard in Schiller's ..."Joy" during the final ...t.

...r in Tanglewood," in... ...round trip transportation ...New Haven Railroad, a ...our of the Tanglewood ...including a visit to the ...ne Cottage, a luncheon ...g of a broiled half- ...relishes, beverage and ...plus, of course, the gen... ...ission to the concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

JUL 21 1957

Plan 'Sunday Music Tour'

A special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, "Sunday at Tanglewood," will be sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Aug. 11, closing day of the Festival.

Leaving Grand Central at 8:20 A.M., the trip includes travel on the New Haven Railroad, a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds, luncheon and general admission to the concert. The total cost is $10.

The program includes Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" also will be performed.

The Brooklyn Academy plays host annually to the Boston Symphony with a five-concert subscription series.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502

JUL 27 1957

Brooklyn SOCIETY

By RUTH G. DAVIS.

OFF ON A ONE-DAY EXCURSION to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra play at Tanglewood, Mass., on Sunday, Aug. 11, will be a group of friends of the orchestra and the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "Sunday at Tanglewood," as the event is called, has a two-fold purpose, to make new friends for the orchestra and new friends for the music lovers.

Among the early subscribers to this Berkshire Festival jaunt are Mrs. Donald M. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. Waters, Dr. Joseph Dalven, Dr. Nathan Krinsky, Stanley Mager, Sylvia Spindel, Edith G. Hardwick, Tessie Fogler, Phoebe H. Walker, Tilly Belford, M. Aaron Orrange, Rose Crystal, Mrs. M. A. Maze, Mrs. E. Vega Belvieau, Louis Cohen, Elizabeth Gelles, Sophie Koehler, Jeanette List, Mrs. Bernard Malbert, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Payson, Harry A. Richardson, Karsten Roedder, L. Rose, Mrs. Isaac Rosenberg, and Mrs. Maria F. Willis.

Ruth G. Davis

The musical program will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symhpony" in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be joined by soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

The excursion will include a round-trip railroad ticket, a guided tour of Tanglewood groups, including a visit to the Hawthorne cottage, luncheon and general admission to the concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502

AUG 1 1957

Brooklyn SOCIETY

(Miss Ruth G. Davis is on vacation.)

MORE THAN EIGHTY BROOKLYNITES are expected to travel to Tanglewood Aug. 11 to attend the final concert of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The excursion, an all-day affair, is being sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Included in the $10 admission fee will be train and bus transportation, a tour of the concert grounds, admission to the concert, and lunch.

The Brooklyn contingent will leave Grand Central Station at 8:20 a.m. and return home at 11:30 p.m. The Academy already has received 80 reservations. Persons may still get aboard by writing the Academy and enclosing a check or money order.

* * *

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - Sat. 172,502

AUG 6 1957

Tanglewood Trip Scheduled Sunday

The Brooklyn Academy of Music is accepting reservations for its trip to Tanglewood Sunday for the final performance of the Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony.

The excursion will include round trip by rail, a guided tour of the Tanglewood estate, lunch and admission to the concert. The charge is $10 a person.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN RECORD
Circ. W. 9,300

JUL 1957

Tanglewood Excursion On Academy List

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, August 11th.

The program on that Sunday, closing day of the festival, features Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

"Sunday in Tanglewood," costing only ten dollars ($10), includes round trp transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds including a visit to the Hawthorne Cottage, a luncheon consisting of a broiled half-chiken, relishes, beverage and dessert, plus, of course, the general admission to the concert. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a reserved seat, he may apply two dollars of the $10 "package" price toward locations at $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 or $6.50.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special leaves Grand Central Terminal August 11 at 8:20 a.m. (DST), returning at 11:30 p.m. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn 17, N.Y. (sterling 3-6700).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
AMSTERDAM NEWS
Circ. W. 38,992

JUL 27 1957

Plan Tanglewood Trip

"Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival on Sunday, Aug. 11, will be sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The closing-day festival will feature Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, playing Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502

AUG 9 1957

200 Signed Up For Tanglewood Trip

More than 200 persons have signed up for the Brooklyn Academy of Music's excursion to Tanglewood Sunday for the last concert of the Berkshire Music Festival.

For a $10 fee the music lovers will get round-trip train tickets, admission to the concert, lunch and a guided tour of the Tanglewood estate.

Because of the success of the trip, the Academy plans to repeat it several times next season and to have excursions to other cultural events.

New York, N.Y.
New York Mirror

July 28, 1957

Brooklyn Academy Backs Concert

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, host for an annual concert subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 11.

A special train will leave Grand Central at 8:20 a.m. returning at 11:30 p.m. A $10 charge covers transportation, guided tour of the grounds, luncheon and a general admission ticket to the concert.

The program will feature Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducting.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
KINGS COURIER
W.

AUG 3 1957

Special 1-Day Trip To Tanglewood Set

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, August 11th.

The program on that Sunday, closing day of the festival, features Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 4 1957

TO TANGLEWOOD

A special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., is being offered for next Sunday, Aug. 11, the closing day of the festival. Price of the tour is $10 and includes round-trip rail fare; admission to the concert, at which will be heard Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Charles Munch conducting; a guided tour of Tanglewood grounds and lunch. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenues, Brooklyn 17, N. Y. Telephone number is ST. 3-6700.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502

AUG 12 1957

Music Lovers Spend Perf... On Academy Trip to Tang...

By NAT CHRZAN,
Staff Writer.

The music lovers on the all-day outing to Tanglewood yesterday agreed only one thing was wrong with the trip—there won't be another until next year.

In every other respect, the excursion sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music was just perfect.

The weather, the musicians, the lunch, the transportation—each surpassed the high expectations of 233 culture-seekers from the metropolitan area who journeyed to the closing concert of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.

They and more than 15,000 others composed the largest crowd at the festival this summer.

Jubilant Close.

The trip opened on a borrowed note, $5 bill, as an elderly woman borrowed the money from William McKelvy Martin, academy director, just before the special train pulled out of Grand Central Station at 8:20 a.m. The unidentified lady explained that, in her haste to make subway connections, she had neglected to take any cash.

It closed on a jubilant note when Mr. Martin announced the names of the five winners in a drawing for long playing records.

Among the winners, who were picked as the train neared New York City at 11:30 p.m., was a lone Brooklynite, Clara Dowdell, 2366 E. 15th St.

The excursionists arrived in Tanglewood at 12:45 p.m. after a scenic bus ride from Stockbridge, Mass. They helped themselves to a luncheon and a self-conducted tour of the grounds before the concert began at 2:30 p.m.

Fabulous Lunch.

Virtually every member praised the meal, which included a heaping portion of fried chicken, potato salad, a roll, a peach, a brownie and milk.

"It was a fabulous lunch and put us in a receptive mood for the music," said Jerry Siegel, 31, of 20-65 18th St., Long Island City. Mr. Siegel was on the tour with Hy Cohen, 30, a friend who returned to his home in Los Angeles today.

The two bachelors [illegible] up the social angle of the trip. "A terrific way for people to get together," Mr. Cohen commented. "We met three women who gave me the name of a beautiful blonde ballet dancer in Los Angeles and you can be sure I'll look her [illegible]."

Mr. Cohen [illegible] Siegel bumped into another friend whom they hadn't seen in four years, Nathan Reisel, [illegible] E. 52nd St. Although Mr. Reisel didn't [illegible] the academy tour [illegible] for tickets, the [illegible] did make the trip, [illegible] as the result of the academy's publicity campaign of [illegible].

Quiet Atmosphere.

It was the first trip to Tanglewood [illegible] of the people. [illegible] 1859 E. 26th St., [illegible] her initial excursion with her friend, Frieda Krasner, 2021 [illegible] 24th St., was impressed by the quiet atmosphere and the picturesque surroundings at Tanglewood.

Ahmet Gursoy, of 535 W. 111th St., Manhattan, nodded his agreement. A native of Turkey, Mr. Gursoy said he enjoyed the informality of the audience, which relaxed in chairs in the huge music shed and sprawled on blankets on the grass outside.

"My friend and I," Mr. Gursoy said, "just met these people and I feel like we're old companions." He smiled at the Misses Jaffe and Krasner across the aisle and they smiled back.

The concert itself had a distinct Brooklyn flavor. The opening selection, "Quiet Horn," was composed by Aaron Copland, a native Brooklynite.

Arrangements Praised.

It was followed by Dr. Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. And back among the white-suited performers was Arthur Press, a former Williamsburg lad who has played with the Boston Symphony for more than a year.

Mr. Press, incidentally, will appear with the Boston Symphony this winter when it performs at the Brooklyn Academy on a once-a-month basis for five months, starting Nov. 15.

The excursionists were unanimous in praising Mr. Martin and his staff for the smoothly-run tour.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

JUL 19 1957

Academy 'Off' To Berkshires

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, Aug. 11.

The program, on the closing day of the festival, will feature Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City."

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special New Haven [illegible] will leave Grand Central [illegible] Aug. 11, [illegible] at 11:30 p.m. [illegible] may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette ave., telephone STerling 3-6700

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302

AUG 7 1957

Tanglewood Trek Deadline

Advance reservations for the special Sunday excursion to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, will close today.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. More than 100 Brooklynites are expected to join the caravan, leaving Grand Central at 8:20 A.M. and returning at 11:30 P.M.

The package fee of $10 includes admission to the concert, round-trip rail fare, a tour of the festival grounds and lunch.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y.
POST
Circ. W. 9,131

JUL 25 1957

...or Sunday in Tanglewood

...e Brooklyn Academy of Music, ...st for an annual five-concerts ...ription series by the Boston ...phony Orchestra, will sponsor ... at Tanglewood," a special ...y excursion to the Berkshire ...l on Sunday, August 11.

TIGHT BINDING

PASTE OVER

C227]

...ALD, TUESDAY, AUG. 6, ...

...uned Retreat'

...Berkshires

...citizens are going to get a look ...nd Boston's Public Garden this ...Information Agency.

...vers the Berkshire Music Festi... ...l at Tanglewoood, near Le... ...nd the annual Boston Arts Fes... ...f. The article is a hands... ...page spread, heavily illus... ...with photographs that ... ...an air view of the fes... ...nds at Tanglewood to pic... ...cians staring perplex... ...ipture in the Public Garden ...tching an artist with his ... Boylston street doing a p... ...of the Public Garden.

The Russian language tex... ...s; "In summertime, the ... America move outdoors"... ...es on to say that the two M... ...setts festivals are among ...t famous of such event... ...erica. In a note scaled ... ...y to Russian readers, the ... private estate in the Berks... ...re Tanglewood is held ... ...ibed as being "eighty four... ...es" in size. Russians don... ...eage measurements.

...dhering to the policy ... ...merica" laid out by the ... article on Massachuse... ...oid of any political ref... propaganda. "America" ...s to present a factual p... ...life in the United States ... garnishment.

...he magazine has been ...ed since last autumn. ...issued on a regular ba... ...e of distribution proble... Soviet Union. The ... ...ion is the tenth. Fifty ...d copies are printed at ... the United States Emb... ...cow says they sell lit... ...es.

...UTIOUS TEXT

...he text of the article on ...ns a little overly-cauti... ...ns. "Until five years ... ...lic Gardens small, ...ned retreat in the bus... ...n—was best known ... ...boat which used ... ...dren around its lake. ...time calm. ... ...now," the ... ...," that calm has ... ...ed, and the swanboats ... ...to a greater ... ...Arts Festival ... ...a stately city ... ...of the ... ...Enfield and his wife w... ...by the Public Gard... ...and the inspiration ... Festival struck them

NEW YORK CI...
JOURNAL AM...
Circ. D. 653,991 - ...
AUG 6

Academy H...
Tanglewood
The Brooklyn Ac...
Music, the host for ...
ve-concerts subscrip...
the Boston Symp... hestra, is to sponso...
Tanglewood," a sp... y excursion to the ...
stival, next Sunda...
The program on th...
sing day of the fe...
Beethoven's N...
hony, preceded by A... nd's "Quiet City."
unch; music direc...
oston Symphony, w...
nd the soloists in ...
rmphony ...
...ROOKLYN, N. ...
...INGS COURIE...
W.
AUG 3 ...
Academy Sp...
...re. Day, Aug. ...
...y at Tanglew...
excursion, will ...
the Brooklyn A... on Sat., Aug. ...

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502
JUL 27 1957

Brooklyn SOCIETY

By RUTH G. DAVIS.

OFF ON A ONE-DAY EXCURSION to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra play at Tanglewood, Mass., on Sunday, Aug. 11, will be a group of friends of the orchestra and the Brooklyn Academy of Music. "Sunday at Tanglewood," as the event is called, has a two-fold purpose, to make new friends for the orchestra and new friends for the music lovers.

Among the early subscribers to this Berkshire Festival jaunt are Mrs. Donald M. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin B. Waters, Dr. Joseph Dalven, Dr. Nathan Krinsky, Stanley Mager, Sylvia Spindel, Edith G. Hardwick, Tessie Fogler, Phoebe H. Walker, Tilly Belford, M. Aaron Orrange, Rose Crystal, Mrs. M. A. Maze, Mrs. E. Vega Belvieau, Louis Cohen, Elizabeth Gelles, Sophie Koehler, Jeanette List, Mrs. Bernard Malbert, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Payson, Harry A. Richardson, Karsten Roedder, L. Rose, Mrs. Isaac Rosenberg, and Mrs. Maria F. Willis.

Ruth G. Davis

The musical program will include Beethoven's "Ninth Symhpony" in which the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will be joined by soloists and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

The excursion will include a round-trip railroad ticket, a guided tour of Tanglewood groups, including a visit to the Hawthorne cottage, luncheon and general admission to the concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502
AUG 1 1957

Brooklyn SOCIETY

(Miss Ruth G. Davis is on vacation.)

MORE THAN EIGHTY BROOKLYNITES are expected to travel to Tanglewood Aug. 11 to attend the final concert of the Berkshire Music Festival.

The excursion, an all-day affair, is being sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Included in the $10 admission fee will be train and bus transportation, tour of the concert grounds, admission to the concert, and lunch.

The Brooklyn contingent will leave Grand Central Station at 8:20 a.m. and return home at 11:30 p.m. The Academy already has received 80 reservations. Persons may still get aboard by writing the Academy and enclosing a check or money order.

* * *

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502
AUG 12 1957

...anglewood Trip Scheduled Sunday

The Brooklyn Academy of Music is accepting reservations for its trip to Tanglewood Sunday for the final performance ...shire Festival ... approved ... good faith." ... pleased ... costume ... federal courts ... deserved ... shameful ... prepare ... has been ... to ...

Music Lovers Spend Perfect Day On Academy Trip to Tanglewood

By NAT CHRZAN,
Staff Writer.

The music lovers on the all-day outing to Tanglewood yesterday agreed only one thing was wrong with the trip—there won't be another until next year.

In every other respect, the excursion sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music was just perfect.

The weather, the musicians, the lunch, the transportation—each surpassed the high expectations of 233 culture-seekers from the metropolitan area who journeyed to the closing concert of the 1957 Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.

They and more than 15,000 others composed the largest crowd at the festival this summer.

Jubilant Close.

The trip opened on a borrowed note, $5 bill, as an elderly woman borrowed the money from William McKelvy Martin, academy director, just before the special train pulled out of Grand Central Station at 8:20 a.m. The unidentified lady explained that, in her haste to make subway connections, she had neglected to take any cash.

It closed on a jubilant note when Mr. Martin announced the names of the five winners in a drawing for long playing records.

Among the winners, who were picked as the train neared New York City at 11:30 p.m., was a lone Brooklynite, Clara Dowdell, 2366 E. 15th St.

The excursionists arrived in Tanglewood at 12:45 p.m. after a scenic bus ride from Stockbridge, Mass. They helped themselves to a luncheon and a self-conducted tour of the grounds before the concert began at 2:30 p.m.

Fabulous Lunch.

Virtually every member praised the meal, which included a heaping portion of fried chicken, potato salad, a roll, a peach, a brownie and milk.

"It was a fabulous lunch and put us in a receptive mood for the music," said Jerry Siegel, 31, of 20-65 18th St., Long Island City. Mr. Siegel was on the tour with Hy Cohen, 30, a friend who returned to his home in Los Angeles today.

The two buddies played up the social angle of the trip. "A terrific way for people to get together," Mr. Cohen commented. "We met these women who gave me the name of a beautiful blonde ballet dancer in Los Angeles and you can be sure I'll look her up."

Mr. Cohen and Mr. Siegel bumped into another friend whom they hadn't seen in four years, Arthur Weisel, 26 E. 52nd St. Although Mr. Weisel didn't [illegible] Academy tour [illegible] for tickets, the trip did make the trip, [illegible] as the result of the academy's publicity campaign.

Quiet Atmosphere.

It was the first trip to Tanglewood for many of the people. Jeanette Katz, 1859 E. 26th St., who made her initial excursion with her friend, Frieda Krasner, 2021 E. 24th St., was impressed by the quiet atmosphere and the picturesque surroundings at Tanglewood.

Ahmet Gursoy, of 535 W. 111th St., Manhattan, nodded his agreement. A native of Turkey, Mr. Gursoy said he enjoyed the informality of the audience, which relaxed in chairs in the huge music shed and sprawled on blankets on the grass outside.

"My friend and I," Mr. Gursoy said, "just met these people and I feel like we're old companions." He smiled at the Misses Jaffe and Krasner across the aisle and they smiled back.

The concert itself had a distinct Brooklyn flavor. The opening selection, "Quiet Horn," was composed by Aaron Copland, a native Brooklynite.

Arrangements Praised.

It was followed by Dr. Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. And back among the white-suited performers was Arthur Press, a Williamsburg lad who has played with the Boston Symphony for more than a year.

Mr. Press, incidentally, will appear with the Boston Symphony this winter when it performs at the Brooklyn Academy on a once-a-month basis for five months, starting Nov. 15.

The excursionists were unanimous in praising Mr. Martin and his staff for the smoothly-run tour.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
Brooklyn Daily
Circ. D. 36,575
JUL 23 1957

...klyn Academy To Sponsor ... Sunday at Tanglewood'

...klyn Academy of Mus... ...s for an annual five-... subscription series by ... Symphony Orchestra, ... "Sunday at Tangle... special one-day excur... Berkshire Festival, on ...August 11th.

...gram on that Sunday, ...y of the festival, feat... ...ven's Ninth Symhony, ... by Aaron Copland's ...Sky." Charles Munch, ...ector of the Boston ... will conduct, and the ... the Ninth Symphony ...ble Addison, soprano, ...leff, contralto, John ... tenor, and Donald ...itone. The Berkshire ...Chorus, trained by Hugh ...d be heard in Schiller's ...Joy" during the final ...t.

...r in Tanglewood," in... ...round trip transportation ...New Haven Railroad, a ...our of the Tanglewood ... including a visit to the ...e Cottage, a luncheon ...g of a broiled half-... relishes, beverage and ...plus, of course, the gen... ...ission to the concert.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 518,809 - S. 172,502
JUL 27 1957

Plan 'Sunday Music Tour'

A special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, "Sunday at Tanglewood," will be sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Aug. 11, closing day of the Festival.

Leaving Grand Central at 8:20 A.M., the trip includes travel on the New Haven Railroad, a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds, luncheon and general admission to the concert. The total cost is $10.

The program includes Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" also will be performed.

The Brooklyn Academy plays host annually to the Boston Symphony with a five-concert subscription series.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
KINGS COURIER
W.
AUG 3 1957

Special 1-Day Trip To Tanglewood Set

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, August 11th.

The program on that Sunday, closing day of the festival, features Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.
BROOKLYN RECORD
Circ. W. 9,300
JUL 1957

Tanglewood Excursion On Academy List

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, August 11th.

The program on that Sunday, closing day of the festival, features Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

"Sunday in Tanglewood," costing only ten dollars ($10), includes round trip transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a guided tour of the Tanglewood grounds including a visit to the Hawthorne Cottage, a luncheon consisting of a broiled half-chiken, relishes, beverage and dessert, plus, of course, the general admission to the concert. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a reserved seat, he may apply two dollars of the $10 "package" price toward locations at $2.50, $3, $3.50, $4, $5.50 or $6.50.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special leaves Grand Central Terminal August 11 at 8:20 a.m. (DST), returning at 11:30 p.m. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn 17, N.Y. (Sterling 3-6700).

NEW YORK, N. Y.
AMSTERDAM NEWS
Circ. W. 38,992
JUL 27 1957

Plan Tanglewood Trip

"Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival on Sunday, Aug. 11, will be sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the host for an annual five-concerts series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The closing-day festival will feature Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony, playing Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
World-Telegram & Sun
Circ. D. 569,290 - S. 172,502
AUG 9 1957

200 Signed Up For Tanglewood Trip

More than 200 persons have signed up for the Brooklyn Academy of Music's excursion to Tanglewood Sunday for the last concert of the Berkshire Music Festival.

For a $10 fee the music lovers will get round-trip train tickets, admission to the concert, lunch and a guided tour of the Tanglewood estate.

Because of the success of the trip, the Academy plans to repeat it several times next season and to have excursions to other cultural events.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293
AUG 4 1957

TO TANGLEWOOD

A special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., is being offered for next Sunday, Aug. 11, the closing day of the festival. Price of the tour is $10 and includes round-trip rail fare; admission to the concert, at which will be heard Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Charles Munch conducting; a guided tour of Tanglewood grounds and lunch. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenues, Brooklyn 17, N. Y. Telephone number is ST. 3-6700.

New York, N.Y.
New York Mirror
July 28, 1957

To Berkshires

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, host for an annual five-concerts subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, on Sunday, Aug. 11.

The program, on the closing day of the festival, will feature Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City."

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct, and the soloists in the Ninth Symphony will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, baritone.

The Berkshire Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will be heard in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" during the final movement.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special New Haven train will leave Grand Central Terminal Aug. 11, at 8:20 a.m., returning at 11:30 p.m. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette ave., telephone STerling 3-6700

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302
AUG 7 1957

Tanglewood Trek Deadline

Advance reservations for the special Sunday excursion to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, sponsored by the Brooklyn Academy of Music, will close today.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will perform Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. More than 100 Brooklynites are expected to join the caravan, leaving Grand Central at 8:20 A. M. and returning at 11:30 P. M.

The package price of $10 includes admission to the concert, round-trip rail fare, a tour of the festival grounds and lunch.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y.
POST
Circ. W. 9,131
JUL 25 1957

...or Sunday in Tanglewood

...Brooklyn Academy of Music, ...st for an annual five-concerts ...cription series by the Boston ...phony Orchestra, will sponsor ...day at Tanglewood," a special ...-day excursion to the Berkshire ...Festival on Sunday, August 11.

Brooklyn Academy Backs Concert

The Brooklyn Academy of Music, host for an annual concert subscription series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will sponsor "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., on Aug. 11.

A special train will leave Grand Central at 8:20 a.m. returning at 11:30 p.m. A $10 charge covers transportation, guided tour of the grounds, luncheon and a general admission ticket to the concert.

The program will feature Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, conducting.

BLANK PAGE

[228]

BLANK PAGE

TIGHT BINDING

[230]

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 5 - 1957

Berkshire Festival Closes Its 20th Season This Week

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place this week.

To Feature Beethoven

Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, just prior to its departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday night Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 "Liturgique" which was performed by the Orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Munch To Close Festival

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, Soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January, 1941.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented at 8:30 Wednesday evening. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (Soloist: James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto with Trumpet Obligato (Soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet). The Zimbler Sinfonietta, which is made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Josef Zimbler, will leave immediately after the Tanglewood season on a two months tour of Central and South America.

Annual Benefit

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held on Thursday. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5.45. Simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department will take place at 6. At 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds.

At 8.30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Liskin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

The second of two concerts of Modern Chamber Music presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be heard tomorrow evening at 8.30, and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

A concert by Fromm Fellows, young musicians who are working with contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer also under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, will be given on Friday afternoon at 2.30 and will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varese and Karl Kohn, a member of the school's faculty.

Two Final Lectures

In addition to these concerts the two final lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held on Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 3.15. Irving Fine and Aaron Copland will discuss Contemporary Americans. All these events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Friends may also attend the final concert of the Student Orchestra in the Music Shed Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the final Chamber Music Concert on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra 10 o'clock will be open to the public, the proceeds going to the Orchestra's pension fund.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 3 - 1957

Busy Week Winds Up Season At Tanglewood; Gala On Thursday

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, August 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday (Aug 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique"). The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday (Aug. 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented on Aug. 7. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (Soloist: James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two string orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto with Trumpet Obbligato (Soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet).

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade", will be held on Aug. 8. Following two special performances by the opera department and the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 P. M., the ceremonies will open with a fanfare and welcome at 5:45, and 6:00 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. At 7 p.m. there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds. At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town", and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land". After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville", Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave", Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Liokin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 9 - 1957

Concert Tonight At Tanglewood

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts this and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat music shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Bethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 2 - 1957

Preparing for Beethoven Ninth at Tanglewood

The friendly, informal spirit of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood is not confined to the concertgoers alone, as the above picture attests. These are the soloists and conductor who will take part in the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in the Music Shed, Sunday afternoon, the 11th, at 2. Left to right, they are, Donald Gramm, bass; John McCollum, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Charles Munch, Boston Symphony conductor, and Adele Addison, soprano.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 6 - 1957

Final Tanglewood Concerts To Feature Beethoven Wor[k] Under Munch, Schuri[cht]

Johannes Brahms was the honored composer for the fifth weekend of the Boston Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, with Egk, Barber and Piston respectively sharing the three programs.

Friday evening introduced the distinguished guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, who visited this country last year with the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, and earlier this summer conducted concerts at Ravinia Park in Chicago. Slight, almost frail in stature, his forceful and penetrating control of the Boston Symphony revealed an experienced and dedicated artist. The Tragic Overture was all that one could desire; and although the first Symphony of Brahms was given unorthodox treatment, especially tempi-wise, the whole was effectively gratifying. Mr. Schuricht's paucity of directive movement was no deterrent to the orchestra's understanding of his interpretation, the results clearly evident in their keenly responsive performance. The contemporary contribution was Werner Egk's "Georgica," based on folk-tunes of his native Bavaria. These rollicking, lusty melodies and gentle waltz were agreeably intriguing clothed in modern and sometimes quite dissonant harmonies. This was the only time Mr. Egk used a score. The audience was completely unrestrained in their approval of this modest conductor, who seemed quite touched by their wild enthusiasm.

Saturday evening, though a fearsome one weatherwise, saw Dr. Munch back on the podium opening the concert with Brahms' first mature orchestral composition, "Variations on a Theme By Haydn"; followed by Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" originally a ballet, and first danced by Martha Graham. As if part of the score, a mellifluous roll of thunder reverberated through the Shed with the darkly tragic opening, contributing its own special coloring to an intensely interesting score. Isaac Stern made his second appearance of the season in a superb performance of the violin Concerto in D major; a powerful yet sensitive violinist, at one with his instrument, neither thunder, lightning nor rain deterred his concentration, nor dimmed the lustre of his tone, his virtuosity superceding that of the elements, which served only to intensify the pleasure of the whole program.

Sunday afternoon brou[ght] total number of attendanc[e] the 25,000 mark, and this [was] continued rainy weather[.] Munch conducted [the] Boston Symphony Orchestra [in] Overture as fresh and spo[n]tous as a first dealing [with] Pisson's Fifth Symphony, [a] profound composition. Worked out the various [ele]ments used precisely and [ca]refully, but nonetheless with[out] ing of transparent susp[ense] was the contemporary con[trast] the finished profundit[y] Brahms.

Rudolf Serkin was the [soloist] in the final number, the [Brahms] piano concerto in B flat. A [work] a symphony for piano [and] chestra, the piano is much time subservient to the [or]tra. Mr. Serkin's vigorou[s] and caressing tone was an [excel]lent match for the orc[hestra] which Dr. Munch compelle[d] marvellous sensitivity, the clearly heard when [the] though at times the [piano] seemed muffled, due no d[oubt] atmospheric conditions. T[he] last movements were str[ong] beautiful; the cello solo [in] Andante by Samuel Maye[r] soribantly touching. Its [re]ference against constantly [ris]ing trills and soft arpeg[gios] the piano left one breathle[ss] audience seemed desirous [of] longing their applause in[to] ly, recalling Mr. Serkin a[nd] Munch, both of whom sha[red] stage with Mr. Mayes, in[to] able times.

The final concerts of th[is] val will include the Zimb[ler] fonietta on Wednesday [with] in works by Boyce, Ta[ns]Boccherini, Mozart and Sh[os]vitch; the annual "Tan[gle]on Parade" Thursday [with] Charles Munch and Aar[on] land conducting the Bost[on] phony and the Boston P[ops] ducted by Arthur Feidler Nash narrating his ver[sion] Saint-Saens' "Carnival [of] mals"; simultaneous con[certs] student orchestra, opera [and] composers, and the Tan[glewood] Study Group, starting [at] reserved ticket holders [at] 5:45 for all admissions. [On] and Saturday evenings [and] day afternoon will [be] music of Beethoven and [Brahms] conducted by the music [director] Charles Munch and by g[uest] ductor, Carl Schuricht.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 1 - 1957

Final Concerts At Tanglewood Shed Aug. 9, 10, 11

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert tomorrow Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra on Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterso, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January 1941.

[...]ncert of modern chamber [...] will be presented by the [...] Fellowship Players in the [...]r Music Hall at Tanglewood [...]day afternoon at 2:30. The [...] features works by William [...]Carese, Roussel, Karl Kohn [...]rinsky. The concert is open [...] of the Berkshire Music [...]

[...] Fellowship Players [...] professional musicians [...]

[...] sponsoring the summer work[...] a contemporary music at the [...]ire Music Center under the [...]s of the Fromm Music Foun[...] of Chicago, Paul Fromm, [...]ident. They perform works by [...]ent composers at weekly Com[...]r Forums, work in association [...] the Music Center's composition [...]rtment, and give two concerts [...]dern chamber music during the [...]sion of the school.

[...]e opening work on the pro[...], William Denny's String Quar[...] was commissioned by the Fromm [...]e Foundation. Following this, [...]ent conductor Gustav Meier of [...]ich, Switzerland, will conduct a [...]formance of Edgard [...]arese's "Oc[...]ne." Also on the program are [...]nn's "Serenade [...] Karl [...]n's Concert [...] Twelve [...]ds, which will be [...] by [...] composer, who is [...] of [...] Berkshire Mu[...] cul[...] The program [...] with [...]erformance of [...] "Pri[...]ntil," conducted [...] Maz[...] of the Boston Symphony, with [...]so soloist Naomi Farr.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
AUG 1 1957

Final Concerts At Tanglewood Shed Aug. 9, 10, 11

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonetta will be heard on Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert tomorrow Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra on Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer, Boris Blacher, who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January 1941.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held this evening. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and The Tanglewood Study Group at 4:00 p. m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45, and 6:00 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestras, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. At 7:00 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds.

At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land."

After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

A concert of modern chamber music will be presented by the Fromm Fellowship Players in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood on Friday afternoon at 2:30. The program features works by William Denny, Carese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Fromm Fellowship Players are 11 young professional musicians who are spending the summer working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, president. They perform works by student composers at weekly Composers' Forums, work in association with the Music Center's composition department, and give two concerts of modern chamber music during the 1957 session of the school.

The opening work on the program, William Denny's String Quartet, was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation. Following this, student conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, will conduct a performance of Edgard Varese's "Octandre." Also on the program are Roussel's "Serenade" and Karl Kohn's Concert Music for Twelve Winds, which will be conducted by the composer, who is a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. The program will conclude with a performance of Stravinsky's "Pribaoutki," conducted by Sergio Mazzeo of the Boston Symphony, with soprano soloist Naomi Farr.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 8 - 1957

20th Music Festival Closes on Sunday

Week-end Concerts Feature Music of Beethoven

Annual Tanglewood on Parade Is Attraction Tonight.—Copland and Fiedler to Conduct.—Schuricht on Podium Saturday Evening.—Munch to Direct Farewell Performance.

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place this week-end. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch, and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

"Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place this evening, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Lenore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor on Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer, Boris Blacher, who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on December 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony."

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voison, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January, 1941.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held this evening. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and The Tanglewood Study Group at 4:00 p. m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45, and 6:00 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestras, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. At 7:00 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds.

At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land."

After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
AUG 4 - 1957

Berkshire Music Festival Moves Into Closing Week

Munch, Schuricht and Copland to Conduct Final Concerts in Shed; Tanglewood-on-Parade Slated for Thursday Night

Lenox, Aug. 3—The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch, and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Eroica and Ninth

At the concert of Friday (Aug. 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tangelwood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra on Saturday evening (Aug. 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for Trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January, 1941.

Chamber Music

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented on Aug. 7 at 8.30. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (soloist: James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto with Trumpet Obbligato (soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet). The Zimbler Sinfonietta, which is made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Josef Zimbler, will leave immediately after the Tanglewood season on a two-months' tour of Central and South America.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held on Thursday evening, Aug. 8. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p. m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5.45, and 6, simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tangelwood composers, and opera department. At 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tangelwood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds.

At 8.30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will being the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land."

After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Complete programs for the week follow:

Wednesday, Aug. 7, 8.30, Chamber Music, Zimbler Sinfonietta
Boyce ..... Symphony No. 1
Tansman ..... Triptych
Boccherini ..... Concerto for Flute and Strings
(Soloist: James Pappoutsakes)
Mozart .... Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K. 239
Shostakovitch .. Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35
(Piano: Menahem Pressler; Trumpet Roger Voisin)
Thursday, Aug. 8, 8.30 p. m., Tanglewood-on-Parade
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Schumann .. Symphony No. 4 in D minor
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Copland ..... Suite from 'Our Town" Excerpts from "The Tender Land"
(Conducted by the composer)
Boston Pops Orchestra
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Rossini .... Overture to "The Barber of Seville"
Tchaikovsky ..... Marche Slave
Saint-Saens .... Carnival of the Animals
(Piano soloists: Ralph Berkowitz, Seymour Lipkin)
Loewe .... "My Fair Lady" Selections
(Encores)
Friday, Aug. 9, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Beethoven .... Leonore Overture No. 3
Honegger ..... Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique")
Beethoven ..... Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)
Saturday, Aug. 10, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Carl Schuricht conducting)
Blacher ..... Konzertante Musik
Schubert ..... Unfinished Symphony
Beethoven .. Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")
Sunday, Aug. 11, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Copland ..... "Quiet City"
Beethoven ..... Symphony No. 9
(Soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm)
Berkshire Festival Chorus

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 8 - 1957

-:- SOLOIST -:-

FLORENCE KOPLEFF

Miss Kopleff, contralto, returns to the Berkshire Festival at Lenox to appear as one of the soloists in a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed. Other soloists are Adele Addison, John McCollum and Donald Gramm. Charles Munch directs the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus.

[231]
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
AUG 3 - 1957

Music Festival In Final Week At Tanglewood

Varied Program Offered as 20th Season Draws to Close

Lenox, Aug. 3—The final concerns of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique") which was performed by the Orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra next Saturday evening closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January, 1941.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented at 8.30. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (soloist: James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto and Trumpet Obbligato (soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet). The Zimbler Sinfonietta, which is made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Josef Zimbler, will leave immediately after the Tanglewood season on a two months' tour of Central and South America.

TIGHT BINDING

[2327]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 6 - 1957

Music Festival To End Sunday At Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 5 — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra brings its 20th season to a close next Sunday, Aug. 11, with a performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony. Preceding the closing concert will be a splendid series of programs starting Wednesday and including the gala "Tanglewood On Parade," the annual event that draws thousands to the beautiful festival grounds at Tanglewood here.

Concert Programs

The complete programs for the remaining concerts in the festival season are as follows:

Wednesday, Aug. 7, 8:30, Chamber Music, Zimbler Sinfonietta
Boyce ..... Symphony No. 1
Tansman ..... Triptych
Boccherini ..... Concerto for Flute and Strings
(Soloist: James Pappoutsakes)
Mozart .... Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestra, K. 239
Shostakovitch ... Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35
(Piano: Menahem Pressler; Trumpet Roger Voisin)

Thursday, Aug. 8, 8:30 p. m., Tanglewood-On-Parade
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Schumann ... Symphony No. 4 in D minor
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Copland ..... Suite from "Our Town"
Excerpts from "The Tender Land"
(Conducted by the composer)
Boston Pops Orchestra
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Rossini ..... Overture to "The Barber of Seville"
Tchaikovsky ..... Marche Slave
Saint-Saens .... Carnival of the Animals
(Piano soloists: Ralph Berkowitz, Seymour Lipkin)
Loewe .... "My Fair Lady" Selections
(Encores)

Friday, Aug. 9, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Beethoven .... Leonore Overture No. 3
Honegger ..... Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique")
Beethoven ..... Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)

Saturday, Aug. 10, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Carl Schuricht conducting)
Blacher ..... Konzertante Musik
Schubert ..... Unfinished Symphony
Beethoven .. Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")

Sunday, Aug. 11, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Copland ..... "Quiet City"
Beethoven ..... Symphony No. 9
(Soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm)
Berkshire Festival Chorus

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 9 - 1957

Final Tanglewood Series Opens In Music Shed Tonight

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and tomorrow evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,600-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist. Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgical") by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht, guest conductor, will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with trumpet solo by Roger Voisin and English horn solo by Louis Speyer. Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 o'clock will be open to the public.

The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will present its final weekly concert of the 1957 season tomorrow afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed. The program features works by Beethoven, Prokofieff, Walton, Brahms, Haydn and De Falla. Four student conductors will share the podium, with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and Seymour Lipkin, both of the Music Center faculty.

On Sunday morning the sixth and final chamber music concert will feature works by Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Schoenberg and Brahms. Both concerts are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1957

Beethoven Works To Be Featured at Festival's Closing

Lenox, Aug. 8—Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 9-10) at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 11) at 2:30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto Friday night, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht; Saturday night and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Friday's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

General admission to all concerts is available on the day of the concert at $2.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 will be open to the public. Admission is $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

Concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the mer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the shed at 3 p. m. Saturday, and the final student chamber music concert Sunday morning at 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

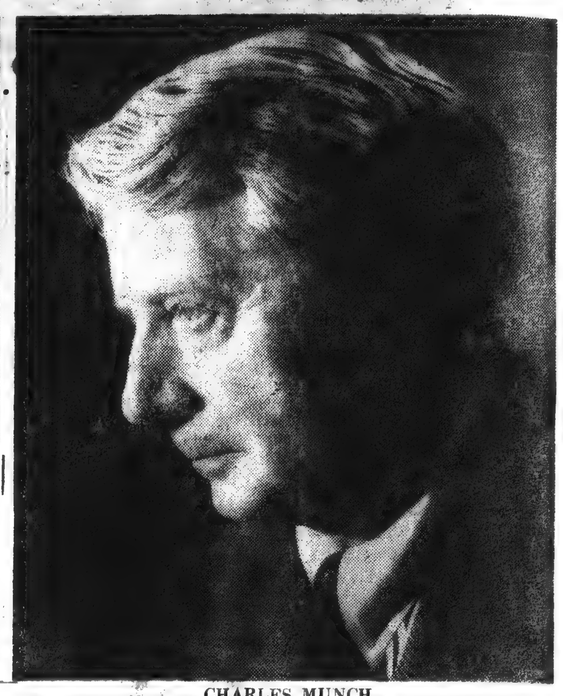
THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 11,

In Closing Concert at Tanglewood This Afternoo

ADELE ADDISON



CHARLES MUNCH

JOHN McCOLLU

The final concert of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, takes place in the Shed this afternoon at 2.30. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Soloists will be Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 9 - 1957

THREE FINAL SESSIONS AT TANGLEWOOD

Music of Beethoven to Be Featured in Closing Stanzas

Lenox, Aug. 9—Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts tonight and tomorrow evening at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Isaac Stern Tonight

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

ISAAC STERN

General admission to all concerts is available on the day of the concert.

The tomorrow morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 will be open to the public. Nominal admission for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a special concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the Shed at 3 p. m. tomorrow and the final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall.

Post
WALLINGFORD, C
Weekly Indepe
Circ. 3,408

AUG 8 1957

JOHN McCOLLUM, te turns to the Berkshi
tival to appear as one soloists in a performa
Beethoven's Symphony
on Sunday afternoon,
11 at 2:30 in the Musi
Other soloists are Ad
dison, Florence Kepl
Donald Gramm.
Munch directs the
Symphony Orchestra
Berkshire Festival Ch

ADELE ADDISON, s returns to Tanglewood pear as one of the sol a performance of Beet
Symphony No. 9 on afternoon, August 11
p.m. in the Music She er soloists are Florenc
leff, John McCollu
Donald Gramm.
Munch directs the
Symphony Orchestra
Berkshire Festival Ch

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

AUG 3 - 1957

Balon

Donald Gramm will be baritone soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on the concluding program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742

AUG 4 - 1957

Final Concerts Set At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 3 — The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will take place in the coming week.

Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on next Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening just prior to their departure on a South American tour.

"Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047

AUG 4 - 1957

Mus

National Ball Pleases at J

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

A youthful, energetic, and crack-spelling company is Th National Ballet of Canada tha recently held its own, durin fifty-silver jubilee of the Jacob Pillow Dance Festival at Le Nothing short of a triump calls much ice at the Pillo this season. It would seem that Ted Shawn, the impre sario, has combed the un verse to exceed anything pr viously accomplished at th world's foremost dance cen ter.

During the nine weeks th will end on the last day August, he will have presente the foremost dancers fro Denmark, Peru, Haiti, Canad Spain, Scotland, Russia an Oriental countries, as well American Indians.

It was pretty obvious fro his curtain talk that Shaw has a special regard for th Canadian group.

They made their Americ debut at the Pillow in 19 and he declared that their r turn was an absolute "mu for the silver jubilee.

Engaging Efforts

Their most engaging effo were devoted to a feathe weight but delightful set portraits called "Les Rende Vous" and five intense, sy bolic poems of motion, tit "Dark Elegies."

The first of these was a hap conglomeration of the "b meets girl" thesis. It did overwork techniques but co tented itself with whole flirtations, using agility a smiles as the primary enti ments.

Joy has never been mo heavily underscored than the "Variation" by Ang Leigh to whom Frederick A ton, the choreographer, g some of his most attract and original patterns.

Less secure was the m ornate "Variation" by Kraul, but there still was vitality in his work and a freshing ebullience.

Vital Portrayal

Based on Gustav Mahl "Songs of the Death of fants," the beauties of grief reconciliation were vitally p trayed in "Dark Elegi Choreography by Antony dor calls for five graphic mo to be transmitted thro whirling, symbolical action.

Little doubt existed in second song, "Ah, now I k why oft I caught you gaz

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 9 - 1957

Norman Clark, Jr.
Charles Munch, conduc
Symphony, poses informall he will sing in Beethoven

TIGHT BINDING

[2327]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 6 - 1957

Music Festival To End Sunday At Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 5 — The Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra brings its 20th season to a close next Sunday, Aug. 11, with a performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony. Preceding the closing concert will be a splendid series of programs starting Wednesday and including the gala "Tanglewood On Parade," the annual event that draws thousands to the beautiful festival grounds at Tanglewood here.

Concert Programs

The complete programs for the remaining concerts in the festival season are as follows:

Wednesday, Aug. 7, 8:30, Chamber Music, Zimbler Sinfonietta
Boyce ..... Symphony No. 1
Tansman ..... Triptych
Boccherini ..... Concerto for Flute and Strings
(Soloist: James Pappoutsakes)
Mozart .... Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestra, K. 239
Shostakovitch ... Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35
(Piano: Menahem Pressler; Trumpet Roger Voisin)

Thursday, Aug. 8, 8:30 p. m., Tanglewood-On-Parade
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Schumann .. Symphony No. 4 in D minor
(Conducted by Charles Munch)
Copland ..... Suite from "Our Town"
Excerpts from "The Tender Land"
(Conducted by the composer)
Boston Pops Orchestra
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Rossini ..... Overture to "The Barber of Seville"
Tchaikovsky ..... Marche Slave
Saint-Saens .... Carnival of the Animals
(Piano soloists: Ralph Berkowitz, Seymour Lipkin)
Loewe .... "My Fair Lady" Selections
(Encores)

Friday, Aug. 9, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Beethoven .... Leonore Overture No. 3
Honegger ..... Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique")
Beethoven ..... Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)

Saturday, Aug. 10, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Carl Schuricht conducting)
Blacher ..... Konzertante Musik
Schubert ..... Unfinished Symphony
Beethoven .. Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")

Sunday, Aug. 11, 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch conducting)
Copland ..... "Quiet City"
Beethoven ..... Symphony No. 9
(Soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McColum, Donald Gramm)
Berkshire Festival Chorus

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 9 - 1957

Final Tanglewood Series Opens In Music Shed Tonight

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and tomorrow evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgical") by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht, guest conductor, will present the Konzertante Music of Boris Blacher, several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with trumpet solo by Roger Voisin and English horn solo by Louis Speyer. Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 o'clock will be open to the public.

The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will present its final weekly concert of the 1957 season tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed. The program features works by Beethoven, Prokofieff, Walton, Haydn and De Falla. Four student conductors will appear on the podium, with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and Seymour Lipkin, both of the Music Center faculty.

On Sunday morning the sixth and final chamber music concert will feature works by Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Schoenberg and Brahms. Both concerts are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1957

Beethoven Works To Be Featured at Festival's Closing

Lenox, Aug. 8—Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 9-10) at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 11) at 2:30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto Friday night, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht; Saturday night and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Friday's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger.

Saturday evening's concert Carl Schuricht, will present the Konzertante Music of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

General admission to all concerts is available on the day of the concert at $2.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 will be open to the public. Admission is $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

Concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the [illegible] summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the shed at 3 p. m. Saturday, and the final student chamber music concert Sunday morning at 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 52,742

AUG 4 - 1957

Final Concerts Set At Tanglewood

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, Aug. 3 — The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, will take place in the coming week.

Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on next Friday and Saturday evenings and next Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

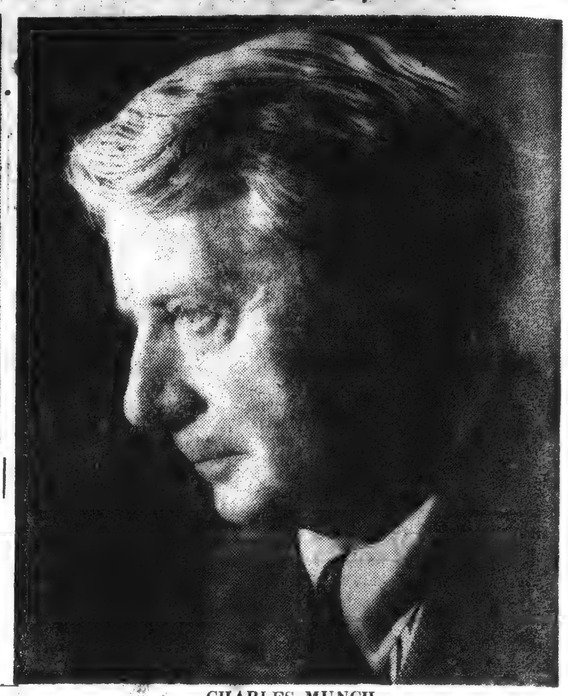
The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening just prior to their departure on a South American tour.

"Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening and in addition to special performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 11,

In Closing Concert at Tanglewood This Afternoo

ADELE ADDISON



CHARLES MUNCH

JOHN McCOLLU

The final concert of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, takes place in the Shed this afternoon at 2.30. Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Soloists will be Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 9 - 1957

THREE FINAL SESSIONS AT TANGLEWOOD

Music of Beethoven to Be Featured in Closing Stanzas

Lenox, Aug. 9—Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final week end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts tonight, tomorrow evening at 8.30 and Sunday afternoon at 2.30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow night and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

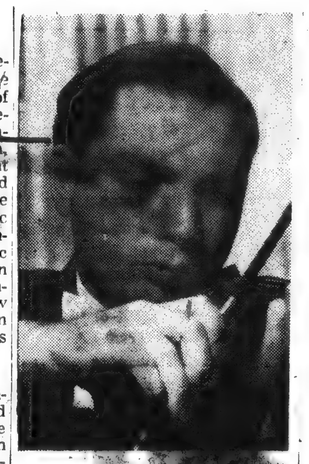
Stern Tonight

Friday's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. Saturday evening's concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

General admission to all concerts is available on the day of the concert.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 will be open to the public. Nominal admission for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a special concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the Shed at 3 p. m. tomorrow and the final student chamber music concert Sunday morning at 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall.



ISAAC STERN

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566

AUG 3 - 1957

Balon

Donald Gramm will be baritone soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony on the concluding program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11.

JOHN McCOLLUM, te
turns to the Berkshi
tival to appear as one soloists in a perform
Beethoven's Symphon
on Sunday afternoon,
11 at 2:30 in the Musi
Other soloists are Ad
dison, Florence Kepl
Donald Gramm.
Munch directs the
Symphony Orchestra
Berkshire Festival Ch

ADELE ADDISON, returns to Tanglewoo pear as one of the so a performance of Bee
Symphony No. 9 on afternoon, August 11
p.m. in the Music She er soloists are Floren
leff, John McCollu
Donald Gramm.
Munch directs the Symphony Orchestr
Berkshire Festival Ch

Post
WALLINGFORD, C
Weekly Indepe
Circ. 3,408

AUG 8 1957

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 9 - 1957

Telegram
ORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047

AUG 4 - 1957

Mus

National Ba Pleases at J

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

A youthful, energetic, s appealing company is T
National Ballet of Canada t iently held its own. dur silver jubilee of the Jacq
Pillow Dance Festival at L

Nothing short of a triumv much ice at the Pill season. It would see that Ted Shawn, the impr ario, has combed the u verse to exceed anything p viously accomplished at world's foremost dance c ter.

During the nine weeks will end on the last day
August, he will have preser the foremost dancers fr
Denmark, Peru, Haiti, Cana
Spain, Scotland, Russia a
Oriental countries, as well
American Indians.

It was pretty obvious fr his curtain talk that Sha has a special regard for Canadian group.

They made their Ameri debut at the Pillow in 1 and he declared that their turn was an absolute "m for the silver jubilee.

Engaging Efforts

Their most engaging eff were devoted to a feath weight but delightful se portraits called "Les Rend Vous," and five intense, s bolic poems of motion, ti
"Dark Elegies."

The first of these was a ha conglomeration of the " meets girl" thesis. It di overwork techniques but c tented itself with whole flirtations, using agility smiles as the primary enti ments.

Joy has never been m heavily underscored than the "Variation" by An Leigh to whom Frederick A ton, the choreographer, s some of his most attrac and original patterns.

Less secure was the n ornate "Variation" by Kraul, but there still was vitality in his work and a freshing ebullience.

Vital Portrayal

Based on Gustav Mah
"Songs of the Death of fants," the beauties of grief reconciliation were vitally p trayed in "Dark Elegi Choreography by Antony dor calls for five graphic mo to be transmitted thro whirling, symbolical action

Little doubt existed in second song, "Ah, now I k
why oft I caught you gaz

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675

AUG 9 - 1957

m Clark, Jr.
Charles Munch, conduc
rehears, poses informall will sing in Beethoven

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
AUG 4 - 1957

Mus

National Ballet of Canada Pleases at Jacob's Pillow

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Youthful, energetic, and appealing company is The National Ballet of Canada that recently held its own during the silver jubilee of the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee.

Nothing short of a triumph was much ice at the Pillow this season. It would seem that Ted Shawn, the impresario, has combed the universe to exceed anything previously accomplished at the world's foremost dance center.

During the nine weeks that will end on the last day of August, he will have presented the foremost dancers from Denmark, Peru, Haiti, Canada, Spain, Scotland, Russia and Oriental countries, as well as American Indians.

It was pretty obvious from his curtain talk that Shawn has a special regard for the Canadian group.

They made their American debut at the Pillow in 1953, and he declared that their return was an absolute "must" for the silver jubilee.

Engaging Efforts

Their most engaging efforts were devoted to a featherweight but delightful set of portraits called "Les Rendez-Vous," and five intense, symbolic poems of motion, titled "Dark Elegies."

The first of these was a happy conglomeration of the "boy meets girl" thesis. It didn't overwork techniques but contented itself with wholesale flirtations, using agility and smiles as the primary enticements.

Joy has never been more heavily underscored than in the "Variation" by Angela Leigh to whom Frederick Ashton, the choreographer, gave some of his most attractive and original patterns.

Less secure was the more ornate "Variation" by Earl Kraul, but there still was fine vitality in his work and a refreshing ebullience.

Vital Portrayal

Based on Gustav Mahler's "Songs of the Death of Infants," the beauties of grief and reconciliation were vitally portrayed in "Dark Elegies." Choreography by Antony Tudor calls for five graphic moods to be transmitted through whirling, symbolical action.

Little doubt existed in the second song, "Ah, now I know why oft I caught you gazing," that Lois Smith and David Adams are the company's stars. The work of the ensemble in the final song, "In such a tempest, on such a day," was thoroughly beautiful. It depicted frustration and determination through spiraling action and complex patterns.

The dancers were Adams, with Ray Moller, Harold Dal Silva, Kraul, Donald Mahler, Edelayne Brandt, Judie Colpman, Jacqueline Irvings, Lilian Jarvis, and Jocelyn Terell.

Shawn is guest star this week with Myra Kinch & Co. He is doing his famous role of King Lear in "Sundered Majesty" and Miklos in "The Bajour."

Anyone who's unduly impressed with Shawn's doing these roles at the age of 66 will be flabergasted during the weekend performances of Aug. 16 and 17. Appearing on the bill with the Miami Civic Ballet and Antonia Morales will be the "first lady of the dance," Ruth St. Denis.

She is 78!

NEXT WEEKEND

TANGLEWOOD — Thursday, at 8:30 p. m. ("Tanglewood on Parade"): Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, in Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor; conducted by Aaron Copland, in Copland's Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land" . . . Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, in the Overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slav," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" (Ralph Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin, piano soloists), and selections from Loewe's "My Fair Lady."

Friday at 8:30 p. m.: Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, in Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3; Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique"); and the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Isaac Stern, soloist.

Saturday at 8:30 p. m.: Boston Symphony, conducted by Carl Schuricht, in Blacher's "Konzertante Musik"; Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony; and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday at 2:30 p. m.: Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, in Copland's "Quiet City," and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, with the Festival Chorus and solists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, and Donald Gramm.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 442,970
AUG 4 - 1957

"Tanglewood on Parade" Features Last Berkshire Festival Week-end

"Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will feature the final week-end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival in Lenox, Mass.

The events of "Tanglewood on Parade" will begin with two preliminaries for box and reserved seat holders, at 4 p.m.—a special opera performance in the gardens and a Tanglewood study group concert. The student orchestra will perform Weber's "Euryanthe" Overture, the first movement of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony, the first movement of the Schumann Piano Concerto with Mofey Ritt as soloist, and the fourth movement of Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasileiras, No. 2.

There will be a concert of chamber music written this Summer by composition department students. The Tanglewood Choir will provide choral music during the picnic supper hour at 7. In the evening the Boston Symphony will be conducted in the Music Shed by Charles Munch, and the Boston Pops Orchestra by Arthur Fiedler. Aaron Copland will conduct his own "Our Town" Suite and excerpts from "The Tender Land," with the Berkshire Festival Chorus. Ogden Nash will read his own amusing text during a performance of Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of the Animals."

The final concerts in the main series of the Berkshire Festival will be as follows:

Today at 2:30 p.m., Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Brahms: "Academic Festival Overture"; Walter Piston: Symphony N. 5; Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2, in B-flat major (soloist: Rudolf Serkin).

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater-Concert Hall, Music for small orchestra, by the Zimbler Sinfonietta: Boyce: Symphony No. 1; Tansman: Triptych; Boccherini: Flute Concerto (soloist: James Pappoutsakis); Mozart: Serenata Notturna; Shostakovich: Piano Concerto (soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano, and Roger Voisin, trumpet).

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Beethoven: "Leonore" Overture No. 3; Honegger: Symphony No. 3, "Liturgical"; Beethoven: Violin Concerto (soloist: Isaac Stern).

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Carl Schuricht conducting. Blacher: Konzertante Musik; Schubert: "Unfinished" Symphony; Beethoven: "Eroica" Symphony.

Sunday, Aug. 11, at 2:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Copland: "Quiet City"; Beethoven: Ninth Symphony—soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass; Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Two subsidiary Tanglewood events will be the second of two chamber music concerts under auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Tuesday at 8:30, and a concert by Fromm Fellows Friday at 2:30.

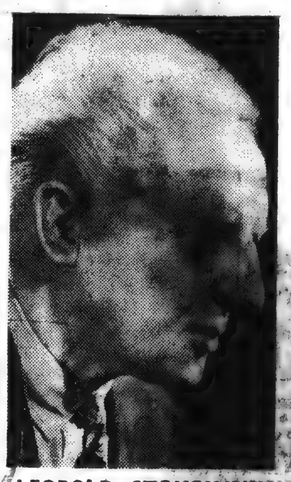
Boris Goldovsky will present the world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," Monday evening. This is a one-act American opera by Mark Bucci, commissioned for Tanglewood by Samuel Wechsler. Mr. Goldovsky will also present scenes from "standard" operas.

BOSTON HERALD, FRIDAY, AUG. 9, 1957

Beethoven Works End Berkshire Fete

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
Circ. D. 309,685
JUN 15 1957



LEOPOLD STOKOWSKY will conduct at Empire State Music Festival.

ADELE ADDISON is soloist in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at Tanglewood.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 9 - 1957

Warren Clark, Jr.

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, poses informally with the soloists who will sing in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at Tanglewood Sunday [illegible]. They are Donald Gramm, John McCollum, Florence Kopleff, and Adele Addison.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
AUG 9 - 1957

Berkshire Festival Final Week-End

Music of Beethoven will be featured in the final week-end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed. They will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: [illegible]eyer).

Dr. Munch will close the season with Beethoven's Ninth; the soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
AUG 3 - 1957

[233]

Tanglewood and Jacob's Pil[low]

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (Aug. 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch, and by a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and will feature the Boston Symphony conducted by Dr. Munch and Aaron Copland, and the Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the Friday concert (Aug. 9) Dr. Munch will conduct Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique"). The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Herr Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor on Saturday evening (Aug. 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer, Boris Blacher. This piece is dedicated to Herr Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the Berkshire Festival with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus (prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson) will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City."

THE BOSTON SUNDAY HERALD, AUGUST 4, 1957

Final Programs Announced For 20th Berkshire Fete

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon August 11, will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by Music Director, Charles Munch, and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening just prior to departing on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday, Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the Orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Complete programs for the week follow:

Wednesday, August 7, 8:30
Chamber Music, Zimbler Simonietta
Boyce — Symphony No. 1
Tansman — Triptych
Boccherini — Concerto for Flute and Strings (Soloist: James Pappoutsakis)
Mozart — Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K. 239
Shostakovitch — Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35
(Piano: Menahem Pressler; Trumpet, Roger Voisin)

Thursday, August 8, 8:30 p.m.
Tanglewood on Parade
Boston Symphony Orchestra
Schumann — Symphony No. 4 in D minor (Conducted by Charles Munch)
Copland — Suite from "Our Town"
Excerpts from "The Tender Land" (Conducted by the composer)
Boston Pops Orchestra
Arthur Fiedler, Conductor
Rossini — Overture to "The Barber of Seville"
Tchaikovsky — Marche Slave
Saint-Saens — Carnival of the Animals
(Piano Soloists: Ralph Berkowitz, Seymour Lipkin)
Loewe — Selections from "My Fair Lady"

Friday, August 9, 8:30, Music Shed.
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch Conducting)
Beethoven — Leonore Overture No. 3
Honegger — Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique")
Beethoven — Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)

Saturday, August 10, 8:30, Music Shed.
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Carl Schuricht Conducting)
Blacher — Konzertante Musik
Schubert — Unfinished Symphony
Beethoven — Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica")

Sunday, August 11, 8:30 Music Shed.
Boston Symphony Orchestra
(Charles Munch Conducting)
Copland — "Quiet City"
Beethoven — Symphony No. 9
(Soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm)
Berkshire Festival Chorus

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302
AUG 4 1957

Tanglewood Finale

• The Berkshire Music Festival winds up its 20th season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., next weekend with three Beethoven concerts by the Boston Symphony led by Charles Munch and guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard Wednesday. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
AUG 4 1957

[234]

Berkshire Fete Ends Next Week

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

With the end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood next Sunday, the summer music season in the Northeastern states will have passed its zenith, although several concert series, particularly in rural New England, will continue during the rest of August. Charles Munch will conduct three of the remaining festival concerts at Lenox, Mass.; Carl Schuricht will reappear Saturday night, and Thursday night's concert, the main event of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit, will have three conductors: Mr. Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler.

By an unusual coincidence, two one-act operas by Mark Bucci will have simultaneous performances in Lenox tomorrow evening. The Berkshire Music Center will give the premiere of his "Tale for a Deaf Ear" along with scenes from more familiar works in the last of the experimental bills under Boris Goldovsky's direction. At the same time the After Dinner Opera Company will present his "Sweet Betsy from Pike" at the Berkshire Music Barn in a quadruple bill which will be repeated Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Tale for a Deaf Ear," based on a story by Elizabeth Enright, calls for soprano and baritone principals, four other solo singers and a small chorus. It is scored for two pianos and two percussionists, but has also been arranged for two pianos alone and for a chamber orchestra of twenty-one players.

The Center's schedule for this closing week also includes a chamber music concert of works by Robert Palmer, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Walter Piston, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky Tuesday night; a contemporary program by an instrumental group Friday afternoon and discussions of modern American music by Irving Fine and Aaron Copland tomorrow and Wednesday afternoons.

• • •

Jazz Flourishes

"Jazz Under the Stars" will continue its nightly course in Central Park at least through next Sunday. The principals in the third week's bill include the Hi-Los, a vocal quartet; Chris Conner, Jerry Mulligan, Stan Getz and Maynard Ferguson and his band. The new program opens officially on Tuesday, with Monday regarded as a public preview.

Jazz is also proving attractive in Cleveland, where Erroll Garner will appear in that city's orchestral Pop series on Aug. 15. Special buses, it is announced, have been chartered to convey the noted jazz pianist's fans from various points in Ohio and other states for this occasion.

• • •

August Events

Among American late summer events, the Peninsula Music Festival under Thor Johnsoh's direction at Fish Creek, Door County, Wis., is distinguished by the unconventional nature of its program. Its fifth annual session, on Saturday and Wednesday nights and Sunday afternoons from Aug. 10 to 25, will offer chamber orchestra works by a dozen or more contemporary composers, including Benjamin Lees whose "Divertimento Burlesca," commissioned for this series, will be first performed next Sunday. Several other contemporary composers will be represented in the festival which completes the summer season under James C. Pfohl's direction at Brevard, N. C., Aug. 9 to 25. Lois Marshall will sing in the first of the eight concerts this Friday.

Carl Schuricht, who will conduct at Tanglewood Saturday night.

A new festival will be held at French Lick, Ind., from Aug. [illegible] to Sept. 1, with the Indianapolis High School Band and Orchestra, the Louisville Symphony, members of the Indianapolis Symphony taking part. Robert Whitney, Skitch Henderson and Izler Solomon will conduct.

New Barnard Chairman

Hubert A. Doris, who has been a member of Columbia University's music department since 1954, has been appointed chairman of Barnard College's music department, beginning in September. He was musical director of the Choreographer's Workshop from 1951 to 1953.

• • •

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Academic Festival Overture; Piano Concerto No. 2, Brahms; Symphony No. 5, Piston.

Wednesday, 8:30, Zimbler Sinfonietta. Symphony No. 1, Boyce; Triptych, Tansman; Concerto for Flute and Strings (soloists, James Pappoutsakis); Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K. 239, Mozart; Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35, (Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet), Shostakovitch.

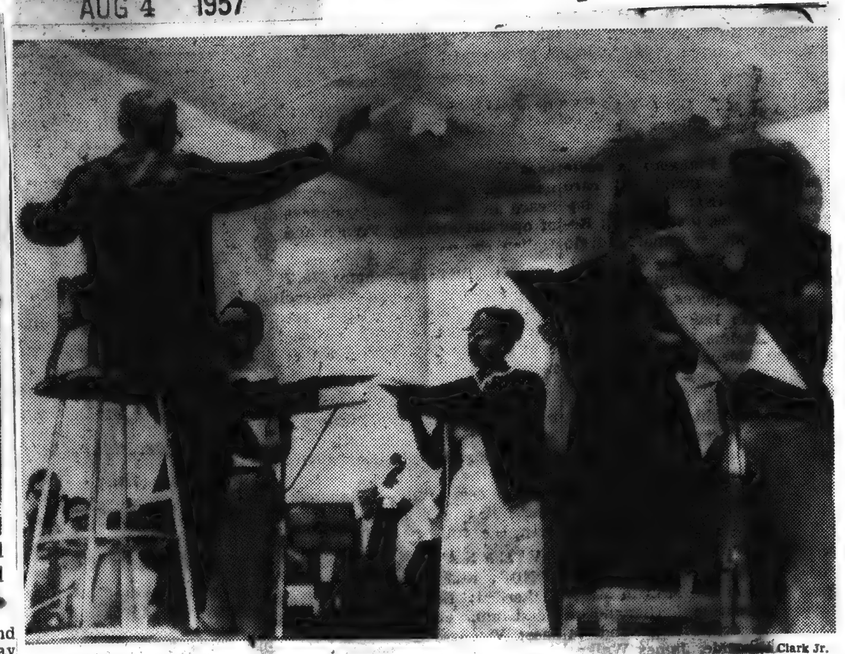
Thursday, "Tanglewood on Parade" Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, Charles Munch and Athur Fiedler conducting; Ogden Nash, narrator. Fanfare and Welcome, 5:45. Demonstrations by the Berkshire Music Center. 6. Concert in the Shed, 8:15. Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Schumann; "Our Town," Suite; "The Tender Land," Excerpts, (Aaron Copland conducting), Copland; Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; Marche Slav, Tchaikovsky; "The Carnival of the Animals,"—Grand Zoological Fantasia, (soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists), Saint-Saens; Selection, "My Fair Lady," Loewe.

Friday, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Isaac Stern, violinist. Leonore Overture No. 3, Beethoven; Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique"), Honegger; Violin Concerto, Beethoven.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carl Schuricht conducting. Konzertante Musik, Blacher; Unfinished Symphony, Schubert; Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"), Beethoven.

Sunday, Aug. 11, 8:30, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McColum, Donald Gramm; Berkshire Festival Chorus, "Quiet City," Copland; Symphony No. 9, Beethoven.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293
AUG 4 1957



REHEARSAL OF NINTH SYMPHONY—At Tanglewood, Charles Munch prepares soloists for their performance in the Beethoven work next Sunday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. L. to r., John McCollum, Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
Circ. D. [illegible]
AUG 5 [illegible]

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Closes Sunday

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will wind up its 20th season Sunday afternoon with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in the picturesque 6,000-seat Music Shed. Music director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus together with the following assisting soloists: soprano Adele Addison, contralto Florence Kopleff, tenor John McCollum, bass Donald Gramm.

Combined with Beethoven will be the contemporary American, Aaron Copland. His "Quiet City," composed during 1940 in a barn-studio near Tanglewood, for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra, will open the program.

Munch also will lead Friday night's concert which features Isaac Stern in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. The composer's overture to "Leonore, No. 3," plus Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," complete the bill.

Guest conductor Carl Schuricht is to be on the podium for Saturday night's event which includes Beethoven's "Eroica." Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and Boris Blacher's "Konzertante Musik" are the other selections. German-born, Blacher, now director of the Berlin Hochschule, was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center during the summer of 1955.

Tanglewood on Parade

The Festival's annual "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday, for the benefit of the center, adds a jovial note with its varied activities. These include the Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals." Ogden Nash will be on hand to read the verses he wrote for the piece. The Boston Symphony proper, under both Munch's and Copland's direction, also will perform half the program. Festivities begin at 5:45 in the afternoon and climax with an evening concert in the Shed.

Music Tonight . . .

Washington Square Park Chamber Music Concert, Fritz Rikko conducting Collegium Musicum. Anabel Hulme-Brieff, flute; Joyce Flissler, violin; Alexander Kouguell, cello; Albert Cossart, harpsichord. 9.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300
AUG 9 - 1957

Berkshire Festival Final Week-End

Music of Beethoven will be featured in the final week-end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed. They will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the season with Beethoven's Ninth. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held Thursday evening, Aug. 8. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45, and 6:00 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers and opera department. At 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds. At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the [illegible] Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland will conduct [illegible] own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land." After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550
AUG 1 1957

BSO to Conclude Berkshire Series With Beethoven

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox

ADELE ADDISON

Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, Aug. 9-10, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11, will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by music director Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday, Aug. 9, Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique"). The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra Saturday evening, Aug. 10, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher, who was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson will be soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for Trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented Aug. 7 at 8:30. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (soloist, James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto with Trumpet Obbligato (soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet). The Zimbler Sinfonietta, which is made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Josef Zimbler, will leave immediately after the Tanglewood season on a two months' tour of Central and South America.

NEWTOWN BEE August 2

Berkshire Festival Closes Next Week

"Tanglewood On Parade" Presents "Pops" Group

Brahms will be featured both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon this week end at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big Music Shed. Scheduled for Saturday at 8:30 p.m. are Brahms' Haydn Variations and the violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with the Academic Festival Overture opening the concert.

Next week will conclude the summer concert season at Tanglewood. The complete program for August 7-11 follows:

Wednesday, August 7, 8:30, chamber music by the Zimbler Sinfonietta: Boyce, Symphony No. 1; Tansman, Triptych; Boccherini, Concerto for Flute and Strings, soloist, James Pappoutsakis; Mozart, Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K239; Shostakovitch, Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Opus 35, piano, Menahem Pressler; trumpet, Roger Voisin.

Thursday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Tanglewood on Parade; Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch: Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Copland, Suite from "Our Town", excerpts from "The Tender Land," conducted by the composer; Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, Rossini, Overture to "The Barber of Seville;" Tchaikovky, Marche Slav; Saint-Saens, Carnival of the Animals, piano soloists, Ralph Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin; Loewe, "My Fair Lady" selections.

Friday, August 9, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr. Munch: Beethoven, Leonore Overture No. 3; Honegger, Symphony No. 3; Beethoven, violin concerto, soloist, Isaac Stern.

Saturday, August 10, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carl Schuricht conducting: Blacher, Konzertante Musik; Schubert, Unfinished Symphony; Beethoven, Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday, August 11, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr Munch: Copland, "Quiet City;" Beethoven, Symphony No. 9, with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McColum, Donald Gramm, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 4 1957

[234]

Berkshire Fete Ends Next Week

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

With the end of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood next Sunday, the summer music season in the Northeastern states will have passed its zenith, although several concert series, particularly in rural New England, will continue during the rest of August. Charles Munch will conduct three of the remaining festival concerts at Lenox, Mass.; Carl Schuricht will reappear Saturday night, and Thursday night's concert, the main event of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit, will have three conductors: Mr. Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler.

By an unusual coincidence, two one-act operas by Mark Bucci will have simultaneous performances in Lenox tomorrow evening. The Berkshire Music Center will give the premiere of his "Tale for a Deaf Ear" along with scenes from more familiar works in the last of the experimental bills under Boris Goldovsky's direction. At the same time the After Dinner Opera Company will present his "Sweet Betsy from Pike" at the Berkshire Music Barn in a quadruple bill which will be repeated Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Tale for a Deaf Ear," based on a story by Elizabeth Enright, calls for soprano and baritone principals, four other solo singers and a small chorus. It is scored for two pianos and two percussionists, but has also been arranged for two pianos alone and for a chamber orchestra of twenty-one players.

The Center's schedule for this closing week also includes a chamber music concert of works by Robert Palmer, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Walter Piston, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky Tuesday night; a contemporary program by an instrumental group Friday afternoon and discussions of modern American music by Irving Fine and Aaron Copland tomorrow and Wednesday afternoons.

Jazz Flourishes

"Jazz Under the Stars" will continue its nightly course in Central Park at least through next Sunday. The principals in the third week's bill include the Hi-Los, a vocal quartet; Chris Conner, Jerry Mulligan, Stan Getz and Maynard Ferguson and his band. The new program opens officially on Tuesday, with Monday regarded as a public preview.

Jazz is also proving attractive in Cleveland, where Erroll Garner will appear in that city's orchestral Pop series on Aug. 15. Special buses, it is announced, have been chartered to convey the noted jazz pianist's fans from various points in Ohio and other states for this occasion.

August Events

Among American late summer events, the Peninsula Music Festival under Thor Johnson's direction at Fish Creek, Door County, Wis., is distinguished by the unconventional nature of its program. Its fifth annual session, on Saturday and Wednesday nights and Sunday afternoons from Aug. 10 to 25, will offer chamber orchestra works by a dozen or more contemporary composers, including Benjamin Lees, whose "Divertimento Burlesca," commissioned for this series, will be first performed next Sunday. Several other contemporary composers will be represented in the festival which completes the summer season under James C. Pfohl's direction at Brevard, N. C., Aug. 9 to 25. Lois Marshall will sing in the first of the eight concerts this Friday.

Carl Schuricht, who will conduct at Tanglewood Saturday night.

A new festival will be held at French Lick, Ind., from Aug. 30 to Sept. 1, with the Indianapolis High School Band and [illegible] the Louisville Symphony, members of the Indianapolis Symphony taking part. Robert Whitney, Skitch Henderson and Izler Solomon will conduct.

New Barnard Chairman

Hubert A. Doris, who has been a member of Columbia University's music department since 1954, has been appointed chairman of Barnard College's music department, beginning in September. He was musical director of the Choreographer's Workshop from 1951 to 1953.

Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Rudolf Serkin, pianist. Academic Festival Overture; Piano Concerto No. 2, Brahms; Symphony No. 5, Piston.

Wednesday, 8:30. Zimbler Sinfonietta. Symphony No. 1, Boyce; Triptych, Tansman; Concerto for Flute and Strings (soloists, James Pappoutsakis); Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K. 239, Mozart; Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35, (Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet), Shostakovitch.

Thursday. "Tanglewood on Parade" Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, Charles Munch and Arthur Fiedler conducting; Ogden Nash, narrator. Fanfare and Welcome, 5:45. Demonstrations by the Berkshire Music Center. 6. Concert in the Shed, 8:15. Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Schumann; "Our Town," Suite; "The Tender Land," Excerpts, (Aaron Copland conducting), Copland; Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; Marche Slav, Tchaikovsky; "The Carnival of the Animals,"—Grand Zoological Fantasia, (soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists), Saint-Saens; Selection, "My Fair Lady," Loewe.

Friday, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Isaac Stern, violinist, Leonore Overture No. 3, Beethoven; Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique"), Honegger; Violin Concerto, Beethoven.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carl Schuricht conducting, Konzertante Musik, Blacher; Unfinished Symphony, Schubert; Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"), Beethoven.

Sunday, Aug. 11, 8:30. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloists, Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McColum, Donald Gramm; Berkshire Festival Chorus, "Quiet City," Copland; Symphony No. 9, Beethoven.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 4 1957

REHEARSAL OF NINTH SYMPHONY—At Tanglewood, Charles Munch prepares soloists for their performance in the Beethoven work next Sunday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. L. to r., John McCollum, Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, Donald Gramm.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
[illegible]
Circ. D. 389,0[illegible] - S. 2[illegible]
AUG 5 19[illegible]

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 154,300

AUG 9 - 1957

WORDS and MUSIC

By Harriett Johnson

Berkshire Festival Closes Sunday

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will wind up its 20th season Sunday afternoon with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in the picturesque 6,000-seat Music Shed. Music director Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony and the Festival Chorus together with the following assisting soloists: soprano Adele Addison, contralto Florence Kopleff, tenor John McCollum, bass Donald Gramm.

Combined with Beethoven will be the contemporary American, Aaron Copland. His "Quiet City," composed during 1940 in a barn-studio near Tanglewood, for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra, will open the program.

Munch also will lead Friday night's concert which features Isaac Stern in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. The composer's overture to "Leonore, No. 3," plus Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," complete the bill.

Guest conductor Carl Schuricht is to be on the podium for Saturday night's event which includes Beethoven's "Eroica." Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and Boris Blacher's "Konzertante Musik" are the other selections. German-born, Blacher, now director of the Berlin Hochschule, was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center during the summer of 1955.

Tanglewood on Parade

The Festival's annual "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday, for the benefit of the center, adds a jovial note with its varied activities. These include the Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" which Ogden Nash will be on hand to read the verses he wrote for the piece. The Boston Symphony proper, under both Munch's and Copland's direction, also will perform half the program. Festivities begin at 5:45 in the afternoon and climax with an evening concert in the Shed.

Music Tonight . . .

Washington Square Park Chamber Music Concert, Fritz Rikko conducting Collegium Musicum. Anabel Hulme-Brieff, flute; Joyce Flissler, violin; Alexander Kouguell, cello; Albert Cossart, harpsichord. 9.

Guggenheim Memorial Concert by Goldman Band, Richard Franko Goldman conducting. On the Mall, Central Park, 8:30

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550

AUG 1 1957

BSO to Conclude Berkshire Series With Beethoven

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox

ADELE ADDISON

Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings, Aug. 9-10, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11, will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by music director Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard Wednesday evening, Aug. 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening, Aug. 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday, Aug. 9, Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique"). The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra Saturday evening, Aug. 10, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher, who was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on Dec. 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson will be soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for Trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented Aug. 7 at 8:30. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce, Triptych by Tansman, Flute Concerto by Boccherini (soloist, James Pappoutsakis), Mozart's Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras and the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto with Trumpet Obbligato (soloists: Menahem Pressler, piano; Roger Voisin, trumpet). The Zimbler Sinfonietta, which is made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Joseph Zimbler, will leave immediately after the Tanglewood season on a two months' tour of Central and South America.

Berkshire Festival Final Week-End

Music of Beethoven will be featured in the final week-end of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed. They will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer).

Dr. Munch will close the season with Beethoven's Ninth. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held Thursday evening, Aug. 8. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., the ceremonies will open with a Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45, and 6:00 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers and opera department. At 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds. At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the [illegible] Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland will conduct [illegible] own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land." After the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a [illegible] vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Post
WALLINGFORD
Weekly Ind[illegible]
Circ. 3,4[illegible]

AUG 8

Final Tangl[illegible] Concerts A[illegible]

The final concert season of the Berk[illegible]val at Tanglewood, Mass., [illegible] coming [illegible] Boston Sym[illegible] Friday and [illegible] (August 9-10) [illegible] ternoon (August [illegible] ture the [illegible] of

NEWTOWN BEE, August 2

Berkshire Festival Closes Next Week

"Tanglewood On Parade" Presents "Pops" Group

Brahms will be featured both Saturday night and Sunday afternoon this week end at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., when Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the big Music Shed. Scheduled for Saturday at 8:30 p.m. are Brahms' Haydn Variations and the violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. On Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Rudolf Serkin will be the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, with the Academic Festival Overture opening the concert.

Next week will conclude the summer concert season at Tanglewood. The complete program for August 7-11 follows:

Wednesday, August 7, 8:30, chamber music by the Zimbler Sinfonietta: Boyce, Symphony No. 1; Tansman, Triptych; Boccherini, Concerto for Flute and Strings, soloist, James Pappoutsakis; Mozart, Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K239; Shostakovitch, Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Opus 35, piano, Menahem Pressler; trumpet, Roger Voisin.

Thursday, August 8, 8:30 p.m., Tanglewood on Parade; Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch: Schumann, Symphony No. 4 in D minor; Copland, Suite from "Our Town", excerpts from "The Tender Land," conducted by the composer; Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, Rossini, Overture to "The Barber of Seville;" Tchaikovky, Marche Slav; Saint-Saens, Carnival of the Animals, piano soloists, Ralph Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin; Loewe, "My Fair Lady" selections.

Friday, August 9, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr. Munch: Beethoven, Leonore Overture No. 3; Honegger, Symphony No. 3; Beethoven, violin concerto, soloist, Isaac Stern.

Saturday, August 10, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carl Schuricht conducting: Blacher, Konzertante Musik; Schubert, Unfinished Symphony: Beethoven, Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Sunday, August 11, 8:30 p.m., Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dr. Munch: Copland, "Quiet City;" Beethoven, Symphony No. 9, with soloists Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McColum, Donald Gramm, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 8 - 1957

IN IMMORTAL NINTH . . . conductor and soloists who will take part in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the final concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Sunday. Left to right: Donald Gramm, bass; John McCollum, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Dr. Charles Munch, Director of the Boston Symphony; Adele Addison, soprano.

BEETHOVEN'S NINTH TO BE FEATURED IN LAST BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, August 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, August 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture N. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the Orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on December 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for Trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed orchestral piece in the mer of 1940 in a barn-s close to Tanglewood afte close of the Berkshire Center session and it was performed in New York b Saidenberg Little Sympho Town Hall in January, 19

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

AUG 6 - 1957

Tanglewood Will Honor Beethoven As Season Ends

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will take place this week.

Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening just prior to their departure on a South American tour.

Friday Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German Boris Blacher, composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the Festival as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025

AUG 10 1957

Beethoven Concert Slated At Tanglewood

Music of Beethoven are being featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of this evening at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, this evening, and tomorrow afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

AUG 1957

Final Tanglewood Concerts Aug. 9-11

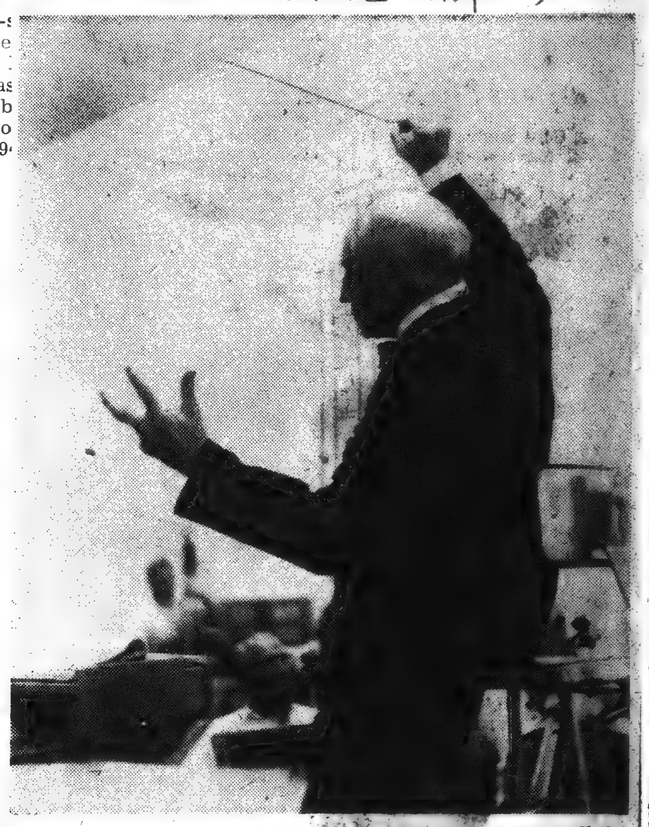
The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

BERKSHIRE EAGLE Aug. 10, 1957



Clark

TONIGHT'S CONDUCTOR, Carl Schuricht, will make his second appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood at 8:30, performing the works of Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven.

Grand Finale

Munch, BSO, Festival Chorus To Perform Beethoven's Ninth

TANGLEWOOD—The 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will close tomorrow afternoon when Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Festival chorus and four soloists, will present Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in D Minor. The concert will open at 2:30.

The first half of the program will be devoted to Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," featuring as soloists Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

Because of the length of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the intermission tomorrow will be shortened to 10 minutes.

Schuricht on Podium

Tonight, the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, will return to the podium to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert of works by Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven. The program opens in the Music Shed at 8:30.

Immediately following tomorrow afternoon's concert, Dr. Munch will leave the Berkshires and depart the next day for Europe and the Middle East, where he will fill engagements as a guest conductor.

The demand for reserved seat tickets in the Music Shed for tonight and tomorrow afternoon indicates that the weekend attendance at Tanglewood may exceed any previous weekend this season. However, those unable to obtain reserved seats may purchase general admissions to the grounds.

[illegible] 6,000 persons [illegible] Festival concerts [illegible] summer. With a break from the weatherman, the attendance will probably exceed 150,000 for 1957.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 8 - 1957

IN IMMORTAL NINTH . . . conductor and soloists who will take part in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony at the final concert of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Sunday. Left to right: Donald Gramm, bass; John McCollum, tenor; Florence Kopleff, contralto; Dr. Charles Munch, Director of the Boston Symphony; Adele Addison, soprano.

BEETHOVEN'S NINTH TO BE FEATURED IN LAST BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL CONCERT

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, August 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, August 8, and in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture N. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the Orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto. This will be the last of Mr. Stern's three appearances at Tanglewood this season.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. Mr. Blacher is now the director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht and was first performed under his direction on December 7, 1937. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the forces of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, will be the soloists Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for Trumpet, English Horn and String Orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. This work was composed as an orchestral piece in the summer of 1940 in a barn-studio close to Tanglewood after the close of the Berkshire Music Center session and it was first performed in New York by the Saidenberg Little Symphony at Town Hall in January, 1941.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

AUG 6 - 1957

[235]

Tanglewood Will Honor Beethoven As Season Ends

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will take place this week.

Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening just prior to their departure on a South American tour.

Friday Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening, his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center. The program will close with Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Festival season as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 21,025

AUG 10 1957

Beethoven Concert Slated At Tanglewood

Music of Beethoven are being featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of this evening at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, this evening, and tomorrow afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,408

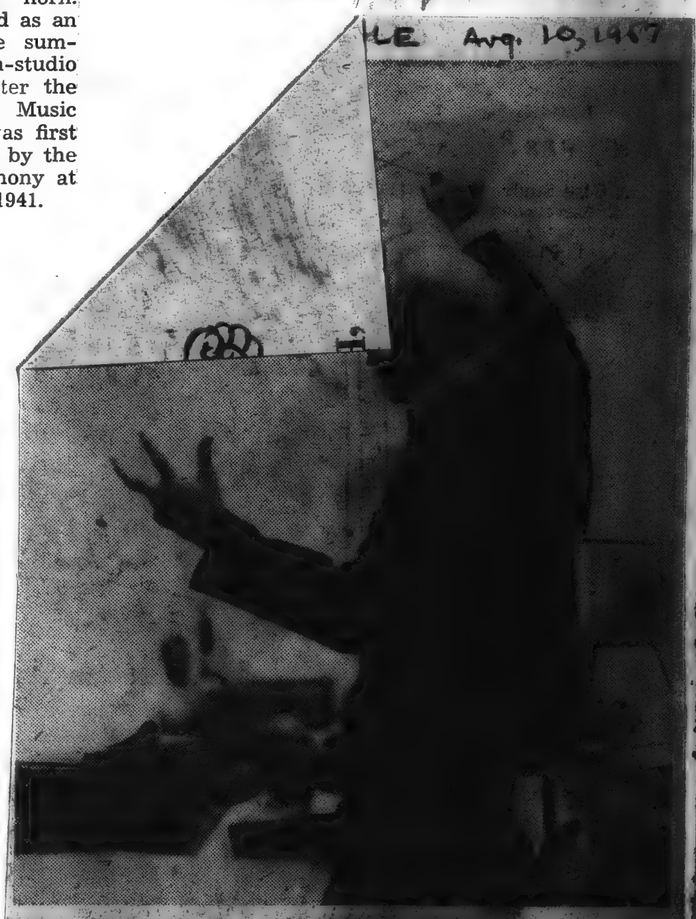
AUG 8 1957

Final Tanglewood Concerts Aug. 9-11

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") which was performed by the orchestra last September at a concert in Chartres Cathedral in France during its European tour. The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher. Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.



TONIGHT'S CONDUCTOR, Carl Schuricht, will make his second appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood at 8:30, performing the works of Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven.

Grand Finale

Munch, BSO, Festival Chorus To Perform Beethoven's Ninth

TANGLEWOOD—The 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will close tomorrow afternoon when Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the Festival chorus and four soloists, will present Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in D Minor. The concert will open at 2:30.

The first half of the program will be devoted to Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," featuring as soloists Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

Because of the length of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, the intermission tomorrow will be shortened to 10 minutes.

Schuricht on Podium

Tonight, the German conductor, Carl Schuricht, will return to the podium to lead the Boston Sym- works by Blacher, Schubert and Beethoven. The program opens in the Music Shed at 8:30.

Immediately following tomorrow afternoon's concert, Dr. Munch will leave the Berkshires and depart the next day for Europe and the Middle East, where he will fill engagements as a guest conductor.

The demand for reserved seat tickets in the Music Shed for tonight and tomorrow afternoon indicates that the weekend attendance at Tanglewood may exceed any previous weekend this season. However, it is possible to obtain reserved seats and purchase general admission grounds.

The ... 000 persons ... Festival concerts ... summer. With break from the weatherman, attendance will probably exceed

TIGHT BINDING

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 40,017
AUG 5 - 1957

Tanglewood Ends Season This Week

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 5—The final week of the six-week Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood gets under way this evening after the triumphant appearances of Isaac Stern, violinist, and Rudolph Serkin, pianist, before weekend audiences which totaled 25,600 in spite of two days of rain.

This week will find the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program from 6 to 11 p. m. Thursday when audiences will be treated to the annual seven-ring circus of music and all departments of the Berkshire Festival can be seen in operation. There will be chamber music, opera [illegible] the shed concert itself with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra. Ogden Nash will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in the Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals." Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz will play selections from "My Fair Lady."

The three week-end programs for the concluding concerts will be devoted largely to the works of Beethoven. Charles Munch will conduct Friday night and Sunday afternoon and Carl Schuricht, will lead the Boston on Saturday evening. Some of the music of Honegger, Blacher, Copeland and Schubert will be presented as well.

Isaac Stern, who gave such a brilliant performance of Brahms' "Violin Concerto in D major" Saturday night before 11,250 music lovers despite thunder, lightning and rain which gave added effects to the music will play the Beethoven "Violin Concerto" Friday night. Mr. Stern played before an audience as rapt in listening as it was wrapped in blankets, rain coats, and make-shift protection against the elements which forced thousands of listeners to crowd into the huge shed which could not hold all of them when the elements let go with a mighty torrent as the concert began. It was one of the largest audiences at any concert which heard the magnificient performance of the Brahms program and Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" with lightning and thunder adding unusual effects to the music scored by the composer.

Despite a threatening morning there were 8,160 in the audience Sunday afternoon when Rudolf Serkin performed Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2, in B flat Major." Serkin, always one to give a showman's brilliant performance at the piano, did not disappoint his audience. There was rain during a large part of his playing but watching the rapt audience one would have known there was no distraction. In his one appearance of the season at Tanglewood Serkin always puts all of the brilliance, technique and poetry into his playing. Sunday's performance was no exception. Again and again Serkin, Munch, and the first cellist were called back by the audience for the final notes of the [illegible] weekend of programs died away and the sun came out again to brighten the grounds and the hearts of the music lovers who lingered about the spacious, beautiful lawns.

S.M.

WATERBURY, CONN.
REPUBLICAN
Circ. D. 21,025 - S. 45,854
AUG 4 1957

Final Concerts This Week At Tanglewood

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 11, will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch, and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard Wednesday evening, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place Thursday evening, and, in addition to student performances, will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Dr. Munch and Aaron Copland, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

At the concert on Friday, Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique"). The program will close with a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the orchestra Saturday evening, closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher who will be remembered as composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center in the summer of 1955. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

The final concert of the Wednesday evening Chamber Music series will be presented at 8:30. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will present a program including Symphony No. 1 by Boyce.

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held Thursday evening. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and The Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p. m., the ceremonies will open with a fanfare and welcome at 5:45, and 6 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. At 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds. At 8:30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
AUG 9 - 1957

Music

The Berkshire Music Festival's final week of concerts will feature works by Beethoven. Friday evening at the Music Shed at 8:30 o'clock, the program will include Beethoven's Leonore Overture Number 3, Honegger's Symphony Number 3, and Beethoven's Violin Concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Saturday night, Beethoven's Eroica Symphony (Number 3), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Blacher's Concertante Music will be conducted by Carl Schuricht. The Berkshire Festival Chorus and soloists will be featured in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in the final concert, Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Also on the program is Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." Charles Munch will conduct on Friday and Sunday. "Tanglewood On Parade" is being presented Thursday evening, featuring Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 8 - 1957

Tanglewood Sets Weekend Program

The final concerts of the Berkshire Festival's 20th season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this weekend will feature the music of Beethoven.

Charles Munch will conduct performances Friday of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3 (Liturgique) which was performed by the orchestra last September in Chartres Cathedral in France. The program will close with Isaac Stern playing the Beethoven Violin Concerto.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor Saturday evening, closing his concert with Bttthoven's "Eroica" Symphony. He will open with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher, who was composer-in-residence at the Berkshire Music Center the Summer of 1955. The Konzertante Musik is dedicated to Mr. Schuricht. The program also will include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

Dr. Munch will close the 1957 season Sunday at 2 p. m. with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. With the orchestra and festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson will be the soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 16,794
AUG 6 - 1957

The Final Week At Tanglewood

This weekend will see the close of the Boston Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Charles Munch will conduct three of the remaining festival concerts at Lenox, Mass.; Carl Schuricht will return Saturday night, and Thursday night's concert, the main event of the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit, will have three conductors, Mr. Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler.

For the gala Thursday evening performance Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony orchestra in Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor, and in the first half of the program, Mr. Copland will conduct his own Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from his "The Tender Land".

The Boston Pops will take over for the second half of the evening with Mr. Fiedler conducting. This program will include Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville", Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with Ralph Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin as piano soloists and selections from "My Fair Lady".

The program for Friday evening, Mr. Munch conducting, will consist of the Leonore Overture No. 3, by Beethoven; Symphony No. 3, by Honneger; and Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Mr. Schuricht will conduct on Saturday evening, Blacher's Konzertante Music, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert on Sunday evening will be conducted by Mr. Munch, when Beethoven's 9th Symphony will be performed, with Adele Addison, Florence Kopeleff, John McCollum, and Donald Gramm as soloists, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus assisting. Copland's "Quiet City" will be used as an opening number.

KINGSTON, N. Y.
DAILY FREEMAN
AUG 8 1957

Final Music Plans Made at Berkshire

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts of Friday and Saturday, Aug. 9-10, at 8:30 p. m., and Sunday, Aug. 11, at 2:30 p. m., will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto Friday, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Friday's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a. m. will be open to the public.

Concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a special concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the Shed at 3 p. m. on Saturday, and the final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
AUG 6 1957

Tanglewood Season Winds Up This Week

Final concerts in the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place this week.

* * *

MUSIC OF Beethoven will be featured by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon under the direction of Charles Munch, music director, and guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, and the annual "Tanglewood-on-Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held Thursday evening.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony at 10 o'clock will be open to the public at a nominal charge with proceeds going to the orchestra's pension fund.

* * *

DR. MUNCH will conduct the Friday evening program at 8:30 p.m. Included will be performances of the Beethoven "Leonore Overture number 3" and the Honegger "Symphony number 3 (Liturgique)"; also the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

Carl Schuricht will conduct Saturday evening and present the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony; the "Konzertante Musik for Orchestra" by Boris Blacher, director of the Hochschule of Music in Berlin; and Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

* * *

DR. MUNCH will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival season with a performance Sunday of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony." The program, at 2:30 p.m., will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and string orchestra. Soloists will be Roger Voisin, trumpet; and Louis Speyer, English horn.

HUDSON, N. Y.
REGISTER-STAR
D.
AUG 9 1957

— Round The Town

. . . If proof were needed of the value of newspaper advertising and the popularity of Dollar Day sales events there was an abundance of it along Warren street yesterday. Favored by ideal weather, crowds were on hand in force, stores were filled with shoppers and sales clerks were on the double in their efforts to serve customers. The annual summer sales event is continuing through today and Saturday. For those who were not able to take a part of yesterday's throng, opportunity is continuing to knock on their doors this afternoon and evening and tomorrow . . . and the city's new Union street parking lot, while not officially opened, proved mighty handy for shoppers. From early morning and continuing through the day it was filled to capacity. Incidentally, all that remains to be done on the public facility is the instillation of parking meters and the lighting standards for which were put in place this week by crews from the power company. Within a short time the completed lot will rank along with the city's other valuable assets.

. . . Just a reminder to area music lovers that this is the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival over at Tanglewood, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra the last concerts of the season in the big Music Shed over at Lenox. Concluding the season's programs will be the music of Beethoven, including chorus and soloists and the violin concerto with Isaac Stern. Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will share the conducting podium with Carl Schuricht, conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, who has conducted the leading orchestras of nearly every country in Europe and many of the foremost European festivals. Folks hereabouts at very little effort are privileged to enjoy at Tanglewood what has come to be regarded as the outstnading musical event in the country . . .also over at the Lenox Library, its fourth annual summer art show is featuring eleven paintings by Columbia County's well known and talented artist Stanley Bate whose prize winning oil "Gathering of the Clan" recently won the best-in-show award at the Great Barrington art show.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 42,039
AUG 9 1957

Beethoven Is Featur At Tanglewood Clos

Music of Beethoven will be tured on the programs of final weekend of the Berks Festival at Tanglewood, Le Mass., by the Boston Symph Orchestra.

* * *

CONCERTS TONIGHT and morrow at 8:30 o'clock and day at 2:30 p.m. will be prese in the 6,000-seat Music Shed.

Tonight's concert will be ducted by Charles Munch and include the Beethoven "Vi Concerto" with Issac Stern soloist, the "Leonore" overt number 3, Beethoven: and "Symphony number 3 (liturgic by Arthur Honegger.

Tomorrow evening Carl Sc richt will guest conduct the chestra. The program will clude the "Konzertante Musik" Boris Blacher (composer in r dence at the Berkshire Mu Center several years ago); Sch bert's "Unfinished Symphony" the Beethoven "Symphony nu ber 3 ("Eroica")."

* * *

AARON COPLAND'S "Qu City" will open the Sunday aft noon program and Dr. Munch conclude the Tanglewood 20 season with Beethoven's "Nin Symphony." Soloists will be Ad Addison, soprano; Florence K leff, alto; John McCollum, ten and Donald Gramm, bass.

General admission to all c certs will be on sale on the d of the concert.

The rehearsal of the Bost Symphony Orchestra tomorrow 10 a.m. will be open to the publi A nominal admission benefits t Orchestra's pension fund.

SYRACUSE, N.
HERALD-AMERIC
Circ. S. 222,157
AUG 11 1957

Lyric Cir 'Can Can'

By M.V.W.

Life in the Montmartre sec of Paris in the early 90's special emphasis on the can a lively dance, (to put it mil will be brought to attention in Lyric Circus Tent near Skan eles, for two weeks, starting T day night. By that time a tent will have been raised by Lyric management. There will mighty performances of "C Can", Monday, Aug. 19 excepte Saturday matinees are presente the Lyric.

"Can Can" has Cole Porte music with some typical dialogu by Abe Burrows. The cast ded by Barbara Ashley as th crowd operator of a dance hal filed into court to prove that th can is a proper dance. La Chelsi will have the role Judge; Mary Ellen Terry wi principal performer of the ca and Alfred Medinets and Ma are other principals.

is remembered for formance here last year. sian and Fancy".

There are several memorial numbers in the story in ing the melodic "Love s", and "It's All Right Wit "C'est Magnifique" and -Vous En". Thomas Sullivan is music director.

CAT AUG

Tanglev Final C Over W

Music of featured on the final weeken Festival at Mass., by the Orchestra, C director. Conc and Saturday 2:30 Sunday presented in Shed at Tang clude a per Stern of the Concerto, Frid tor, Carl Schu ning, and on performance Symphony.

Friday's c ducted by Cha include, in ac thoven Violin Stern, Beeth Overture No. phony No. 3 (French compo ger. Ot the Sa cert, Carl Sch the Konzertan Blacher (sever poser in resi shire Music C Unfinished S thoven's Symp

[2867]

TIGHT BINDING

[237]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157
AUG 11 1957

Lyric Circus to Show 'Can Can' Aug. 13-25

By E.V.W.

Life in the Montmarte section of Paris in the early 90's with special emphasis on the can can, a lively dance, (to put it mildly) will be brought to attention in the Lyric Circus Tent near Skaneateles, for two weeks, starting Tuesday night. By that time a new floor will have been raised by the Lyric management. There will be nightly performances of "Can Can", Monday, Aug. 19 excepted. Saturday matinees are presented at the Lyric.

"Can Can" has Cole Porter music with some typical dialogue by Abe Burrows. The cast is headed by Barbara Ashley as the proprietor of a dance hall, taken to court to prove that the can can is a proper dance. Larry Kent will have the role of Aristide Bruant. Mary Ellen Terry will be the original performer of the can can. Alfred Medinets and Alan Carney are other principals. Medinets is remembered for a fine performance here last year in "Kiss Me Kate and Fancy".

There are several memorable musical numbers in the show including the melodic "I Love Paris" and "It's All Right With Me", "C'est Magnifique" and "Ca C'est Paris". Thomas Philippo is the music director. Tonight marks the final performance of that charming musical "Brigadoon" with Christine Matthews, Ronald Rogers, David Davis, Barbara Cavanaugh, Marvin Worden and Edmund Balin. "Brigadoon" was been chosen from American productions to be featured in the 1958 Brussels World's Fair.

BARBARA ASHLEY

This date in music: 1861, Anton Arensky, composer, born in Novgorod. Also, birth of Dorrie Jacobs Kerr, who composed "St. Patrick's Day."

A concert known as "Old First Night Festival" is announced for Tuesday night in Chautauqua when there will be a program by the Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra and Chautauqua Opera Association principals. There will be no gate fee.

This afaernoon, Walter Hendl will conduct a concert by the Chautauqua Symphony. Soloist will be Lillian Kallir, pianist. "An Evening in Old Vienna" is the title of a pop concert Wednesday night.

Tomorrow night the Chautauqua Opera Association will present Donizetti's "Lucia Di Lammermoor." Next Friday night, Aug. 16, the Opera Association will sing Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman." Operas are sung in Norton Memorial hall. Orchestral concerts take place in the Amphitheater.

The final Berkshire Festival weekend in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., will close this afternoon in the Music Shed with a Boston Symphony concert to be conducted by Dr. Charles Munch. Concerts Friday night and last night were directed, respectively by Dr. Munch and by Carl Schuricht, guest conductor.

This is the Berkshire Festival's

DR. MUNCH

20th season. Today's program will be the Beethoven Ninth Symphony with the Orchestra, the Festival Chorus and soloists. The Chorus has been prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross. Soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass. Opening selection will be Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with Roger Voisin, solo trumpet; Louis Speyer, solo English horn.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,950
AUG 8 1957

Tanglewood Sets Final Concerts Over Weekend

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the programs of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director. Concerts at 8:30 Friday and Saturday evenings and at 2:30 Sunday afternoon will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, Friday, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Friday's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. Ot the Saturday evening concert, Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher (several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center), Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ('Eroica"). The final concert on Sunday afternoon, conducted by Dr. Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The 10 a. m. Saturday rehearsal of the Boston Symphoiny Orchestra will be open to the public.

Concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a special concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the Shed at 3 p. m. Saturday, and the final student chamber music concert at 10 Sunday morning in the Theatre-Concert Hall.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178
AUG 10 1957

Ruth St. Dennis at Jacob's Pillow

An Old Favorite Trips On-Stage

Aficionados of modern dance think Ted Shawn and his wife, Ruth St. Denis, started it all. What's more, they started it, they keep it up.

Mr. Shawn finishes a week of dancing wia Myra Kinch and Company tonight at his Jacob's Pillow, and next Friday Miss St. Denis (or Mrs. Shawn) arrives for two days of solo performances. In fact, Tuesday is the couple's 43d wedding anniversary.

The 78-year-old dancer has not been idle. She has worked up two new solos—"To a Chinese Flue" and "Lines Written in My Brother's Garden"—for the program. Her third number will be "White Jade," one of her most famous solos.

Also on hand will be four dancers from the Miami Civic Ballet, who will do "Pantomime for Lovers," to music by Mozart, and Antonia Morales, who will do Spanish dances.

The Berkshire Festival closes this weekend, a Beethoven weekend. Carl Schuricht, conductor of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, leads the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight at Tanglewood, and Charles Munch will wield the baton tomorrow afternoon.

The final program will include Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, as it did in 1955. The Berkshire Festival Chorus and four soloists—Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm—will handle the singing roles.

The Berkshire Music Barn is far from through (final concert, Sept. 1), but next week is one for both old- and new-timers.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 467
AUG 7 1957

Berkshire Festival Final Week

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, take place this week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroice" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

On Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn, and string orchestra.

ALBANY, N. Y.
TIMES UNION
Circ. D. 119,412
AUG 9 1957

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Beethoven Features Berkshire Festival

Music of Beethoven will be featured on the program of the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and Saturday evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood, and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon, a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

ON TONIGHT

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At the Saturday evening concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica"). The final concert Sunday afternoon, conducted by Dr. Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus has been prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
POST STANDARD
Circ. D. 89,399 - S. 101,254
AUG 4 1957

Final Concerts Slated at Lenox

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will take place in the coming week.

Concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (Aug. 9 and 10) and Sunday afternoon will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the music director, Charles Munch, and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

"Tanglewood on Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, August 8, and in addition to student performances will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, as well as the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland.

NEW LEBANON, NEW YORK
TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1957

Berkshire Festival Enters Final Week

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, take place this week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The Zimbler Sinfonietta will be heard on Wednesday evening, August 7, just prior to their departure on a South American tour. "Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will take place on Thursday evening, August 8, and in addition to student performances will feature the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland and the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

ARTHUR FIEDLER

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroice" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

On Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival

[238]

CAIRO, N. Y.
HERALD
Circ. W. 415

AUG 8 1957

ATHEN[illegible] Y.
HERA[illegible]

AUG [illegible]

Berkshire Festival Final Week

The final concerts of the 20th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, take place this week. Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday and Saturday evenings (August 9-10) and Sunday afternoon (August 11) will feature the music of Beethoven and will be conducted by the Music Director, Charles Munch and by guest conductor Carl Schuricht.

At the concert of Friday (August 9) Dr. Munch will conduct the Orchestra in performances of Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Symphony No. 3.

Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance as guest conductor of the Orchestra on Saturday evening (August 10), closing his concert with Beethoven's "Eroice" Symphony. He will open the program with the Konzertante Musik for Orchestra by the German composer Boris Blacher. The program will also include Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony.

On Sunday afternoon, Dr. Munch will close the 1957 Berkshire Festival Season, as he did in 1955, with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The program will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn, and string orchestra.

SAUGERTIES, N. Y.
POST
Circ. D. 1,385

AUG 9 1957

Music Plans At Berkshire

The final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox Mass., will feature music of Betthoven played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch directing. The concerts are Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p. m., and Sunday, August 11 at 2:30 p. m. They will be presented in the 6,000 seat Music Shed at Tanglewood and will include a performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stearn Friday; a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, Saturday evening; and a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony on Sunday afternoon.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 a. m. will be open to the public.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 11 1957

MASSACHUSETTS

BERKSHIRE

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch; Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass, and Berkshire Festival Chorus. Final concert of the season.
Quiet City ..... Copland
Symphony No. 9 ..... Beethoven

Berkshire Music Barn

TODAY, 8:40 P. M., Modern Jazz Quartet; Jimmy Giuffre Trio.

THURSDAY, 8:40 P. M., Mahalia Jackson in a program of Gospel Songs and Spirituals.

NEXT SUNDAY, 8:40 P. M., Wilbur de Paris and his new New Orleans Jazz Band.

IPSWICH

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M., Castle Hill. Geoffrey Holder; Trinidad Ballet with a company of drummers and dancers.

CUMMINGTON

TODAY, 3:30 P. M., Cummington School of the Arts. Performance of Vivaldi's Gloria for Chorus and Orchestra. Admission free.

EDGARTOWN

TUESDAY, 8:45 P. M., Main Street Church. Joseph Conte, violinist; Otto van Koppenhagen, cellist; Robert Hufstader, pianist.
Trio No. 13 in B flat ..... Haydn
Sonata in A ..... Brahms
Trio in E flat ..... Schubert

PROVINCETOWN

TODAY, 8:40 P.M., Provincetown Art Association. Contemporary Chamber Ensemble; Richard Frish, bass-baritone;

BASS—Donald Gramm, who will sing for fifth time at Tanglewood today.

Berkshire E[illegible]
PITTSFIELD,
Independe[illegible]
Circ. 28,2[illegible]
AUG 3 - 19[illegible]

World P[illegible]
Of Bucci

Marck Bucci, Je[illegible] of New York [illegible] Ear," will be [illegible] world premiere [illegible]
Billings, right[illegible]

TANGLEWOOD [illegible] sky, head of the [illegible] of the Berkshire [illegible] announced the [illegible] for the opera [illegible] evening at 8:30 [illegible] concert hall. Fea[illegible] gram is the worl[illegible] one-act opera, "[illegible] Ear," by Mark [illegible]
sioned by Samuel [illegible]
York City. The [illegible] open to Friends [illegible]
Music Center.
In the cast of [illegible]
opera are Jean Kr[illegible]
Donna Jeffrey, El[illegible]
King, Edward Par[illegible]

CHENECT[illegible]
GAZE[illegible]
Circ. D.[illegible]
AUG 1[illegible]

Yorl[illegible]
ucci

erican Co[illegible]
's one-act [illegible] af Ear" wil[illegible]
iere at the [illegible]
Lenox, M[illegible]

*
WILL be [illegible]
a departme[illegible]
e Music Cen[illegible]
the leaders[illegible]
m of the Ne[illegible] ater.
peratic exc[illegible]
nes from "[illegible]
garo" and "[illegible]
Mozart wil[illegible]
e same prog[illegible]
"Tale for a I[illegible]
missioned by S[illegible]
New York at t[illegible] son. Based on [illegible] beth Enright [illegible] minutes long.
The work is [illegible] portions, empl[illegible] and baritone le[illegible] singers and a s[illegible] scored for two[illegible]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 3 - 1957

World Premiere on Monday Of Bucci's One-Act Opera

Clark

Marck Bucci, left, who was commisioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York to compose a one-act opera, "A Tale for a Deaf Ear," will be present Monday evening at Tanglewood for the world premiere of his work, which is being directed by James Billings, right. The opera is open to Friends of Music Center.

TANGLEWOOD—Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, has announced the complete program for the opera scenes on Monday evening at 8:30, in the theatre-conbert hall. Featured on the program is the world premiere of a one-act opera, "A Tale for a Deaf Ear," by Mark Bucci, commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York City. The opera scenes are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

In the cast of Mr. Bucci's new opera are Jean Kraft, John Hornor, Donna Jeffrey, Elaine Quint, John King, Edward Parrington. The production has been staged by Edrie Sellick Hough, with settings by Claude Marks.

James Billings will direct the performance. Costumes are by Leo Van Witsen, and lighting and technical direction, by Tom DeGaetani. Felix Wolfes and Justine Votypka are pianists for the performance. The percussionists are Lloyd McCausland and Walter Tokarczyk.

Scenes from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" will also be presented, with settings made from Fiberglas and plastic materials, which are being used for experimental purposes by the opera department this summer.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
AUG 1 1957

World Premiere of Bucci Opera Slated

American Composer Mark Bucci's one-act opera, "Tale for a Deaf Ear" will have its world premiere at the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Monday evening.

* * *

IT WILL be presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center in connection with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

Operatic excerpts including scenes from "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" by Mozart will be presented on the same program.

"Tale for a Deaf Ear" was commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York at the end of last season. Based on a story by Elizabeth Enright it is about 45 minutes long.

The work is of chamber proportions, employing a soprano and baritone lead, four subsidiary singers and a small chorus. It is scored for two pianos and two percussion players but Mr. Bucci has also arranged it for two pianos alone and for a small orchestra of 21 players.

* * *

THE OPERA requires no scenery beyond a simple space set and all scenic effects are produced by lighting projections on the front scrim representing the four seasons.

The story concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season and in a different place and time; the present day; many years ago in Tuscany; the Hebrides of Scotland; and the battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years' War. The music reflects the time and place of the action and the text is in the language of the country of the setting.

* * *

BUCCI, this year on his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland at Tanglewood in 1949 and received the Gregor Piatigorsky award for musical excellence. His "Sweet Betsy From Pike" received its television premiere last winter and will be performed by the After Dinner Opera Company at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox in the near future.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157
AUG 4 1957

National Symphony, World Premieres

Tomorrow night in the theater in "Tanglewood," in the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., the world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," by the American composer, Mark Bucci, will be presented by the opera department of the center with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

On the same program, operatice excerpts will be presented, including scenes from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department and the Opera Theater, is in charge. Composer Bucci, in his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland in 1949 in Tanglewood, receiving the Gregor Piatigorsky Award for musical excellence.

This date in music: 1782, in St. Stephen's Church, Vienna, Mozart marries Constanze Weber.

Ogden Nash will come to "Tanglewood" this week from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz in a performance of "Carnival of the Animals" by Saint-Saens" in "Tanglewood on Parade" Aug. 3. He will read the original verses he wrote to accompany this interesting work.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 30 1957

Bucci Opera Will Premiere At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—The world premiere of an opera by Mark Bucci, "Tale for a Deaf Ear," will be performed at 8:30 Monday evening at the Berkshire Music Center Theater at Tanglewood. Mr. Bucci was commissioned to write the opera for Tanglewood by Samuel Wechsler of New York.

Mr. Bucci studied composing with Aaron Copland while a scholarship student at the Berkshire Music Center in 1949. A graduate of Juilliard, he has just been awarded his second Guggenheim fellowship.

Mr. Bucci is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Brown of Lenox until the end of August. Coincidentally, his opera, "Sweet Betsy From Pike," performed last season on television, will be one of four to be presented on Aug. 4, 5 and 6 by the After Dinner Opera Company at Music Barn.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 5 - 1957

Present Opera Scenes At Tanglewood Tonight

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, has announced the complete program for the Opera Scenes to begin this evening at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Featured on the program is the world premiere of a one-act opera, "A Tale for a Deaf Ear," by Mark Bucci, commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York City. The opera scenes are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

In the cast of Mr. Bucci's new opera are Jean Kraft, John Hornor, Donna Jeffrey, Elaine Quint, John King, Edward Parrington. The production has been staged by Edrie Sellick Hough, with settings by Claude Marks. James Billings will direct the performance. Costumes are by Leo Van Witsen, and lighting and technical direction by Tom DeGaetani. Felix Wolfes and Justine Votypka are pianists for the performance, and the percussionists are Lloyd McCausland and Walter Tokarczyk.

Scenes from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" will also be presented, with settings made from fiberglas and plastic materials which are being used for experimental purposes by the opera department this summer.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678
AUG 2 1957

Berkshire Center To Present Opera

A new one-act opera, "Tale for a Deaf Ear," by the American composer Mark Bucci, will be presented by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center Monday at Tanglewood, Mass.

The opera is set in four different countries and the text is written in the language of the country where each scene is set.

Scenes from "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" by Mazart also will be included on the program.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 31 1957

Mark Bucci Opera World Premiere At Tanglewood Aug. 5

The world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," a one-act opera by the American composer, Mark Bucci, will be presented by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center in conjunction with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theatre. The performance will be held in the theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Monday evening.

45-Minutes Long

"Tale for a Deaf Ear" which was commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York at the end of last season, is based on a story by Elizabeth Enright and is about 45 minutes long. Following the requirements of the commission, the work is of chamber proportions employing a soprano and baritone lead, four subsidiary singers and a small chorus. It is scored for two pianos and two percussion players, but Mr. Bucci has also arranged it for two pianos alone, and for a small orchestra of 21 players. The opera requires no scenery beyond a simple space set, and all scenic effects are produced by lighting projections on the front scrim representing the four scenes. The story concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season and in a different place and time, the present day; many years ago in Tuscany; the Hebrides of Scotland; and the battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years' War. The music reflects the time and place of the action and the text is in the language of the country where the scene is set.

On Second Grant

Mr. Bucci, who is this year on his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland at Tanglewood in 1949 and received the Gregor Piatigorsky award for musical excellence. He has composed a number of theater and television pieces, and his "Sweet Betsy From Pike" which received its television premiere last winter, will be performed by the After Dinner Opera Company at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox soon.

On the same program other operatic excerpts will be presented including scenes from "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" by Mozart.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

AUG 6 - 1957

[240]

Opera at Tanglewood, Dr. Nagy Designs Setting

By TERE PASCONE

Lenox, Mass.— The Opera Department at Tanglewood last night in conjunction with the training program of the New England Opera Theater presented patrons with something old, something brand new, and something for the future.

The old consisted of excerps from "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute," sung in English. The new was the world premiere of Marc Bucci's modern interest-absorbing one-act opera, "A Tale for a Deaf Ear." The something for the future was the debut of a group of experimental stage sets in the two Mozart portions.

* * *

THE NEW STAGE set in Figaro designed by Dr. Elmer Nagy, head of the Hartt Opera Department, and by Claude Marks in "The Magic Flute," proved a success. Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera Department, emphasized in a commentary between the acts that they were just the beginning of a long project, aimed at creating sets that would be artistic yet lightweight, easy to store and inexpensive to transport for use by traveling opera companies.

Dr. Nagy's set, which substituted fibergras 3/22 of an inch in thickness, for canvas, and aluminum frames for lumber, was warmly applauded when the curtain parted on the Figaro scene. Another device by Dr. Naby was the use of cotter pins for nails, screws and bolts. Dr. Nagy figures the set without heavy metal back supports, weighs one-fifth of a similar one with traditional materials. And even with the use of heavy metal supports to hold it up, the set he has designed would still be 20 per cent lighter, he said.

ONE COULD find little to criticize in the fine group of voices used in the Mozart works. It was too bad, however, that such an array of talent could not have been better directed, particularly in the Figaro. In the lively, delightful second act, the spirit, fun the charm of Cherubino, the liveliness of Figaro were missing. What is probably one of Mozart's most buoyant acts moved along almost leadenly, enlivened only for a few moments by the performance of Antonio, the gardener, sung by Leo Van Witsen.

* * *

MR. BUCCI'S opera had much to say for itself despite the technical difficulties in its presentation. Although written in the modern idiom, it had a dissonance which neither grated nor tortured the listener. The arias instead moved in strange melodic line with warmth and color.

The off beat plot deals with the Gates Laura and Tracy; the time is the present; the place, the Gates' living room. When the curtain rises, the Gates are bitterly quarreling over petty little things, in the climax of which Tracy, drunk with liquor and anger, drops dead from a heart attack. Laura, who has been drinking also, suddenly sobers and falling down on her knees prays he be returned to her. With the end of her aria, a voice representing the chorus sings out that Hypraemius the Mariner who had died centuries ago was so kind to repenting souls that when he died he was allowed four miracles to be granted under certain conditions. So far there had been three granted to truly penitent soult, who had their dead returned to them.

Then follows a flashback of the three incidents: One which took place in Tuscany in 1500; another in Hebrides and the third at the Battle of Dessau during the Thirty Years' War.

Laura fulfilling the requirements also has her plea granted as she promises never to say an angry word again to Tracy. But when Tracy comes to life again, he refuses to believe in the miracle, and the quarreling becomes more violent than ever. Because Laura fails to keep her promise of peace, Tracy again drops dead.

* * *

THE OPERA has punch, drama and is fast moving, but last night, technicians muffed it with their clumsy handling of the slides projected on the scrim and with the lighting effects. Diction of the singers generally was also poor.

Jean Kraft and John Hornor as Laura and Tracy did do an excellent job histrionically as well as musically. Miss Kraft, incidentally, is known to Hartford audiences, and as a member of the Hartt Opera Department several years ago sang in a number of operatic roles under the direction of Dr. Nagy, among them Mrs. Page in "Merry Wives of Windsor." Also deserving of praise, was Mr. Marks' living room stage set.

* * *

Our general reaction to the program as a whole last night was one of disappointment. One expects more than amateurish presentations such as was the case in the Mozart excerpts. As for Mr. Bucci's opera, even amateurs would have done better with the lighting and handling of the slides. We sympathize greatly with Mr. Bucci

Bucci's Opera Seen Tale of Sordidness

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

With emphasis on new varieties of scenery the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center produced two excerpts from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute" and a world premiere of Mark Bucci's "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" Monday evening in the Theatre-Concert Hall at Tanglewood.

* * *

FIBER GLASS panels formed the settings for the Mozart excerpts and projection studies on a screen in front of the principal scene of the Bucci opera formed the background for its various interlude scenes.

Bucci, now on his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland at Tanglewood in 1949 and received the Gregor Piatigorsky award for musical excellence.

The "Tale for a Deaf Ear" is based on a story by Elizabeth Enright from "The Moment Before the Rain" and both music and book were written by Bucci under the 1956 Samuel Wechsler commission.

Staging was composed and directed by Edrie Sellick Hough and the accompaniments were played by pianists Felix Wolfes and Justine Votypka and percussionists Lloyd McCausland and Walter Tokarczyk.

* * *

BUCCI HAS BEEN writing a number of theater and television pieces and apparently that is his medium.

We have never arrived at a definition of opera that has satisfied us but some things we do feel strongly about. We certainly do not feel that the Bucci opus is opera by any stretch of the imagination or definition.

We heard a number of comments including the "it is certainly provocative" which we have learned means that the commentator does not intend to get involved in serious thinking about the subject.

American audiences have never learned to hiss—it is a shame.

The Tanglewood audience applauded vigorously but this reviewer refrained.

* * *

THE STORY according to an advance release "concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season and in a different place and time including the present day; many years ago in Tuscany, the Hebrides of Scotland; and the battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years' war. The music reflects the time and place of the action and the text is in the language of the country where the scene is set."

The American scene is winter Sunday afternoon in the Gates living room, a place where drink and family bickering has become the pattern of life. The general theme is the impossibility of breaking the pattern even after the miracle of a brief respite from an engagement with death.

* * *

THE THEME OF EACH of the scenes, throwbacks in time, is "Give him back—O Give back the life—Have compassion O God."

* * *

THE MUSIC is as stark and strong as the theme.

Our primary objection to the "Tale for a Deaf Ear" is its portrayal of the sordidness and cheapness of the Laura and Tracy Gates type. They exist, without question, but does that mean that one must meet them on the opera stage when they most surely would be excluded from most American homes?

We have admired the work of Boris Goldovsky as head of the opera department at the Berkshire Music Center and appreciate the experimental nature of the theater and work done this year in co-operation with the Leadership Program of the New England Opera Theater, also the co-operation and interest of Alcoa and Owens-Corning, whose aluminum foils and fibreglass products were extensively used in the various setting experiments this year at Tanglewood.

* * *

BUT WHITHER? Or is it wither?

We found the settings for "The Magic Flute" particularly fine with the fire and water backdrops showing real promise for the new media. But why in "The Marriage of Figaro" did Count Almaviva need a pinchbar to force a fibreglass door. Let's be consistent, please.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293

AUG 7 1957

Opera: 'Tale for Deaf Ear'

New Work by Bucci Is Sung at Tanglewood

By EDWARD DOWNES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6—The Tanglewood Theatre-Concert Hall was the scene last night of yet another in the long series of opera premières presented here in recent years by the opera department of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mark Bucci's "A Tale for a Deaf Ear," commissioned by Samuel Wechsler for performance at Tanglewood was presented in its world première by a cast of student artists conducted by James Billings under the over-all direction of Boris Goldowsky.

Mr. Bucci's score is, above all else, a melodious one. It is a succession of vocalg grateful passages, which may recall Puccini now, Menotti then, and occasionally a lush post-Straussian romanticism, but is never at a loss for emotion-laden song.

•

The plot, based on the story, "The Moment Before the Rain" by Elizabeth Enright, concerns four miracles brought about by the power of repentance and love. The two chief characters, a contemporary husband and wife, bicker, quarrel, rage at each other until suddenly the husband has a coronary thrombosis and falls to the ground, apparently dead. Grief-stricken, the wife kneels beside him and implores death to give him back to her to cherish and nurse to life.

As the stage darkens a voice from the orchestra pit catches the lyric flow from the stage and recalls three times in the past when such appeals were answered by miracles. A part of the stage brightens to show an Italian Renaissance woman lamenting the death of her child, then a Scottish highlands girl appealing for her little sister's return to life, and a German soldier in the Thirty Years War begging death to take his own life in exchange for the life of his fallen brother. Three times the miracle is granted.

As the light goes up on the living room of the modern American couple the wife is still kneeling by her husband's body. Suddenly, he wakens, and embarrassed at finding himself lying on the floor, jumps to his feet, looks for his drink and starts quarreling again with his wife. She tries to resist her anger, but succumbs to her old abusive habits and soon the husband has his coronary again and lies dead once more, this time presumably forever.

•

If the ending is a little too pat, the story at least gives Mr. Bucci an almost uninterrupted succession of four great emotional climaxes, which he puts across in no uncertain terms.

For effective contrast there is the nervous, back-biting chatter, with its nagging rhythms and the banal insults that the quarreling husband and wife fling at each other at the start and again at the finish of the opera. The return of the opening situation and many of the words and musical phrases of the opening scene are especially effective formally as well as dramatically.

One may question whether this is a work that will last. For that it might well need a stronger original flow of ideas. But it is dramatically and musically a grateful piece that may easily find its way onto many a college workshop stage and perhaps professional ones as well.

•

The cast, an extremely gifted one, included Jean Kraft and John Hornor as the husband and wife, Nancy Williams as the commenting voice or chorus from the orchestra, Donna Jeffrey as the woman, Elaine Quint as the girl, John King as the soldier and Edward Purrington as the physician.

Warren Clark Jr.

Mark Bucci

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., TUESDAY, AUGUST 6, 1957

World Premiere Of One-Act Opera At Tanglewood

By WILLARD CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 5—World premiere's are always exciting events whatever they concern. Tonight there was presented at Tanglewood the first performance of a one-act opera by the American composer Mark Bucci entitled "Tale For a Deaf Ear." The Theater Shed was filled to capacity more than 1300 people being present.

Of Chamber Proportions

The work was commissioned late last season by Samuel Wechsler of New York. It is of chamber proportions, employing a suprano and baritone as leads, four subsidiary singers and a small chorus. It has been arranged for two pianos and percussion.

The story concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season and in a different place and time, namely, the present day; many years ago in Tuscany; the Hebrides in Scotland and the Battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years War.

Scenery consists of a simple space set with all scenic effects produced by lighting projections on the front scrim representing the four seasons. The text is sung in the language of the locale of the particular miracle.

Unfortunately, Boris Goldovosky placed the premiere following intermission thus it was quite impossible to get a clear idea of the characteristics of this opera. The first part of the program was devoted to excerpts from the "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart and two scenes from the same composers opera "The Magic Flute." Their were no outstanding singers, the most exciting part of the presentation being the scenery which was painted on fibreglass and held up by aluminum pillars.

This is something entirely new at which the opera department has been working this season. Mr. Goldovsky's humorous remarks took up a considerable portion of the time but from the applause of the audience one gained the impression that they proved of equal interest with the music.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 5 1957

New Bucci Opera At Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5. — A crowd of 1,300 overflowed Tanglewood's theatre - concert hall tonight for the world premiere of a one-act opera by the American composer Mark Bucci. This forty-five minute work, entitled "Tale For A Deaf Ear," was commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York City, who attended the performance.

The opera is written for a small cast with accompaniment of two pianos and percussion, and all scenic effects are produced by projections of light on the backdrop. The work is based on a story by Elizabeth Enright. The composer was present and received the enthusiastic applause of the audience.

Scenes from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and "Magic Flute" were also on the program to demonstrate the techniques of stage direction and new scenic materials of fiberglass, plastics, and aluminum with which Berkshire Music Center's opera department has been experimenting during the four-week session.

Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957

Music Review

'A Tale for a Deaf Ear'

By MARGARETTA KEITH

THE BERKSHIRE Music Center Opera Department last night presented the world premiere of a work by Mark Bucci, "A Tale for a Deaf Ear." This opera is in one act and lasts only 40 minutes, but it is a concise and absorbing piece welding musical and dramatic power. It was hardly necessary for the head of the department, Boris Goldovsky to announce that the talented people working with it had come to love it, because every note was perfectly produced, and every scene beautifully set.

The moods depicted are actually only two, the excessive tension of a husband and wife in a hideous quarrel, at the end of which the husband drops dead, and the repentance of his wife. The second mood is repeated in three similar scenes of dreamlike quality in which the dead miraculously return to life. This also happens to the husband, Mr. Gates, who continues the argument, abetted by Mrs. Gates, and of course falls dead again.

* * *

THE INTENSITY of the beginning and end reaches a high degree of realism, brilliantly produced by the accompaniment of pianos and percussion as well as by the singers. The unusual percussive effects strengthen the misty middle section as well, in quieter techniques, as does the use of the Italian and German languages and an English dialect.

All of the singers, including Nancy Williams, Jean Kraft, John Hornor, Donna Jeffrey, Elaine Quint, John King and Edward Purrington, performed difficult parts with ease and assurance. The complications of the musical detail accentuate the simplicity of the structure, which, in its turn, focuses on the meaning of the story. "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" is certainly a purposeful and artistic achievement.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006
AUG 6 1957

'Tale for a Deaf Ear' Presented At Tanglewood World Premiere

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Staff Reporter

LENOX — The world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," a one-act opera by the American composer, Mark Bucci, was presented by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center last night at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

Preliminary vehicles were the second act of "The Marriage of Figaro;" the opening scene from act I and a scene from act II of "The Magic Flute" by Mozart.

The Opera Department is headed by Boris Goldovsky, who accompanied for the Mozart works and gave his comments.

Radical experiments have been conducted by the Berkshire Opera Department this summer. Among materials used for settings have been fiber glass, supported on aluminum frames. Students have been given more active roles in stage direction, conducting and costumes. All of these have paid high dividends.

New Bucci Opera

Great interest was centered on the new Bucci Opera. It was commissioned at the end of last season, and is based on a story by Elizabeth Enright. It's of chamber proportions, employing a soprano and baritone lead, four subsidiary singers and a small chorus.

Backgrounds were played by pianists Felix Wolfes and Justine Votyka, with percussionists Lloyd McCausland and Walter Tokarczyk.

The story concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season of the year, in a different place and time—the present day; many years ago in Tuscany; the Hebrides of Ccotland; and the battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years' War.

The music reflects the time anod place of the action, and the text is in the language of the country where the scene is set.

This is something quite revolutionary in the field of contemporary opera. The closest approximation is a combination of ideas from Menotti.

The only bona-fide set is the opening. With a plain backdrop and ingenious lighting, it gives the visual impression of a living room. The next three scenes are illusioned by special lighting impressions on a front scrim.

This is high symbolism. With enough imagination it makes sense. The original instigation of instances or repentance and forgiveness is a quarrel between Laura and Tracy Gates. Both were exceedingly well sung by Jean Kraft and John Hornor. They smack realistic reason for the quarrel is over "her old man who's a West Hartford lush."

His sudden collapse and her outburst of remorse lead to the other three scenes—the woman from Tuscany who grieves the death of her child —another from the Hebrides —and a soldier from Dessau. These roles were taken capably by Donna Jeffrey, Elaine Quint and John King.

All did not go well, mechanically. The snow fell from the theater's wooden rafters, the Tuscany and Hebrides pictures were flashed a bit awry, and all was not serenely smooth.

Attractive Music

The music is most attractive. It is harmonically logical and melodically appealing.

The most gratifying thing about the "Marriage of Figaro" production was the setting by Elmer Nagy, costumes by Leo van Witsen, and singing of Richard Kuelling in the role of Count Almaviva.

The rest was spotty. The Susanna who hid in the closet was Lesli Loosli — the one who returned, Elaine Freybler. This was to give opportunity to both, neither of whom was particularly effective.

Double-Talk

Goldovsky raced his singers at the piano to a point that some of the English translation, ridiculous without assistance, sounded like double-talk.

Through no fault of his own, John Hornor is not built like, does not sound like, and cannot act like Figaro. John McCurdy looked like an arthritic gardener in the part of Dr. Bartolo. Donna Jeffrey upheld female honors most successfully as Countess Almaviva, possessing a pleasing voice and fine dramatic flair.

Kuelling's "Almaviva" was sung with resonance and control. He was dramatically just as persuasive in righteous indignation as in warranted penitence.

Magic Flute

The "Magic Flute" scenes had magnificent settings by Claude Marks. A huge, globular, mystical effect was enhanced by brilliant lighting, and the impression of expansiveness was achieved with miniature properties.

It must be admitted that the opening scene was slightly ridiculous in some respects, possibly encouraged by the English translation. The serpent looked like a loan from the "King Kong" movie. Amusement there was as George Tsandikos lay prostrate with fright from said serpent, and the three ladies sang over his horizontal form, most animatedly and a little out of tune.

The second act scene was distinguished in the main by the singing of Annabelle Bernard as Pamina.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 6 - 1957

1,300 Attend Opera Program At Music Center

More than 1,300 persons attended an opera program by students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood last night.

The second half of the program was devoted to the world premiere of a one-act opera by the American composer, Mark Bucci. The work, commissioned late last year by Samuel Wechsler of New York, concerns four miracles which take place at different times and in different places.

The first half was devoted to excerpts from "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart and two scenes from the same composer's opera, "The Magic Flute."

TIME
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 19 1957
C24

Death in the Afternoon

Time: the present, a winter Sunday afternoon. Place: The living room of Tracy and Laura Gates, somewhere in Suburbia.

Laura: It's snowing again. [Tracy gets up and begins mixing himself a drink.] Already?

Tracy: Already what? Already what?

Laura: Last Sunday began at 4 o'clock; today you began at 1:45 . . .

Tracy: Let's not forget your old man!

Laura: Not my old man, my father! He was a fine person . . . well known in his profession . . .

Tracy: Well known as a West Hartford lush, you mean . . .

Laura: You can hold it, all right . . . Right there in that fat paunch of yours.

With this Tennessee Williams-toned opening scene, audiences at Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall were introduced last week to a new one-act trilingual opera entitled Tale for a Deaf Ear, by Manhattan Composer Mark Bucci (rhymes with kootchy). For the Gateses, things quickly go from bad to hideous: Laura tosses a glass of Scotch in Tracy's face, and Tracy, rising to slug her, falls to the floor, dead of a heart attack. A repentant Laura kneels and prays that he be restored to life. While a pit chorus explains what is going on, three legendary miracles are enacted at one side of the stage: an Italian Renaissance woman finds her dead child coming back to life, a Scottish crofter sees her cow revive, and a German soldier of the Thirty Years' War exchanges his own life for that of his fallen brother. (Each of the episodes is sung in the language of its setting.) Then back to the living room. Tracy yawns, looks up at Laura and asks: "What the hell are you doing on your knees?"

Grateful for the miracle, Laura tries to change, but soon the old argument flares up again. Tracy dodges a flying ashtray, lifts his fist and drops dead again, this time permanently. While the doctor slips in and gives Laura a hypo, the chorus chants the moral: "The only death in life is the death of love."

John Van Lund

COMPOSER BUCCI
Miracle in Suburbia.

The opera, based on an Elizabeth Enright story, almost jolted the overflow (1,300) audience out of their seats, left them applauding wildly. Composer Bucci's score was lushly melodic, reminiscent in the sweeping emotional climaxes of both Puccini and Menotti, and pricked by dissonances which underscored the shrill chatter of Laura and Tracy.

The son of a bassoonist (now with the Cleveland Symphony), Composer Bucci, 33, grew up "with a bassoon in my ear," resisted all family efforts to steer him away from music. He spent eight years in a Manhattan cold-water walk-up trying to learn to be a composer and being psychoanalyzed (his Tale suffers from pseudo-Freudian symbolism). Bucci failed to attract real attention until he set James Thurber's Thirteen Clocks to music for TV (TIME, Jan. 11, 1954). Says Director Boris Goldovsky of Tanglewood's opera department: "Bucci provides something which we have missed with most modern composers. The trouble with them when they write something for voice is that they make their singers speak. This boy makes voices sing."

• • •

Another youthful New York composer with a gift for vocal writing, Marvin Levy, 25, had his latest opera premièred at the Santa Fe Opera's amphitheater (TIME, July 15). Composer Levy's work, a one-acter entitled The Tower, tells how King Solomon imprisons his daughter after a prophet predicts she will marry the poorest man in the kingdom. Joash, deadbroke, is thrown into the same prison, promptly marries the princess, and in the end is accepted by his father-in-law and decked in royal robes. The score, as frothy as the libretto, played heavily on the comic effects, e.g., King Solomon's staccato outbursts, and included some melodious arias which went down like whipped cream. The moral is sung by the prophet, who is young and just getting started in the business: "Whether we prognosticate/grief or joy/for love or hate/prophets sing the will of fate."

NEW LIGHT ON TANGLEWOOD

• Boris G... ky, who conducts a continuous search to... approaches and techniques to apply to... productions of his New England Opera T... demonstrated at Tanglewood this summ... versatility of scenery made of Fiberglas... supported on aluminum frames.

First ... exciting sets conceived at the Berkshire... Center was for Act I of La Bohème, ... Marks designed an attic of warm, and... proper amount of artistic poverty. to show ... When the traditional setting can be presented ... style and spirit in revolutionary materials... Nagy's design for Act III of The Marriage of Figaro took advantage of the translucent... Fiberglas to contrive magnificent windows,... tower scene from Pelléas et Mélisande... de Gaetani utilized the material in a golde... to create poetic mood. For the difficult ... and Water scene of The Magic Flute, M... provided a mysterious world of shadow b... multiple layers of semi-opaque Fiberglas... challenges met with distinction scene tho... Mark Bucci's fanciful new opera Tale for a Deaf Ear and the Hansel and Gretel designed ... Nagy to be produced on a lawn in full daylight.

Each setting differed from the other; each offered a fresh visual impact that enhanced the work for which it was planned. But there were problems. Since the Tanglewood season ended, Goldovsky has been in consultation with experts and believes that he is on the way to solving the major snags.

"New methods of operatic production are necessary for both cultural and economic reasons," he declares. "European methods, on which our theatre is based, have developed in a culture and environment with two important differences from ours: well-equipped theatres and cheap labor. We don't have these conditions; I am sorry about the first but glad about the second! So one has to develop new methods. One method is new scenery. We must be able to transport it, handle it, take it down, put it up and meet the enormous expense of storage."

The first complete opera to be presented in the new material is the Marriage of Figaro to be performed by the New England Opera Theatre in Houston on November 16, for which Mr. Nagy has completed the additional sets. After the performance, the Fiberglas will be detached from its frames and rolled into a bundle; the frames will be dismounted, sorted into packets and shipped to Evanston for another performance on November 24. This represents a spectacular saving over the old method of carting about huge flats and heavy constructions. In January the company will present the opera at its home theatre in Boston.

New staging techniques are only one of Goldovsky's preoccupations at Tanglewood, where impresarios of tomorrow are trained to respect musical as well as theatrical values. He has invented a tempo meter so that timing can be more exact. He is writing a book to explain his method of notating techniques in staging. Above all, he stresses that the singers must understand what they are doing.

"We train singers to be artists rather than puppets," he will tell you. "If the director says, 'Sing here, move ten steps and sing there,' it means nothing, it conveys nothing; the artist must know what the choices are, and why."

—SUE MARKS

YORICK BLUMENFELD
Boris Goldovsky in outdoor classroom in the Berkshires

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 6 1957

'Tale for a Deaf Ear' Presented At Tanglewood World Premiere

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Staff Reporter

LENOX — The world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," a one-act opera by the American composer, Mark Bucci, was presented by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center last night at Tanglewood, in conjunction with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

Preliminary vehicles were the second act of "The Marriage of Figaro;" the opening scene from act I and a scene from act II of "The Magic Flute" by Mozart.

The Opera Department is headed by Boris Goldovsky, who accompanied for the Mozart works and gave his comments.

Radical experiments have been conducted by the Berkshire Opera Department this summer. Among materials used for settings have been fiber glass, supported on aluminum frames. Students have been given more active roles in stage direction, conducting and costumes. All of these have paid high dividends.

New Bucci Opera

Great interest was centered on the new Bucci Opera. It was commissioned at the end of last season, and is based on a story by Elizabeth Enright. It's of chamber proportions, employing a soprano and baritone lead, four subsidiary singers and a small chorus.

Backgrounds were played by pianists Felix Wolfes and Justine Votyka, with percussionists Lloyd McCausland and Walter Tokarczyk.

The story concerns four miracles, each one taking place at a different season of the year, in a different place and time—the present day; many years ago in Tuscany; the Hebrides of Ccotland; and the battle of Dessau in the Thirty Years' War.

The music reflects the time and place of the action, and the text is in the language of the country where the scene is set.

This is something quite revolutionary in the field of contemporary opera. The closest approximation is a combination of ideas from Menotti.

The only bona-fide set is the opening. With a plain backdrop and ingenious lighting, it gives the visual impression of a living room. The next three scenes are illusioned by special lighting impressions on a front scrim.

This is high symbolism. With enough imagination it makes sense. The original instigation of instances or repentance and forgiveness is a quarrel between Laura and Tracy Gates. Both were exceedingly well sung by Jean Kraft and John Hornor. They smack realistic reason for the quarrel is over "her old man who's a West Hartford lush."

His sudden collapse and her outburst of remorse lead to the other three scenes—the woman from Tuscany, who grieves the death of her child—another from the Hebrides—and a soldier from Dessau. These roles were taken capably by Donna Jeffrey, Elaine Quint and John King.

All did not go well, mechanically. The "snow" fell from the theater's wooden rafters, the Tuscany and Hebrides pictures were flashed a bit awry, and all was not serenely smooth.

Attractive Music

The music is most attractive. It is harmonically logical and melodically appealing.

The most gratifying thing about the "Marriage of Figaro" production was the setting by Elmer Nagy, costumes by Leo van Witsen, and singing of Richard Kuelling in the role of Count Almaviva.

The rest was spotty. The Susanna who hid in the closet was Lesli Leosli — the one who returned, Elsine Freybler. This was to give opportunity to both, neither of whom was particularly effective.

Double-Talk

Goldovsky raced his singers at the piano to a point that some of the English translation, ridiculous without assistance, sounded like double-talk.

Through no fault of his own, John Hornor is not built like, does not sound like, and cannot act like Figaro. John McCurdy looked like an arthritic gardener in the part of Dr. Bartolo. Donna Jeffrey upheld female honors most successfully as Countess Almaviva, possessing a pleasing voice and fine dramatic flair.

Kuelling's "Almaviva" was sung with resonance and control. He was dramatically just as persuasive in righteous indignation as in warranted penitence.

Magic Flute

The "Magic Flute" scenes had magnificent settings by Claude Marks. A huge, globular, mystical effect was enhanced by brilliant lighting, and the impression of expansiveness was achieved with miniature properties.

It must be admitted that the opening scene [illegible] ridiculous in [illegible] possibly encouraged by [illegible] English translation. The [illegible] ent looked like a [illegible] "King Kong" movie. Amusement there was as [illegible] Tsandikos lay prostrate with fright from said serpent, and the three ladies sang over his horizontal form, most animatedly and a little out of time.

The second act scene was distinguished in the main by the singing of Annabelle Bernard as Pamina.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541

AUG 6 - 1957

1,300 Attend Opera Program At Music Center

More than 1,300 persons attended an opera program by students at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood last night.

The second half of the program was devoted to the world premiere of a one-act opera by the American composer, Mark Bucci. The work, commissioned late last year by Samuel Weensler of New York, concerns four miracles which take place at different times and in different places.

The first half was devoted to excerpts from "The Marriage of Figaro" by Mozart and two scenes from the same composer's opera, "The Magic Flute."

Death in the Afternoon

Time: the present, a winter Sunday afternoon. Place: [illegible] room of Tracy and Laura Gates [illegible] in Suburbia.

Laura: It's sn[illegible]. [Tracy gets up and begins m[illegible]self a drink.] Already!

Tracy: Already [illegible]dy what?

Laura: Last Su[illegible] began at 4 o'clock; today you [illegible]:45 . . .

Tracy: Let's not t[illegible]old man!

Laura: Not my old [illegible] father! He was a fine person [illegible] known [illegible] profession.

Tracy: Well know[illegible] Hartford lush, you mean . . .

Laura: You can hold it, all right . . . Right there in that fat pouch of yours.

With this Tennessee Williams-toned opening scene, audiences at Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall were introduced last week to a new one-act trilingual opera entitled Tale for a Deaf Ear, by Manhattan Composer Mario Bucci (rhymes with kootchy). From these verses, things quickly go from bad to hideous: Laura tosses a glass of Scotch in Tracy's face, and Tracy, rising to slug her, falls to the floor, dead of a heart attack. A repentant Laura kneels and prays that he be restored to life. While a pit chorus explains what is going on, three legendary miracles are enacted at one side of the stage: an [illegible]-Renaissance woman finds her dead [illegible] coming back to life, a Scottish [illegible]es her cow revive, and a German [illegible] of the Thirty Years' War exchanges his own life for that of his fallen [illegible]er. (Each of the episodes is sung [illegible]e language of its setting.) Then [illegible] to the living room, Tracy yawns, looks up at Laura and asks: "What the [illegible]re you doing on your knees?"

[illegible]teful for the miracle, Laura tries [illegible]hange, but [illegible] the old argument [illegible]up again, Tracy lodges a flying ash-[illegible] lifts his fist and drops dead again, this time permanently. While the doctor [illegible]sup in and gives Laura a typo, the chorus chants the moral: "The only death in life is the death of love."

The opera, based on an Elizabeth Enright story, almost jolted the overflow (1,300) audience out of their seats, left them applauding wildly. Composer Bucci's score was lushly melodic, reminiscent in the sweeping emotional climaxes of both Puccini and Menotti, and pricked by dissonances which underscored the shrill chatter of Laura and Tracy.

The son of a bassoonist (now with the Cleveland Symphony), Composer Bucci, 33, grew up "with a bassoon in my ear," resisted all family efforts to steer him away from music. He spent eight years in a Manhattan cold-water walk-up trying to learn to be a composer and being psychoanalyzed (his Tale suffers from pseudo-Freudian symbolism). Bucci failed to attract real attention until he set James Thurber's Thirteen Clocks to music for TV (TIME, Jan. 12, 1954). Says Director Boris Goldovsky of Tanglewood's opera department: "Bucci provides something which we have missed with most modern composers. The trouble with them is they write something for voice is that they make their singers speak. This boy makes voices sing."

Another youthful New York composer with a gift for vocal writing, Marvin Levy, 25, had his latest opera premièred at the Santa Fe Opera's amphitheater (TIME, July 15). Composer Levy's work, a one-acter entitled The Tower, tells how King Solomon imprisons his daughter after a prophet predicts she will marry the poorest man in the kingdom. Joash, deadbroke, is thrown into the same prison, promptly marries the princess and in the end is accepted by his father-in-law and decked in royal robes. The score, as frothy as the libretto, played heavily on the comic effects, [illegible] King Solomon's staccato outbursts, and included some melodious arias which went down like whipped cream. The moral is sung by the prophet, who is [illegible] and just getting started in the business: "Whether we prognosticate/grief or joy/for love or hate/prophets sing the will of fate."

John Van Lund

COMPOSER BUCCI
Miracle in Suburbia.

TIME
NEW YORK, N. Y.

AUG 19 1957

C24

NEW LIGHT ON TANGLEWOOD

• Boris G[illegible]sky, who conducts a continuous search for [illegible] approaches and techniques to apply to t[illegible]roductions of his New England Opera Th[illegible] demonstrated at Tanglewood this summ[illegible]e versatility of scenery made of Fiberglas [illegible]s supported on aluminum frames.

First o[illegible] exciting sets conceived at the Berkshire [illegible]ic Center was for Act I of La Bohème. [illegible]le Marks designed an attic of charm, and [illegible] proper amount of artistic poverty, to show th[illegible]ven the traditional setting can be executed w[illegible] style and spirit in revolutionary materials. [illegible]mer Nagy's design for Act III of The Marri[illegible] of Figaro took advantage of the translucene[illegible]d Fiberglas to contrive magnificent windows; [illegible] the tower scene from Pelléas et Mélisande [illegible]m de Gaetani utilized the material in a golde[illegible]ue to create poetic mood. For the difficult Fi[illegible] and Water scene of The Magic Flute, Mark[illegible] provided a mysterious world of shadow by [illegible]sing multiple layers of semi-opaque Fiberglas. Other challenges met with distinction were those of Mark Bucci's fanciful new opera Tale for a Deaf Ear and the Hansel and Gretel designed by Nagy to be produced on a lawn in full daylight.

Each setting differed from the other; each offered a fresh visual impact that enhanced the work for which it was planned. But there were problems. Since the Tanglewood season ended, Goldovsky has been in consultation with experts and believes that he is on the way to solving the major snags.

"New methods of operatic production are necessary for both cultural and economic reasons," he declares. "European methods, on which our theatre is based, have developed in a culture and environment with two important differences from ours: well-equipped theatres and cheap labor. We don't have these conditions; I am sorry about the first but glad about the second. So one has to develop new methods. One method is new scenery. We must be able to transport it, handle it, take it down, put it up and meet the enormous expense of storage."

The first complete opera to be presented in the new material is the Marriage of Figaro to be performed by the New England Opera Theatre in Houston on November 16, for which Mr. Nagy has completed the additional sets.

After the performance, the Fiberglas will be detached from its frames and rolled into a bundle; the frames will be dismounted, sorted into packets and shipped to Evanston for another performance on November 24. This represents a spectacular saving over the old method of carting about huge flats and heavy constructions. In January the company will present the opera at its home theatre in Boston.

New staging techniques are only one of Goldovsky's preoccupations at Tanglewood, where impresarios of tomorrow are trained to respect musical as well as theatrical values. He has invented a tempo meter so that timing can be more exact. He is writing a book to explain his method of notating techniques of staging. Above all, he stresses that the singers must understand what they are doing.

"We train singers to be artists rather than puppets," he will tell you. "If the director says, 'Sing here, move ten steps and sing there,' it means nothing, it conveys nothing; the artist must know what the choices are, and why."

—SUE MARKS

YORICK BLUMENFELD
Boris Goldovsky in outdoor classroom in the Berkshires

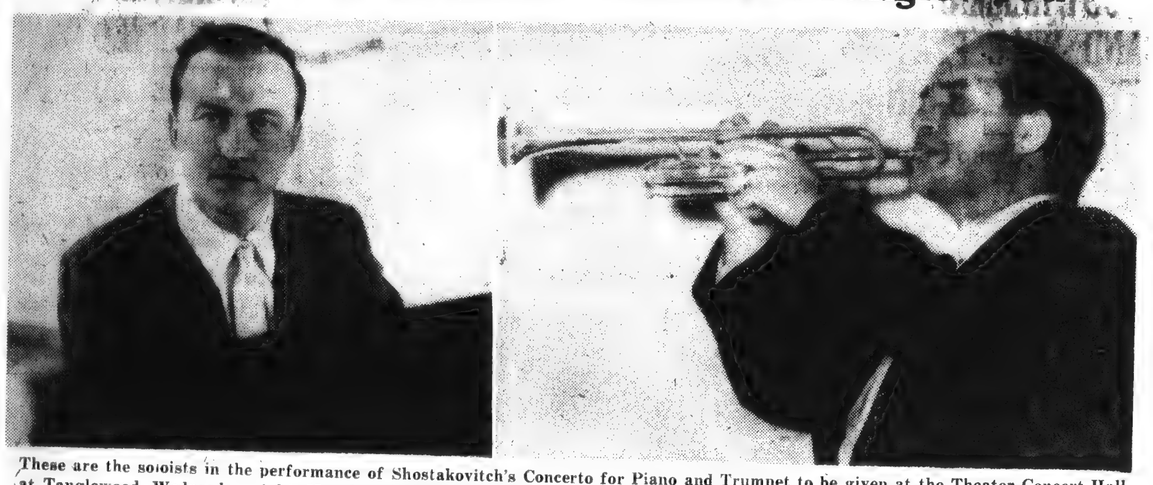
[242]

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1957

THE ZIMBLER SINFONIETTA will present the final concert tonight at 8:30 in the Wednesday evening series at Tanglewood. Made up of Boston Symphony Orchestra members under the direction of Josef Zimbler, the group will present a program previewing their forthcoming trip to South America. Assisting as soloist tonight will be pianist Menahem Pressler who will perform the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto. Members of the group are: Left to right, front row: George Zazofsky, Joseph Silverstein, Josef Zimbler, Robert Ripley, Jerome Lipson, John Fiasca; second row: William Marshall, Jesse Ceci, Bernard Kadinoff, Winifred Winograd, Leonard Moss, Fredy Ostrovsky; third row: Herman Silberman, William Waterhouse, Roger Shermont, Stanley Benson, Eugen Lehner; back row: Alfred Kishkis.

THE SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY REPUBLICAN, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., AUGUST 4, 1957

Chamber Music Concert Soloists at Tanglewood



These are the soloists in the performance of Shostakovitch's Concerto for Piano and Trumpet to be given at the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Wednesday night. Menahem Pressler, pianist, on left, and Roger Voisin, principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 7 - 1957

Final Chamber Music Concert is Tonight

The final concert in the Berkshire Festival series of Wednesday evening chamber music concerts at Tanglewood, Lenox, will take place tonight at 8:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The Zimbler Sinfonietta, a chamber orchestra made up of Boston Symphony Orchestra members under the direction of Josef Zimbler, will present a program previewing a forthcoming trip to South America.

Assisting the Sinfonietta as soloist tonight will be Menahem Pressler, pianist, who will perform the Shostakovitch Piano Concerto. The trumpet obligato in the concerto will be performed by Roger Voisin. James Pappoutsakis, flute, will be soloist in a performance of Boccherini's Concerto for Flute. Other works on the program are Boyce' Symphony No. 1, Tansman's Triptych, and Mozart's Serenata Notturna.

Proceeds from the Wednesday evening chamber music series, which concludes with tonight's concert, go to the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 6 - 1957

Zimbler Returns To Tanglewood Tomorrow Night

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, Josef Zimbler, music director, returns to Tanglewood to present a program of chamber music in the Theatre-Concert Hall tomorrow evening at 8:30.

The chamber ensemble, made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will play works by Boyce, Tansman, Boccherini, Mozart and Shostakovitch. James Pappoutsakis, flute, will be soloist in a performance of Boccherini's Concerto for Flute and Strings. Menahem Pressler, piano, and Roger Voisin, principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, are to be soloists in a performance of Shostakovitch's Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato.

On Aug. 18, the Zimbler Sinfonietta departs from Boston for a tour of Latin America which will include appearances in 24 cities and 15 countries before the chamber orchestra returns to the United States Sept. 29. The tour is sponsored by the U.S. State Department in association with the President's Special International Program.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

AUG 7 1957

Final Music Program at Tanglewood

The Zimbler Sinfonietta, Josef Zimbler, music director, will present the final chamber music program of the Tanglewood season tonight at 8:30 at the Theatre-Concert Hall on the Tanglewood grounds near Lenox, Mass.

* * *

THE ENSEMBLE, made up of members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will play works by Boyce, Tansman, Boccherini, Mozart and Shostakovitch.

James Pappoutsakis, flute, will be soloist in a performance of Boccherini's "Conperto for flute and strings." Menahem Pressler, piano; and Roger Voisin, principal trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be soloists in a performance of Shostakovitch's "Concerto for Piano and Strings with Trumpet Obbligato."

C2457

Berkshire Eagle, Thursday, Aug. 8, 1957

Music Review

The Zimbler Sinfonietta

By RAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ZIMBLER Sinfonietta gave the final Wednesday evening chamber music concert of the season last night in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood. The group of about 20 Boston Symphony Orchestra musicians, organized by cellist Joseph Zimbler, played a program of wide diversity under the virile direction of its authoritative concertmaster, George Zazofsky.

The program ranged from the first symphony of William Boyce, the English competitor and rival of Handel, through Boccherini and Mozart to, by a long jump, contemporary Alexander Tansman and Dimitri Shostakovitch.

* * *

IT ALWAYS seems to us that an orchestra or an ensemble playing under the bidding of an able participating leader plays with an extra warmth and vigor. It seems to be more a matter of personal and individual responsibility than that of a group which could carry and even shield one or two indifferent performers. In any case Zazofsky himself played with an authority which dominated the crack little ensemble and kindled in his fellow players a live and effervescent spirit.

The program showed great ingenuity. The Boyce symphony was the only so-to-speak straight classic. They immediately jumped to the Tansman Triptych, a 1930 work which they played with the lusty animation that became it. Tansman has a rare gift of movement and a picturesque sense of orchestration and a remarkable ability to express color within the means of the strings alone.

* * *

THE D MAJOR concerto for flute and strings of Boccherini, the Mozart contemporary, brought flutist James Pappoutsakis to an all-too-rare solo opportunity. Boccherini turned out compositions on a mass production schedule but within this flashy and showy exhibit were moments of simple song and melody in which soloist Pappoutsakis' beautiful tone and graceful turn of phrases could be heard to best advantage. In the florid work and the ornate cadenzas the soloist made the tinsel as untawdry as sound musicianship could temper it. He was recalled many times.

Joseph Zimbler

The Mozart Serenata Notturna is scored for two orchestras. The Zimblers divided into a quartet of two violins, a viola and a bass to one side with the remaining strings on the other. The original score called for tympani which happily were omitted last night. This is Mozart of 1776 and is one of the most enchanting of his works. It belongs to that category of music between string quartets and symphonies which must have been written for a special occasion or a special patron. It starts with a majestic march which the ensemble played with brisk robustness, proceeds to a minuet with a trio for the solo quartet, most effectively played, and ends with a most provocative rondo. This has two intermezzi, a short episode like a stiff minuet [illegible] primitive, rustic allegro. [illegible] tured that Mozart [illegible] little jokes here which [illegible] Salzburg audience recognized, [illegible] the natives looked forward to pleasantries of this sort just as last night's audience had reason to look back on the pleasant experience the Zimblers here afforded them.

* * *

THE PROGRAM ended with Menahem Pressler giving an electrifying performance of the Shostakovitch concerto for piano and strings with trumpet obbligato, played by Roger Voisin. Shostakovitch wrote this when he was 27 and under Pressler's fingers, Voisin's lip and the virtuosity of the brilliant ensemble a scintillating performance was achieved. Pressler played with incredible fire and abandon, and Voisin displayed remarkable musicianship in adjusting his tone to the whip-flash flourishes Shostakovitch has written for the trumpet. This was music and playing to lift you out of your seat and it would be difficult to find one more fitted to be the pianist in this role than the fantastically nimble and colorful Pressler. The demonstration practically disorganized the proceedings and it was with some difficulty that Pressler could finally get back to the keyboard and add a marvelously simple and poised paraphrase of the Brahm's song "Wiegenlied."

The Zimblers leave for a 30-concert tour of Central and South America immediately after the close of the Tanglewood season. There can be little doubt of what nature of ambassadors they will be

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541

AUG 8 - 1957

Last Chamber Music Concert Heard By 1,532 at Tanglewood

The Zimbler Sinfonietta performed last night at the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood in the last of the weekly chamber music concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival. There were 1,532 persons in the audience last night, making total attendance for the series 7,025.

The Sinfonietta was under the direction of George Zozovsky, first violinist. The program opened with "Symphony No. 1" by Boyce. Also heard were "Triptych" by Alexander Tansman, the Boccherini "Concerto for Flute and Strings in D Major," "Serenata Notturna for Two String Orchestras," by Mozart, and the "Concerto for Piano and Strings with Trumpet Obligato," by Shostakovitch.

The festival moves into its final phase tonight, with the annual Tanglewood on Parade program featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra. The final weekend series of the concerts gets underway tomorrow night, with the music of Beethoven to be featured.

Continued

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1957

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERTS CLOSE AT TANGLEWOOD

Zimbler Sinfonietta Excels In Last of Series at Lenox Festival

By WILLARD CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 7—The chamber music series closed in a blaze of glory tonight with a superb concert by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, probably the finest string ensemble this country has produced. The group has played together for several years and tonight under the unobstrusive direction of first violinist George Zozovsky, performances of unusual merit were provided a rapturous audience of 1532.

Concerts Are Success

The chamber music series has been very successful, drawing a total of 7025 persons to the Chamber Music Hall during its six concerts. No more discriminating audiences may be found at any of the other concerts, we believe.

The program was largely unfamiliar to the average listener for one hears too seldom the literature for string orchestra. The program opened with a delightful performance of "Symphony No. 1" by Boyce. This is clean, healthy music, replete with charming melodies and an andante during which muted strings play as lovely a melody as one could wish.

In different vein, but of great interest was the "Triptych" by Alexander Tansman. The three movements are effective. The composer favors the darker hues and lower strings providing delectable material for them in contrast to the brighter strings. The concluding presto is a riot of changing rythms. One could only marvel at the exactitude and precision of this ensemble.

Ornamental Work

The Boccherini "Concerto for Flute and Strings in D Major" brought James Pappoutsakis as soloist. He played this very ornamental work with technical facility and a fine tone. The brilliant cadenzas drew rounds of applause from the audience. He received admirable accompaniment from his colleagues, all of whom are members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The concluding portion of the program was given over to two very different types of composition, the exquisite "Serenata Notturna for Two String Orchestras" by Mozart and the "Concerto for Piano and Strings with Trumpet Obligato" by Shostakovitch.

The Mozart work received a rewarding performance, elegant and in phrase and vital in concept. It is difficult to imagine more effective writing for strings or a more imaginative use of two orchestras. It tested the mettle of the ensemble and every test was met.

Skillful Concerto

Shostakovitch has written an intriguing and skillful concerto for piano and strings with trumpet obligato. Menahem Pressler, who appeared earlier in the series with the Beaux Arts Trio, was a brilliant and effective pianist who throws himself into whatever he plays. The work was admirably suited to reveal the many facets of his playing. Roger Voisin was in top form, playing with security and brilliance. The strings were vital and capable of many colorations. The three movements were communicated skillfully and effectively and won a well deserved ovation from the audience.

[244]

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., SATURDAY, AUGUST 3, 1957

Chamber Music Concert Planned At Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 2—A concert of modern chamber music will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood on Tuesday evening at 8.30, under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, president. Members of the Boston Symphony and guest artists will take part in the concert of contemporary music, which is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The program features works by Robert Palmer, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Walter Piston, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

The concert begins with the world premiere of Robert Palmer's "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking," which was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and written in 1957. Palmer, a native of Syracuse, N. Y., studied with Howard Hanson and Roy Harris, and is an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, where he studied with Aaron Copland. The next work on the program, Milton Babbitt's Three Compositions for Piano, was written in 1947. Mr. Babbitt, associate professor of music at Princeton University, is a teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The first half of the program will conclude with a performance of Carlos Chavez "Energia," written in 1925 by the eminent Mexican composer who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1953.

Other works which will be performed are Walter Piston's Quintet for Wind Instruments (1956); Ernst Krenek's "Lamentatio Jeremiae Prophetae," composed in 1941; and Igor Stravinsky's Mass, written in 1951. The work by Krenek, which has received the Fromm Music Foundation Recording Award, will be performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Hugh Ross. Stravinsky's Mass will also be performed by the Tanglewood Choir under Mr. Ross' direction.

The Walter Piston Quintet for Wind Instruments was written for the Boston Woodwind Quintet who first performed it last winter at the Library of Congress in Washington and who will perform it again at this concert.

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT SERIES TO END TUESDAY

Second of Fromm Foundation Features at Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 3—The second of two concerts of Modern Chamber Music presented at Tanglewood under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be heard on Tuesday evening at 8.30, and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky. A concert by Fromm Fellows, young musicians who are working with contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer also under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, will be given on Friday afternoon at 2.30 and will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varese and Karl Kohn, a member of the school's faculty.

Seminar Lectures

In addition to these concerts the two final lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held on Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 3.15. Irving Fine and Aaron Copland will discuss contemporary Americans. All these events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Boris Goldovsky will present the world premiere of a one-act American opera by Mark Bucci, commissioned at Tanglewood by Samuel Wechsler. Entitled "Tale for a Deaf Ear," the work will give the opera department an opportunity to test some of the new materials and techniques of opera production that have occupied their time during their four weeks' session this summer. In addition to the new opera, Mr. Goldovsky will also present several scenes from standard operas. Friends of the School are again invited to [illegible].

Friends may also attend the final concert of the Student Orchestra in the Music Shed on Saturday afternoon, the 10th, at 3, and the final Chamber Music Concert on Sunday morning in the Theater-[illegible] at 10.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra on the 10th at 10 will be open to [illegible] the proceeds going to the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

18 SYRACUSE HERALD-JOURNAL, Aug. 1, 1957

TALKING IT OVER

Area Musicians to Participate Programs in Other Centers

By Emma Van Wormer

Widely known musicians, identified with vocal and instrumental programs, will take part in notable events in New England and the middle west this month.

* * *

Palmer Cantata To Be Sung in 'Tanglewood'

Robert Palmer, former Syracusan, now living in Ithaca where he is a member of the music faculty of Cornell University, will be in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. where his chamber cantata "At Night and The Sea" will be performed in the Concert Hall next Tuesday night. It is in tw parts, part one consisting of short poems ranging from classical Greek to modern texts and part two a setting of Walt Whitman's "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking."

Part one was presented last April at the tenth anniversary of the Festival of the University of Illinois. The second part will be heard for the first time Aug. 6. The cantata was commissioned by the Fromm Foundation for the Urbana Festival in the University of Illinois. In the cantata there are four vocal solos and 11 solo instrumental parts.

Composer Palmer is the son of S. [illegible] Palmer, 3520 Midland Ave. Mrs. Palmer is the daughter of Mrs. Lila M. Westcott, 1707 S. State St. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and their daughters, Anne and Alison Palmer are vacationing on Lake Ontario before leaving for New England.

* * *

ITHACA, N. Y.
JOURNAL
Circ. D. 12,953
AUG 6 1957

Ithacan's Music To Be Performed

A new work by Prof. Robert Palmer of 108 Valley Rd., a member of the Cornell Music Department, will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood, Conn., a the Berkshire Music Center, this evening. It is Part Two of the cantata "Of Night and the Sea," in a setting from Walt Whitman's "Seadrift" ("Out of the cradle endlessly rocking"). Part One had its premiere performance in the contemporary arts festival at Urbana, Ill., on April 2.

The performers in this evening's concert will be members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and four professional vocal soloists under the direction of Hugh Ross, director of the Schola Cantorum in New York.

The program, which will be presented at the theater in Tanglewood, is one of a series of chamber music concerts in the current Berkshire Music Festival. The concert is sponsored by the Fromm Foundation for the furtherance contemporary music.

Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, Aug. 3, 1957

Fromm Concert Features Modern Chamber Music

TANGLEWOOD — A concert of modern chamber music will be presented in the theatre-concert hall at Tanglewood on Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, president.

Members of the Boston Symphony and guest artists will take part in the concert of contemporary music, which is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The program features works by Robert Palmer, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Walter Piston, Ernest Krenek and Igor Stravinsky.

Palmer's Work

The concert begins with the world premiere of Robert Palmer's "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking," which was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation and written in 1957. Palmer, a native of Syracuse, N. Y., studied with Howard Hanson and Roy Harris, and is an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, where he studied with Aaron Copland. The next work on the program, Milton Babbitt's Three Compositions for Piano, was written in 1947. Mr. Babbitt, associate professor of music at Princeton University, is a teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. The first half of the program will conclude with a performance of Carlos Chavez' "Energia," written in 1925 by the eminent Mexican composer, who was guest teacher of composition at the Berkshire Music Center in 1953.

Other works to be performed are Walter Piston's Quintet for Wind Instruments (1956); Ernest Krenek's "Lamentatio Jeremiae Prophetae," composed in 1941, and Igor Stravinsky's Mass, written in 1951. The work by Krenek, which has received the Fromm Music Foundation Recording Award, will be performed by the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Hugh Ross. Stravinsky's Mass will also be performed by the Tanglewood Choir under Mr. Ross' direction.

The Walter Piston Quintet for Wind Instruments was written for the Boston Woodwind Quintet, which first performed it last winter at the Library of Congress in Washington and which will perform it again at this concert.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 6 - 1957

Chamber Music Concert Friday At Tanglewood

A concert of modern chamber music will be presented by the Fromm Fellowship Players in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood Friday afternoon at 2:30. The program features works by William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Fromm Fellowship Players are 11 young professional musicians who are spending the summer working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. They perform works by student composers at weekly Composers' Forums, work in association with the Music Center's composition department, and give two concerts of modern chamber music during the 1957 session of the school. The concert on Thursday afternoon will be their second.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 5 - 1957

Tanglewood to Hear

A concert of modern chamber music will be presented in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Tuesday at 8:30 p. m., under auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation, Chicago. Members of the Boston Symphony and guest artists will participate.

RED HOOK, N. Y.
ADVERTISER
Circ. W. 1,225
AUG 8 1957

Modern Chamber Music Concert At Tanglewood

A concert of modern chamber music will be presented by the Fromm Fellowship Players in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood on Friday afternoon, August 9 at 2:30 p.m. The program features works by William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky. The concert is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The Fromm Fellowship Players are eleven young professional musicians who are spending the summer working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, President. They perform works by student composers at weekly Composers' Forums, work in association with the Music Center's composition department, and give two concerts of modern chamber music during the 1957 session of the school. The concert on Thursday afternoon will be their second.

The opening work on the program, William Denny's String Quartet, was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation. Following this, student conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, will conduct a performance of Edward Varese's "Octandre." Also on the program are Roussel's "Serenade" and Karl Kohn's Concert Music for Twelve Winds, which will be conducted by the composer, who is a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. The program will conclude with a performance of Stravinsky's "Pribaoutki," conducted by Rosario Mazzeo of the Boston Symphony, with soprano soloist Naomi Farr.

BOSTON HERALD, TUESDAY, AUG. 6, 1957

Chamber Music Tonight in Lenox

The second of two concerts of Modern Chamber Music presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago will be heard this evening in Lenox at 8:30, and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky. A concert by Fromm Fellows, young musicians who are working with contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer—also under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation—will be given on Friday afternoon at 2:30 and will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varese and Karl Kohn, a member of the school's faculty.

The opening work on the program, William Denny's String Quartet, was commissioned by the Fromm Music Foundation. Following this, student conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, will conduct a performance of Edward Varese's "Octandre." Also on the program are Roussel's "Serenade" and Karl Kohn's Concert Music for Twelve Winds, which will be conducted by the composer, who is a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. The program will conclude with a performance of Stravinsky's "Pribaoutki," conducted by Rosario Mazzeo of the Boston Symphony, with soprano soloist Naomi Farr.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG [illegible] 1957

At Tanglewood

A concert of chamber music will be presented in the Tanglewood Chamber Music Hall on Friday afternoon at 2:30 by the Fromm Fellowship Players. The program will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varèse, Roussel, Karl Kohn, and Stravinsky.

The Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1957—11

Music Review

Fromm Chamber Concert

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE LAST of the two programs of modern chamber music presented at Tanglewood under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation was played last night in the theater-concert hall by a considerable aggregation of players from the Boston Symphony orchestra, the Tanglewood choir conducted by Hugh Ross and several vocal solists.

One might have thought that two hours of such avant-garde music would have taxed one's attentive potentialities, but this reviewer, for one, can vouch for the statement that time did not enter into the listeners' consideration, so absorbing, and bizarre, if you will, was the music and so excellent the performances.

* * *

THE PROGRAM went as far back into the dark ages as 1925 to resurrect Carlos Chavez' unusual sketch for six wind instruments and three strings of which the top voice was the viola's. Otherwise it was music of this decade, again with the slight exception of Ernest Krenek's "Lament of the Prophet Jeremiah" a 1941 opus which received the Fromm Music Foundation recording award.

Three compositions by Milton Babbitt, this season of the Berkshire Music Center composition faculty, were played by Robert Helps with conspicuous competence. One of the salient factors of this example of Babbitt's music and of much of the rest on the evening's program is that it requires more ability to execute irregular rhythms and fantastic note clusters, fantastic, at least, to conventional ears and fingers, than it asks of a performer's judgment in the matter of taste.

The Walter Piston quintet for wind instruments, of his 1956 output, was the most engaging music of the evening. Here the indication, in the second movement, "con Tenerezza" was tangibly achieved and the wit of the scherzando was as subtle and saucy as a page of Bernard Shaw. Stravinsky's Mass, of 1951, for choir and horns, which ended the program, was, by contrast, back on terra firma and allowed the audience to relax quite oriented again, so to speak.

* * *

KRENEK'S "Lament" is for choir unaccompanied and the Tanglewood choir, a score of musically superior vocalists, was guided by Hugh Ross with consumate control. It is written to Latin words and the scores contains no bar lines nor time divisions. Krenek is attracted by bibical subject matter and he has superimposed a 12-tone row style on a Gregorian four-note scale. There was no suggestion of insecurity in Ross's command nor the singers' performance. We thought it an heroic accomplishment. It is contrapuntally thin but uncompromising, and it's appeal is certainly more to the intellect than to the heart.

The program began with a composition commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. Robert Palmer, once a Berkshire Music Center student, has written a work for vocal quartet with accompaniment, or probably more accurately, participation, of 10 instrumentalists, evenly divided between strings and wind and this was the premiere performance.

Palmer has taken almost the entire Walt Whitman excerpt "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking" from the poem "Sea Drift" in "Leaves of Grass." It thus becomes a recitation with music and it is not clear what relative importance is intended for the two cardinal ingredients.

* * *

PALMER announces himself with the octave E in the violins, but departs on the next step into less charted areas which left some listeners rudderless at sea. The harmonic asperities were not offensive, but, on first hearing, neither was there any infusion of lyrical warmth. Palmer and the others like him deserve the courtesy of deeper inspection and repeated hearing rather than the hasty, insufficiently-grounded and sharp comment of a one-time hearer.

* * *

THESE TWO concerts and the other Fromm-sponsored activities which have enlisted the efforts of a great segment of the personnel and of the efforts of the Berkshire Music Center this season have been among the most significant advances which have taken place at Tanglewood this summer. The Foundation has sponsored the Fromm players who have been on hand to perform the latest output of young composers in the Berkshire Music Center and also to ilustrate the lectures on contemporary music by the brilliant faculty members which have been sponsored by the Fromm institution. It is always difficult to assay the gold among the larger gross amount of ore in such enterprises, but the best minds in music and the best intentions in philanthropy are concentrated on the one lofty goal in a most laudable manner. Tanglewood is the ideal place for the Fromm projects and the union and cooperation are fortunate indeed for aspiring musicians and the cause of music.

SCHENECTADY, N.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
AUG 6 1957

FELLOWSHIP—sic student, is sho at the Berkshire rmer Y ember a hard Lottridge, an er of the Schenectad tra (now disband is playing bassoon hire Music Center th

as one of the 11
wship Players at t in the modern idiom ummer.

* * *

TRIDGE, son of Mr
Lottridge of Haigh tudent at the Univer sylvania.
ore leaving this city t e Curtis Institute in ia, he appeared as the Youth Orchest
the Schenectady Cho

Curtis he studied Sol Schoenbach, p a at the Philadelp
ra. From 1951 to d with a U.S. Arm and later returned Institute and was
d in the spring of 1955

* * *

URING THE winter Mr ottridge played with the ans Symphony Orchestr one of the Fromm F Players Lottridge has rming works by st posers at the weekly rs' forums at Tangle king with members
sic Center's compositi

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
AUG 6 1957

ON FELLOWSHIP—Richard Lottridge, Schenectady music student, is shown with the bassoon he is playing at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Former Youth Orchestra Member at Berkshire

Richard Lottridge, an original member of the Schenectady Youth Orchestra (now disbanded) in 1947, is playing bassoon at the Berkshire Music Center this summer as one of the 11 Fromm Fellowship Players studying music in the modern idiom there this summer.

* * *

LOTTRIDGE, son of Mrs. Ethel Usher Lottridge of Haigh avenue, is a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

Before leaving this city to study at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia he appeared as soloist with the Youth Orchestra and with the Schenectady Choral Society.

At Curtis he studied bassoon with Sol Schoenbach, principal bassoon of the Philadelphia Orchestra. From 1951 to 1954 he played with a U.S. Army Field Band and later returned to the Curtis Institute and was graduated in the spring of 1955.

* * *

DURING THE winter of 1955-56 Lottridge played with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra.

As one of the Fromm Fellowship Players Lottridge has been performing works by student composers at the weekly composers' forums at Tanglewood, working with members of the Music Center's composition department and presenting two concerts of modern chamber music.

The Fromm Fellowship Players will present a program Friday at 2:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood featuring works by William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky. The concert will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. A feature of the program will be Karl Kohn's "Concert Music for Twelve Winds," to be conducted by the composer, a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty.

OAKLAND TRIBUNE
Sunday, Aug. 11, 1957

Art and Music

AT BERKSHIRE—Four young California musicians at Berkshire Festival under sponsorship of Forum Music Foundation are, left to right, William O. Smith, formerly of Berkeley; Robert W. Goldstein, Oakland; Jean W. Zeiger, Berkeley; Howard Colf, Los Angeles.

Foundation Sponsors Eastbay Musicians at Tanglewood

The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, several of whose recordings of contemporary music have been reviewed in this department, is sponsoring four young California musicians working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.

William O. Smith, clarinetist and composer, formerly of Berkeley and Mills College, is on leave from the University of Southern California for study in Rome as winner of the Prix de Rome, after he completes the Berkshire course. Smith spent a winter in Paris 1951-52 on the U.C.'s Prix de Paris.

Jean Zeiger, of the University of California at Berkeley, is a flutist in the group which, with seven others, gave two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood this month.

Robert Goldstein, Oakland oboeist, studied at Mills and played with the Little Symphony the past season. He has also been a member of major ballet orchestras.

Howard Colf, a recent graduate of U.C.L.A., was first cellist at the Ojai festival last year.

At their recent Berkshire concerts the young musicians played works of Powell, Trimble, Revueltas, Webern, Milhaud, Copland, William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG 1957

Tanglewood—1957

This year — the 19th year — the Berkshire Music Centre at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again opened its doors for creative summer activities. Over 300 students flocked to the various study departments — composition, orchestra, chorus, opera or general study group — to submerge themselves in six weeks of intensive musical life.

Many students find themselves in an atmosphere still alien to them — that of ensemble work, and they prosper by the opportunities available to them here. One group, the composers, gain to an even greater measure by the activities at the Music Centre. Under the leadership of Aaron Copland, they compose under the guidance of Copland, Irving Fine or Milton Babbitt. They discuss their compositions, write a composition for selected instruments, and investigate the many roads to perfection.

Exciting is the cooperation of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. This foundation has granted a number of fellowships to the Centre for gifted musicians. These players aid composers by giving concerts of the new compositions, readings of new works, sight readings and generally assist the composers in development of their understanding of music demands and possibilities. Mr. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Centre, expressed delight at this new formation of Fromm Fellowship Players.

We met with several composers. 17 are attending the 6 week session (15 are on scholarship). They come from many parts of the United States as well as Norway and Uruguay. Jose Serebier comes from Montevideo, Uruguay, and is remaining here on a Fulbright Fellowship and a Guggenheim Scholarship. Several of his works have been published.

To us the most interesting composer at the Berkshire Music Centre is 29-year-old Harold Farberman, timpanist of the Boston Symphony.

Sunday [illegible]
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
AUG 25 1957

[245]

Success Of Summer Schools Stimulus To Modern Music

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

An important if not greatly publicized phase of some of our major music festivals is the teaching activities which have become an outgrowth and adjunct of these summer musicals. A number of the country's finest pedagogues and composers form the faculties at such schools as Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center and the one maintained at the celebrated Aspen Festival in Colorado.

Even students of jazz may now find teaching facilities such as those offered at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., where the new School of Jazz is currently in session. The Barn, located near the Berkshire Music Festival grounds, has recently followed the lead of its "classical sisters" by adding a teaching program to its regular jazz concert series.

The various music schools at our summer festivals are attended by advanced students, both composers and performers, many of whom are already launched on a professional career. These young hopefuls come in the hope of brushing the rough edges off their talents and, generally speaking, to make the most of the time at their disposal between musical seasons. Fortunately a number of scholarships are available to the young musicians and the more talented receive further aid through prizes. Over half of the students at the Berkshire Music Center received grants this summer from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established by RCA in 1947 and now maintained by contributions received from Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Last Sunday I spoke here of the dismal outlook for our younger composers at the present time. A new program sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation this summer at the Berkshire Music Center was designed to promote interest in contemporary music and to aid young composers in obtaining a securer grasp on their craft.

Some 11 young expert professional musicians, known as the Fromm Fellowship Players, spent six weeks at Tanglewood in pursuance of the new plan. A carefully chosen group recruited from all over the country, the players had a comprehensive round of activities. They gave several concerts of contemporary music, played illustrations in a series of lectures, and also played original works by students of the Berkshire Music Center this season. The unique benefits accruing to student composers from the new project, an idea which originated with Paul Fromm, of Chicago, may be evaluated from the statements of two prominent American composers, Aaron Copland and Milton Babbitt, both of whom were members of the Center's faculty.

Said Copland: "Now at last we are like old prince Esterhazy. Imagine a composer having his own orchestra to try out new compositions! The general atmosphere has never been so stimulating, and we also have heard more contemporary music than ever before."

Good Experience

Babbitt echoed Copland's sentiments with the following: "These players have spent most of the summer meeting with student composers, playing anything that is thrown at them, anything at all the composers want to try. For the first time in their experience, the young composers have had the chance to hear their music hot from manuscript, with the consequent opportunity of making immediate corrections, or discussing improvements in compositional technique, or revising unplayable (or ineffective) instrumental combinations on the advice of an expert."

The success of the Fromm Foundation project at Tanglewood may sow the seeds for a wide application of the plan. At least that is the hope of all who were connected with this season's experiment. Composer Copland has expressed the hope that other schools may adopt the idea and maintain a resident group of young players for the purpose of aiding student composers. As for Mr. Fromm, his enthusiasm may be gauged by his expressed plans to get a permanent project of the sort under way as soon as possible. "Perhaps the creation of a sort of institute is the answer," he said.

The Fromm plan also envisaged "the organic growth of an educational program for the public." He had this to say with regard to the weekly seminars which the Fromm Fellowship players illustrated this season at Tanglewood: "The illustration of the lectures (on contemporary music) through live performances brings the listener into direct contact with the music and keeps the seminar from deteriorating into a conventional music appreciation course. It is impossible to talk about music without playing it."

★ ★ ★

Of particular interest to us here is the fact that a recent Yale Music School graduate and a young French horn player from Wallingford won acclaim for their different roles in the just completed Fromm project. The former is Mel Powell, a jazz pianist of the first rank whose improvisations added lustre to Benny Goodman's Quartet for a spell. Powell thrilled listeners at the Bowl during his appearance with the Goodman Trio in the second concert of the 1952 Pops series. Later, during his student days at the Yale Music School where he furthered his ambitions of becoming a serious composer, Powell astounded his professors with what was undoubtedly their first acquaintance with his "rumored" jazz talents. This came about in an unprecedented appearance of a jazz group in sedate Sprague Hall—the Goodman Trio again! To get back to the subject in hand, the Fromm players performed Powell's Quintet at their Tanglewood program on August 3—strictly a "longhaired work," of course, or was it?

The Wallingford musician referred to is Paul Ingraham who found playing with both the New Haven and Connecticut Symphony Orchestra a few years ago to represent helpful rungs on the musical ladder in his climb to success. Ingraham, who holds a B. Mus. degree from Ithaca College and is now studying for [illegible]'s degree at the Manhattan College of Music in New York, is a member of the Fromm Fellowship Players. This group, in its [illegible] efforts this summer at Tanglewood, reportedly performed [illegible] and in the manner of an ensemble of long standing. A New York critic called the players "veritable Bunyans of modernism."

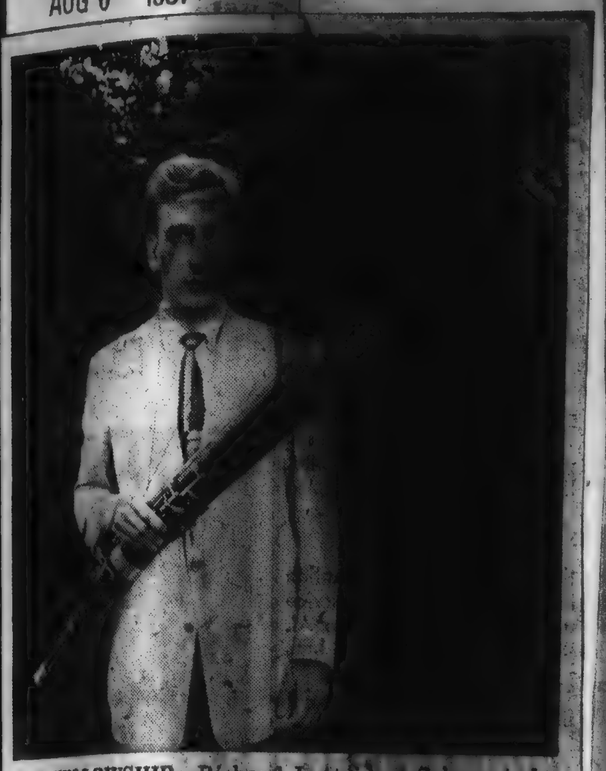
The players, with but two days notice, gave a performance of Schoenberg's formidable "Pierrot Lunaire" that won them this comment from a most discriminating faculty member—"the best performance I have ever heard."

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 7 - 1957

At Tanglewood

concert of chamber music be presented in the Tanglewood Chamber Music Hall on afternoon at 2:30 by the Fromm Fellowship Players. The program will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varèse, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429
AUG 6 1957



ON FELLOWSHIP—Richard Lottridge, Schenectady music student, is shown with the bassoon he is playing at the Berkshire Music Center this summer.

Former Youth Orchestra Member at Berkshire

Richard Lottridge, an original member of the Schenectady Youth Orchestra (now disbanded) in 1947, is playing bassoon at the Berkshire Music Center this summer as one of the 11 Fromm Fellowship Players studying music in the modern idiom there this summer.

* * *

LOTTRIDGE, son of Mrs. Ethel Usher Lottridge of Haigh avenue, is a student at the University of Pennsylvania.

Before leaving this city to study at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, he appeared as soloist with the Youth Orchestra and with the Schenectady Chorale Society.

At Curtis he studied bassoon with Sol Schoenbach, principal bassoon of the Philadelphia Orchestra from 1951 to 1954. He played with a U.S. Army band and later returned to the Curtis Institute and was graduated in the spring of 1955.

* * *

DURING THE winter of 1955 Lottridge played with the New Orleans Symphony Orchestra.

As one of the Fromm Fellowship Players Lottridge has been performing works by student composers at the weekly composers' forums at Tanglewood, working with members of the Music Center's composition department and presenting two concerts of modern chamber music.

The Fromm Fellowship Players will present a program Friday at 2:30 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall at Tanglewood featuring works by William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky. The concert will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. A feature of the program will be Karl Kohn's "Concert Music for Twelve Winds," to be conducted by the composer, a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty.

AT BERKSHIRE—Four young California musicians at Berkshire Festival under sponsorship of Forum Music Foundation are, left to right, William O. Smith, formerly of Berkeley; Robert W. Goldstein, Oakland; Jean W. Zeiger, Berkeley; Howard Colf, Los Angeles.

Foundation Sponsors Eastbay Musicians at Tanglewood

The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, several of whose recordings of contemporary music have been reviewed in this department, is sponsoring four young California musicians working in contemporary music at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Mass.

William O. Smith, clarinetist and composer, formerly of Berkeley and Mills College, is on leave from the University of Southern California for study in Rome as winner of the Prix de Rome, after he completes the Berkshire course. Smith spent a winter in Paris, 1951-52 on the U.C.'s Prix de Paris.

Jean Zeiger, of the University of California at Berkeley, is a flutist in the group which, with seven others, gave two concerts of modern chamber music at Tanglewood this month.

Robert Goldstein, Oakland, observed, studied at [illegible] and played with the Little Symphony the past season. He has also been a member of major ballet orchestras.

Howard Colf, a recent graduate of U.C.L.A., was first cellist at the opera festival last year.

At their recent Berkshire concerts the young musicians played works of Powell, Trimble, Revueltas, Webern, Milhaud, Copland, William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinsky.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
AUG. 1957

Tanglewood—1957

This year — the 19th year — the Berkshire Music Centre at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again opened its doors for creative summer activities. Over 300 students flocked to the various study departments — composition, orchestra, chorus, opera or general study group — to submerge themselves in six weeks of intensive musical life.

Many students find themselves in an atmosphere still alien to them — that of ensemble work, and they prosper by the opportunities available to them here. One group, the composers, gain to an even greater measure by the activities at the Music Centre. Under the leadership of Aaron Copland, they compose under the guidance of Copland, Irving Fine or Milton Babbitt. They discuss their compositions, write a composition for selected instruments, and investigate the many roads to perfection.

Exciting is the cooperation of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. This foundation has granted a number of fellowships to the Centre for gifted musicians. These players aid composers by giving concerts of the new compositions, readings of new works, sight readings and generally assist the composers in development of their understanding of music demands and possibilities. Mr. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Centre, expressed delight at this new formation of Fromm Fellowship Players.

We met with several composers. 17 are attending the 6 week session (15 are on scholarship). They come from many parts of the United States as well as Norway and Uruguay. Jose Serebier comes from Montevideo, Uruguay, and is remaining here on a Fulbright Fellowship and a Guggenheim Scholarship. Several of his works have been published.

To us the most interesting composer at the Berkshire Music Centre is 29-year-old Harold Farberman, timpanist of the Boston Symphony.

[illegible]
Circ. 101,553
AUG 25 1957

[245]

Success Of Summer Schools Stimulus To Modern Music

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

An important if not greatly publicized phase of some of our major music festivals is the teaching activities which have become an outgrowth and adjunct of these summer musicals. A number of the country's finest pedagogues and composers form the faculties at such schools as Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center and the one maintained at the celebrated Aspen Festival in Colorado.

Even students of jazz may now find teaching facilities such as those offered at the Berkshire Music Barn in Lenox, Mass., where the new School of Jazz is currently in session. The Barn, located near the Berkshire Music Festival grounds, has recently followed the lead of its "classical sisters" by adding a teaching program to its regular jazz concert series.

The various music schools at our summer festivals are attended by advanced students, both composers and performers, many of whom are already launched on a professional career. These young hopefuls come in the hope of brushing the rough edges off their talents and, generally speaking, to make the most of the time at their disposal between musical seasons. Fortunately a number of scholarships are available to the young musicians and the more talented receive further aid through prizes. Over half of the students at the Berkshire Music Center received grants this summer from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund, established by RCA in 1946 and now maintained by contributions received from Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Last Sunday I spoke here of the dismal outlook for our young composers at the present time. A new program sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation this summer at the Berkshire Music Center was designed to promote interest in contemporary music and to aid young composers in obtaining a securer grasp on their craft.

Some 11 young expert professional musicians, known as the Fromm Fellowship Players, spent six weeks at Tanglewood in pursuance of the new plan. A carefully chosen group recruited from all over the country, the players had a comprehensive round of activities. They gave several concerts of contemporary music, played illustrations in a series of lectures, and also played [illegible] works by students of the Berkshire Music Center this season. The unique benefits accruing to student composers from the new project, an idea which originated with Paul Fromm, of Chicago, may be evaluated from the statements of two prominent American composers, Aaron Copland and Milton Babbitt, both of whom were members of the Center's faculty.

Said Copland: "Now at last we are like [illegible] Prince Esterhazy. Imagine a composer having his own orchestra to try out new compositions! The general atmosphere has never been so stimulating, and we also have heard more contemporary music than ever before."

Good Experience

Babbitt echoed Copland's sentiments with the following: "These players have spent most of the summer meeting with student composers, playing anything that is thrown at them, anything at all the composers want to try. For the first time in their experience, the young composers have had the chance to hear their music hot from manuscript, with the consequent opportunity of making immediate corrections, or discussing improvements in compositional technique or revising unplayable (or ineffective) instrumental combinations on the advice of an expert."

The success of the Fromm Foundation project at Tanglewood may sow the seeds for a wide application of the plan. At least that is the hope of all who were connected with this season's experiment. Composer Copland has expressed the hope that other schools may adopt the idea and maintain a resident group of young players for the purpose of aiding student composers. As for Mr. Fromm, his enthusiasm may be gauged by his expressed plans to get a permanent project of the sort under way as soon as possible. "Perhaps the creation of a sort of institute is the answer," he said.

The Fromm plan also envisaged "the organic growth of an educational program for the public." He had this to say with regard to the weekly seminars which the Fromm Fellowship players illustrated this season at Tanglewood: "The illustration of the lectures (on contemporary music) through live performances brings the listener into direct contact with the music and keeps the seminar from deteriorating into a conventional music appreciation course. It is impossible to talk about music without playing it."

* * *

Of particular interest to us here is the fact that a recent Yale Music School graduate and a young French horn player from Wallingford won acclaim for their different roles in the just completed Fromm project. The former is Mel Powell, a jazz pianist of the first rank whose improvisations added lustre to Benny Goodman's Quartet for a spell. Powell thrilled listeners at the Bowl during his appearance with the Goodman Trio in the second concert of the 1952 Pops series. Later, during his student days at the Yale Music School where he furthered his ambitions of becoming a serious composer, Powell astounded his professors with what was undoubtedly their first acquaintance with his "rumored" jazz talents. This came about in an unprecedented appearance of a jazz group in sedate Sprague Hall—the Goodman Trio again! To get back to the subject in hand, the Fromm players performed Powell's Quintet at their Tanglewood program on August 2—strictly a "longhaired work," of course, or was it?

The Wallingford musician referred to is Paul Ingraham who found playing with both the New Haven and Connecticut Symphony Orchestra a few years ago to represent helpful rungs on the musical ladder in his climb to success. Ingraham, who [illegible] a B. Mus. degree from Ithaca College and is now studying [illegible] degree at the Manhattan College of Music in New York, is a member of the Fromm Fellowship Players. This group, in their [illegible] efforts this summer at Tanglewood, reportedly performed [illegible] and in the manner of an ensemble of long standing. A New York critic called the players "veritable Bunyans of modernism."

The players, with but two days notice, gave a performance of Schoenberg's formidable "Pierrot Lunaire" that won them this comment from a most discriminating faculty member—"the best performance I have ever heard."

TIGHT BINDING

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, AUGUST 11, 1957

Fromm Project Pays Off at Lenox

By JAY S. HARRISON

LENOX, Mass.

Unfortunately—or rather fortunately for the belabored cause of contemporary music—Paul Fromm was tending to business and was not available for an interview. For Mr. Fromm, a prosperous Chicago wine importer, is so much a man devoted to the art of his age that a generous portion of his annual receipts has gone to underwrite the Fromm Music Foundation, which in only five years has become one of the most vital personal philanthropies on the entire contemporary scene.

In its brief career, the Foundation has commissioned considerable music (mostly from the ranks of the gifted young), had it performed, got it recorded and in general served to remind the world that the knack of dispensing patronage need not be confined solely to the operations of the multi-million-dollar foundations whose names and generosities are frequently cited in the nation's press.

Experiment Ended

Here at Tanglewood, for example, the close of the season has also marked the end of an experiment, sponsored by Mr. Fromm, that, according to all hands, is likely to have far-reaching and salutary consequences. Eleven crack musicians, the Fromm Fellowship Players, have spent the past six weeks working in direct contact with the young composers on the campus, and since it is a rare opportunity for writers of music to have players of it within shouting distance its effect on the former has been watched by the Berkshire Music Center's faculty with enormous interest.

As the chairman of that faculty and head of the Composition Department, moreover, Aaron Copland seemed the likely man to discuss the functions of the Fromm Fellowship troupe and its purpose. He also provided some notes on the background of the entire scheme.

"That Was the Dream"

Said Mr. Copland recently, "We've always thought it would be marvelous to have a group of performers attached to our student composers at Tanglewood. In that way, instead of living exclusively among themselves they'd be in close proximity with a number of highly competent instrumentalists who would be at their beck and call. The same group could be used for Sunday composer concerts, give classroom demonstrations, assist lecturers and maybe play a series of concerts on its own. Well, anyway, that was the dream. It was Paul Fromm who made it reality.

"Fromm provided a $500 fellowship for each of eleven wonderful young musicians and then paid their fares from all over the country. In fact, his only stipulation was that the instrumentalists be chosen from over as wide an area as possible. Our main job was to get together a homogeneous ensemble especially interested in contemporary music. The members had to be able to read almost anything at sight and, we hoped, would come here in a spirit of co-operation. As it turned out, we were lucky on all counts."

Husband, Wife Team

The make-up of the Fromm Fellowship Players, whose personnel was recommended to its patron by leading musicians throughout America, consists of a woodwind quintet plus a string quartet plus a soprano and pianist.

To indicate the geographic scope of its membership it is only necessary to record that the soprano and pianist, a husband and wife team, Lowell and Naomi Farr, hail from Salt Lake City; that the bassoonist, Richard Lockridge, is from Schenectady; the cellist, Howard Colf, from California, and the horn player, Paul Ingraham, from Connecticut.

The remaining Fellowship fellows are similarly from homes that arch the continent. They have, however, a common bond, apart from virtuosity—their devotion to all things contemporary. It seems to have paid off.

Hear the Instruments

As Mr. Copland put it, you have no idea what the presence of these players has meant. In every way. Take the demonstration classes for composers. Every composer could actually hear—not think that he had heard—what a flute, say, sounds like when it jumps from its middle to its highest register.

"More important still—each composer got a chance to hear the instruments in combination, to know what happens when a tune is doubled by five instruments rather than four. Or if someone wrote a five-note chord for woodwind quintet he heard twenty different ways, depending on its distribution, which it could sound. Student composers don't often get a chance like that. Nor do they often get a chance to hear their latest works played before the ink is dry.

"Then, of course, Fromm financed two concerts in which the Fellowship Players gave simply marvelous programs of modern music, and, as last year, the Fromm Music Foundation sponsored two other concerts of contemporary pieces — some commissioned by him—played by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The result at Tanglewood naturally has been a very healthy one. I think the whole establishment—the choral and opera students, the instrumentalists, everyone—has become more modern music conscious as a consequence of Fromm's assistance.

"Pebble in a Pond"

"And," Mr. Copland went on, "I doubt that it's going to end here. Fromm has dropped a pebble into a pond; there are going to be a lot of ripples. For one thing, know he's interested in seeing a set-up like ours in colleges all over the country. And why not? Why shouldn't a university with a good music department have in residence an instrumental group for contemporary music? There is a precedent, for all the colleges now have quartets-in-residence. Why not other groups like it? Helping that happen I think is Fromm's aim.

"Meanwhile, all of us around here couldn't be happier. Paul Fromm is the ideal patron. He doesn't mix in, he doesn't give orders. When he gets enthusiastic about something, he gives you money to support that enthusiasm. The Fellowship Players, for instance," Mr. Copland concluded with a smile of vast content, "what a luxury that's been. Ask anybody. Ask me."

Paul Fromm (center), sponsor of this summer's contemporary music project at Tanglewood, talks with Aaron Copland, chairman of the Berkshire Music Center's faculty (left), and Ben Weber, composer (right).

DALLAS NEWS
DALLAS TEXAS
AUG 18 1957

Berkshire Music Festival To End Successful Season

LENOX, Mass. (Sp.)—The program for study and performance of contemporary music established at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. during the past session by Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation, has been pronounced a success by all concerned.

Fromm, who was present at Tanglewood for several of the concerts presented under his auspices, stated that he felt very keenly the importance of contemporary music as an expression of our time. He hopes that the present program will set a pattern for improved methods of teaching composition, as well as representing the beginning of a natural and organic growth of an educational program for the public.

Fromm says that his especial pleasure with the results of the summer at Tanglewood come from the fact that here the composer is again the central figure, which he has too rarely been in the 20th century. The performer and the audience are equally important, since music cannot be performed in a vacuum. All three of these elements have an interdependence, and it is this relationship that the Fromm program has been designed to foster.

AARON COPLAND, chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center and director of the Fromm program said, "We hope that the presence of the Fromm Players this summer will provide a model for other schools throughout the country by having a resident group of young players especially interested in and devoted to contemporary music. At the same time we hope to have opened up a new and healthy way of presenting contemporary music to contemporary audiences."

Coplan, who is also head of the department of composition of the school, says of his own department, "The composition department has been greatly stimulated by the presence of gifted players, always ready to demonstrate their instruments and to solve any knotty problems that may arise. We have heard more contemporary music this summer than at any other summer session, and we feel that it has greatly enlivened the entire student body."

ELEVEN YOUNG professional musicians, known as Fromm Fellowship Players, spent six weeks at Tanglewood this summer working in contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation. They performed two special concerts of modern chamber music, played illustrations in a series of lectures on contemporary music, and played works by student composers of the Berkshire Music Center both weekly at Composers' Forums and in reading sessions during classes of the composition department.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
AUG 21 1957

News of Music and Musicians

A program for the study and performance of contemporary music was established at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., during the past session by Paul Fromm, president of the Fromm Music Foundation.

Mr. Fromm, who was present at Tanglewood for several of the concerts presented under his auspices, stated that he felt very keenly the importance of contemporary music as an expression of our time. He said that he hopes "the present program will set a pattern for improved methods of teaching composition, as well as representing the beginning of a natural and organic growth of an educational program for the public."

He felt that his especial pleasure with the results of the summer at Tanglewood come from the fact that here the composer is again the central figure, which he has too rarely been in the 20th century. The performer and the audience are equally important, since music cannot be performed in a vacuum. All three of these elements have an interdependence, and it is this relationship that the Fromm program has been designed to foster.

Of the Seminar in Contemporary Music, Mr. Fromm said: "The illustration of the lectures through live performance brings the listener into direct contact with the music and keeps the seminar from deteriorating into a conventional music appreciation course. It is impossible to talk about music without playing it."

Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center and director of the Fromm program, said: "We hope that the presence of the Fromm Players this summer will provide a model for other schools throughout the country by having a resident group of young players especially interested in and devoted to contemporary music. At the same time we hope to have opened up a new and healthful way of presenting contemporary music to contemporary audiences."

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Indep. Republican
Circ. 305,271
SEP 15 1957

Fromm Foundatio Aiding Composer

By RUDOLPH ELIE

While what went on at Tanglewood this s seems pretty remote now, the newspaper strike swallowed up the final events of the season sc public information is concerned, there was a ment there that deserves, it seems to me, a lit ther notice. This was the appearance of the Foundation.

Founded by Paul Fromm of Chicago, the tion's purpose is, if not unique, at least unusual times. It is merely that of supplying the your poser with the apparatus to perform his mus and there, so to speak. This is, in fact, a re the practice of an earlier day when the idea of poser sitting in his ivory tower and turning ou with no actual performance in view was all thinkable.

For example, would Haydn have turned out this incredible number of symphonies if he hadn't had to? If he hadn't had his own orchestra right there with him on the Esterhazy estate and if he hadn't been under contract, so to speak, to write them? Would Bach have composed more than 200 cantatas and thousands of works for the organ if he hadn't had to as cantor of the Thomaskirche? To be sure, neither Beethoven nor Mozart ever had their own "orchestras" as such, but they were certainly in the market place filling orders for commissions and filling them for the immediate use of musical organizations of their day.

HEAR HIS OWN MUSIC

This necessity to compose for a specific occasion, organization, instrument or person would account for a vast majority of the existing musical pieces of the world. This is not to say that great masterpieces would not have been written without the goad: Schubert wrote hundreds of songs, as Wolff did, for no reason at all save that he had to express himself. Yet there can be little doubt that numberless masterpieces would never have been scored at all had there not been the presence of the apparatus, then and there, to guarantee at least performance and payment or even salary.

The commissioning of music for specific purposes with specific payments continues to this day, of course. But these commissions are reserved for composers who have already attained note. However, where an Aaron Copland can command a thousand dollars or more for executing a commission for, say, the Boston Symphony, how much can some unknown composer, command? The answer is obviously nothing, but it goes well beyond that. He can't even find a professional musical ensemble to play it through for him. Thus, today, there are doubtless a thousand symphonies, and heaven knows how many songs, chamber works and operas that have not only never been heard in public at all but have never been heard by their composers.

This is where the Fromm Foundation comes in. For Mr. Fromm, recognizing that a composer can only grow and develop if he can actually hear his music played, has provided a dozen or so fully professional instrumentalists in residence at Tanglewood for the specific purpose of playing over the music of the composers also in residence there. The result, this summer, was that more contemporary music was heard at Tanglewood this summer than ever before—most of it significantly—in the presence of the composers themselves.

This, it seems to me, is the crucible. For the creative impulse is best stimulated when there is the possibility for immediacy of recognition. By this I don't mean that the composer must have a thousand people to applaud him on the trying-out or performance of a work, but he must, to really fulfill himself, know that his music will at least be played, be heard. I am no composer, but I have written enough music for my own amusement to know that no matter how much I ca how what I have writte in actual performance really quite sounds that w A real composer, of co e, can imagine the sound of h music in every detail, without ever hear ing it, yet I imagine that they have their own moments of surprise, too: the endless revisions after first performances testify to that.

So the Fromm Foundation, even if a dozen musicians may hardly provide the apparatus of the symphony, at least gives the young composer the musical platform on which to learn the essential technical fabric of the instrumental ensemble. For, in addition to playing the works, the Foundation players are always available to coach the composer in the special capacities of their instruments, and demonstrate what intruments are capable and incapable of. If it may be argued this may be learned in textbooks by everyone from Berlioz to Cecil Forsyth, the in-person demonstration of an instrument's capacities, with personal discussion by the performer as to discussion what is easy or difficult or awkward or clumsy, can not be over-emphasized.

During the six weeks of residence at Tanglewood this summer, the Fromm players gave two public performances a week as well as various special concerts and took part in reading sessions during classes of the composition department. If it is hardly possible at this point to appraise its immediate accomplishment, there can be little doubt that were all the young students of composition to have the benefit of working so closely with organizations similiar to the Fromm Foundation, discovery and development of real creative musical genius would progress a lot faster than it does today.

SYRACUSE, N
HERALD-AMER
Circ. S. 222,15
AUG 8 195

TALKIN

Fromm Fel
Berkshire
By R

Tomorrow after anglewood," Lenox
sic will be presente young professional sic in Berkshire Mu
ese artists perform student composers at posers' Forums, work ation with the Music composition depar give two concerts duri session of the Schoo row's program will f
by William Denny, V sel, Karl Kohn and it.
fter this week, a c e Fromm Group, spon
e Fromm Music Fo of Chicago, Paul Fr
agnificent, gave a concert ounds of a world premie never Palmer's" Out at all. Rocking," commi
e, came Fromm Fou music a former Syrac hear- ber of Cornell's marks the wood on Parade ith a night conce

ston Symphony,
Munch,
several departm
dre Music Center programs. season in close on Sunday of concerts in starting tomo clude three Fe the Boston
estra conducte
Tomorrow night rnoon, and by aturday night
nt visitors for symph re the and Mary Mis

TIGHT BINDING

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

AUG 5 1957

TALKING IT OVER

Fromm Fellowship Players in Berkshire Chamber Program

By Emma Van [illegible]

Tomorrow afternoon in the Chamber Music Hall in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., a concert of modern chamber music will be presented by the Fromm Fellowship Players, 11 young professional musicians working in contemporary music in Berkshire Music Center.

These artists perform works by student composers at weekly Composers' Forums, work in association with the Music Center's composition department and give two concerts during the 1957 session of the School. Tomorrow's program will feature works by William Denny, Varese, Roussel, Karl Kohn and Stravinski.

Earlier this week, a concert by the Fromm Group, sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, president, gave a concert which included a world premiere of Robert Palmer's" Out of the Cradle Rocking," commissioned by the Fromm Foundation. [illegible], a former Syracusan, is member of Cornell's music [illegible].

[illegible]day marks the annual [illegible]lywood on Parade" pro- [illegible] with a night concert by [illegible]ston Symphony, Dr. [illegible] Munch, conducting. [illegible] the several departments [illegible]kshire Music Center will [illegible] programs.

[illegible] 1957 season in "Tangle- [illegible] will close on Sunday. The [illegible]nd of concerts in the [illegible]shed, starting tomorrow [illegible]ill include three Festival [illegible] by the Boston Sym- [illegible]phonia conducted by [illegible]ch, tomorrow night and [illegible] afternoon, and by Charl [illegible]t Saturday night. . . .

[illegible] recent visitors in [illegible]wood" for symphonic [illegible] were the Misses An- [illegible]nio and Mary Mishko [illegible]Syracuse.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 27 1957

[240]

Tanglewood On Parade Committee Plans Event Aug. 8

Clark

Members of the Tanglewood on Parade committee make plans for annual event to benefit Berkshire Music Center at a recent meeting in the glass house on the Tanglewood grounds. Front row, left to right, are Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith; second row, Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Mrs. Albert Stoner, Mrs. Joseph De Pasquale and Miss Mary-Lloyd Gross. Others are Mrs. Martha Q. Pelton, Mrs. Augustus L. Putnam, Mrs. David McAlpin, Norman Shirk, Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Norman Barschdorf.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 19 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Set for Aug. 8

Chairmen Named For Music Center's Annual Benefit

Preliminary plans for the annual Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 8, were made at a meeting of the committee in charge of arrangements yesterday at the Glass House at Tanglewood. A luncheon followed.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky heads the working committee. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith is chairman of the box committee, assisted by Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. In charge of door prizes is Mrs. Bruce Sanborn.

This year's event will be in observance of the 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center. Proceeds will go to the support of the center, a school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 30 1957

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

Charles Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler will share conducting honors for the annual Tanglewood on Parade concert to be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., on the evening of Aug. 8.

* * *

THE AFFAIR is presented as a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

The opening work of the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Dr. Munch and will be Schumann's "Symphony number 4 in D minor." Copland will conduct his own "Suite from Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present the second half of the program featuring Saint-Saens "Carnival of Animals" with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz as the piano soloists. Fiedler will also present Rossini's "Overture to the Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

* * *

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 25 1957

* * * * *

Kenneth Roberts, the author and expert on "dowsing" who died this week once brought Marcel Triau, the Canaan divining rod expert, to the Bahamas to search for water . . . . Marcel found it, too, with a shake of his forked-stick . . . . Happy event at Tanglewood for us is the annual return of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra for their 9th appearance at Tanglewood on Parade, Thursday, August 8 . . . . The county is losing one of its distinguished residents, Henry Doell, deputy commissioner of the New York State Liquor Authority, moving from Hillsdale to Rensselaer . . . . Who is the popular Nivers Lady although she has passed three score and ten, still rides a bike and wears a bandage to prove it?

* * * * *

Will be the featured soloists in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" Thursday and Friday evenings at the Adirondack Studio of Song, Lake George.

On Sunday Umeko Shindo, Japanese contralto, will present a recital with Alexander Alexay, noted coach, as accompanist. Miss Shindo will be dressed in native Japanese costume and will include selections from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" in the program.

* * *

THE STUDENT orchestra at Tanglewood will present the Cesar Franck "Symphony in D minor" Thursday at 8:30 p.m. at the Music Shed under the direction of Charles Munch for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

This will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. The new work utilizes the Festival Chorus, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups, sound effects, masks, movies and other visual effects on the stage.

Brant, a former arranger for Benny Goodman, has taught at the Juilliard School of Music and is now teaching at Bennington College in Vermont. In 1956 Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "prix Italia" in international competition for their work, "December."

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 1 1957

TANGLEWOOD PARADE SCHEDULED AUG. 8

Schumann Symphony, Fiedler and Boston Pops Are Features

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this week announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

AUG 1 1957

Boston Symphony Prepare Benefit Concert Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Sym-

(Continued on Page 8)

[illegible] and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office: box seats, $5.00; reserved seats, $4.00 and $3.00; and general admission, $2.50. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

Works Listed For Benefit At Tanglewood

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at 8:15 p. m. Thursday, Aug. 8, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin the program with Schumann's Symphony in D minor; Aaron Copland will then conduct it in excerpts from "Our Town" and "The Tender Land." For the second half, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and selections from Loewe's "Our Fair Lady," plus encores.

Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists, and Jacobus Langendoen, first cellist of the Pops Orchestra, will be soloists in the Saint-Saens work. The Pops Orchestra is composed of Boston Symphony musicians.

Ticket holders are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center late in the afternoon, and to have picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn before the beginning of the evening program. Ticket prices are $5 for box seats, $4 and $3 for other reserved seats and $2.50 for general admission. Reservations can be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

[246]

JUL 27 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Committee Plans Event Aug. 8

Clark

Members of the Tanglewood on Parade committee make plans for annual event to benefit Berkshire Music Center at a recent meeting in the glass house on the Tanglewood grounds. Front row, left to right, are Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Miss Margo Miller, Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith; second row, Mrs. Robert Allen, Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Mrs. Albert Seemer, Mrs. Joseph De Pasquale and Miss Mary-Lloyd Gross. Others are Mrs. Martha Q. Pelton, Mrs. Augustus L. Putnam, Mrs. David McAlpin, Norman Shirk, Mrs. Alexander Bloch, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Norman Barschdorf.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

JUL 19 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Set for Aug. 8

Chairmen Named For Music Center's Annual Benefit

Preliminary plans for the annual Tanglewood on Parade Thursday, Aug. 8, were made at a meeting of the committee in charge of arrangements yesterday at the Glass House at Tanglewood. A luncheon followed.

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky heads the working committee. Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith is chairman of the box committee, assisted by Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr. In charge of door prizes is Mrs. Bruce Sanborn.

This year's event will be in observance of the 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center. Proceeds will go to the support of the center, a school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
GAZETTE
Circ. D. 40,429

JUL 30 1957

Music Notes

By D. E. RITZ

Charles Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler will share conducting honors for the annual Tanglewood on Parade concert to be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., on the evening of Aug. 8.

* * *

THE AFFAIR is presented as a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music.

The opening work of the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Dr. Munch and will be Schumann's "Symphony number 4 in D minor." Copland will conduct his own "Suite from Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present the second half of the program featuring Saint-Saens "Carnival of Animals" with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz as the piano soloists. Fiedler will also present Rossini's "Overture to the Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

* * *

CHATHAM, N. Y.
COURIER
Circ. W. 3,500

JUL 25 1957

* * * * *

Kenneth Roberts, the author and expert on "dowsing" who died this week once brought Marcel Triau, the Canaan divining rod expert, to the Bahamas to search for water . . . . Marcel found it, too, with a shake of his forked-stick . . . . Happy event at Tanglewood for us is the annual return of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra for their 4th appearance at Tanglewood on Parade, Thursday, August 8 . . . . The county is losing one of its distinguished residents, Henry Doell, deputy commissioner of the New York State Liquor Authority, moving from Hillsdale to Rensselaer . . . . Who is the popular Nivver-die-lady although she has passed three score and ten, still rides a bike and wears a bandage to prove it?

* * * * *

will be the featured soloists in Kurt Weill's "Down in the Valley" Thursday and Friday evenings at the Adirondack Studio of Song, Lake George.

On Sunday Umeko Shindo, Japanese contralto, will present a recital with Alexander Alexay, noted coach, as accompanist. Miss Shindo will be dressed in native Japanese costume and will include selections from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly" in the program.

* * *

THE STUDENT orchestra at Tanglewood will present the Cesar Franck "Symphony in D minor" Thursday at 8:30 p.m. at the Music Shed under the direction of Charles Munch for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

This will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. The new work utilizes the Festival Chorus, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups, sound effects, masks, movies and other visual effects on the stage.

Brant, a former arranger for Benny Goodman, has taught at the Juilliard School of Music and is now teaching at Bennington College in Vermont. In 1956 Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "prix Italia" in international competition for their work, "December."

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443

AUG 1 1957

TANGLEWOOD PARADE SCHEDULED AUG. 8

Schumann Symphony, Fiedler and Boston Pops Are Features

The Boston Symphony Orchestra this week announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p. m.

Herald
CHICOPEE, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,662

1957

Summer Formal Strollers
Cutaways
Tuxedos
Formal Fashion
Expert Advice On

...ony Prepare
...gram

...Lions' Oratory Contest In addi-
...Legion Oratory Contest and the American ...has participated in the dramatic ...club and student Government. She
...school give receive member of the

(Continued from Page ...

phony No. 4 in D minor. Following this Aaron Copland, noted composed and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office: box seats, $5.00; reserved seats, $4.00 and $3.00; and general admission, $2.50. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

Works Listed For Benefit At Tanglewood

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" concert for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at 8:15 p. m. Thursday, Aug. 8, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will begin the program with Schumann's Symphony in D minor; Aaron Copland will then conduct it in excerpts from "Our Town" and "The Tender Land." For the second half, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and selections from Loewe's "Our Fair Lady," plus encores.

Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, pianists, and Jacobus Langendoen, first cellist of the Pops Orchestra, will be soloists in the Saint-Saens work. The Pops Orchestra is composed of Boston Symphony musicians.

Ticket holders are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center late in the afternoon, and to have picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn before the beginning of the evening program. Ticket prices are $5 for box seats, $4 and $3 for other reserved seats and $2.50 for general admission. Reservations can be made by telephoning Lenox 600.

New Haven Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
AUG 4 19...

MUSIC

Berkshire ... With 'Ta...

By ...

This is the "... of the Berkshire M... past. "Tanglewood ... Berkshire Music Ce... number of events sc... 20th Berkshire Fest... when Charles Munch ... Ninth Symphony, ... rent festival.

Space does not pe... However, we shall no... terest and simply ad... tendance at the festiv... ment" at Tanglewood.

A few weeks ago ... instituted this season by ... Center's Opera Depart... pose the experimentin... and lighting through th...

The third and final ... activities will be given ... at 8:30. Fourteen sing... this program which inc... act opera, "Tale for a ... dent in 1949, who is no... the opera, "Sweet Bets... winter. Tomorrow's ... cerpts from Mozart's ... Flute." This event is o...

In fact, the Friends ... Center) may reap a bon... of modern chamber m... modern program on Fr... roup will be admitted ... ontemporary Music s... 15 are also among ... cordial invitation.

On Wednesday ev... the final assign... festival. This oc... shortly for a Sov... program of works ... Shostakovich.

Thursday's "Tang... that afternoon w... ment and the Tan... 5:45 will be follow... various departments of ... composers, and opera c... door concert at 7, ... the lawns.

The principal event ... at 8:15 during w... estra will be heard, ... ted by Charles Mun... mphony, after which ... r's faculty will condu... own" and excerpts fr... ing Pops program i... Seymour Lipkin a... or is to be Ogden N... ole to accompany th...

The three concludi... feature the music ... on Friday evenin... ing German condu... cert. The program ... aste Musik," Schu... phony No. 3 ("Ero...

Munch has chosen ... phony No. 3 ("Lit... erture No. 3 and the ... Sunday afternoon, ... cede the final Beeth... tival Chorus and th... ence Kopleff, con... um, bass.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
AUG 4 1957

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival Concludes With 'Tanglewood On Parade'

By GORDON ARMSTRONG

This is the "big week" at Tanglewood, as the final week of the Berkshire Music Festival has invariably been in the past. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be a highlight in the unusual number of events scheduled for the windup of this season's 20th Berkshire Festival. Next Sunday afternoon's concert, when Charles Munch will conduct Beethoven's monumental Ninth Symphony, will be the concluding event of the current festival.

Space does not permit a full listing of this final week's programs. However, we shall note those which may be considered of major interest and simply add that if one had a full week to devote to attendance at the festival activities, he would have "scarcely a dull moment" at Tanglewood between now and Aug. 11.

A few weeks ago I devoted some space to the workshop program instituted this season by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department. This workshop has for its primary purpose the experimenting with revolutionary ideas in scene designing and lighting through the use of plastics and other materials.

The third and final public demonstration of the opera workshop's activities will be given tomorrow evening in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30. Fourteen singers and a chamber orchestra will be heard in this program which includes the world premiere of Mark's Bucci's one-act opera, "Tale for a Deaf Ear." The composer, a Tanglewood student in 1949, who is now on his second Guggenheim Fellowship, wrote the opera, "Sweet Betsy from Pike," which had its TV premiere last winter. Tomorrow's workshop demonstration will also include excerpts from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." This event is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

In fact, the Friends (those who make a contribution to the Music Center) may reap a bonanza of music enjoyment this week. A concert of modern chamber music on Tuesday evening at 8:30 and another modern program on Friday afternoon at 2:30 are events to which this group will be admitted free of charge. Lectures in the Seminar of Contemporary Music series tomorrow and Wednesday afternoons at 3:15 are also among the week's programs to which the Friends have a cordial invitation.

On Wednesday evening at 8:30, the Zimbler Sinfonietta will take over the final assignment of the regular Chamber Music concerts at the festival. This outstanding ensemble, which is scheduled to leave very shortly for a South American tour, will be heard on Wednesday in a program of works by Boyce, Tansman, Boccherini, Mozart, and Shostakovich.

Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" activities will get under way at 4 that afternoon with two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group. A Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45 will be followed at 6 by simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. The Tanglewood Choir will give an outdoor concert at 7, while festival patrons enjoy a picnic supper on the lawns.

The principal event on Thursday is, of course, the concert that evening at 8:15 during which Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will be heard, along with the regular Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch. Mr. Munch will conduct Schumann's Fourth Symphony, after which Aaron Copland, chairman of the Berkshire Center's faculty will conduct two of his own works—the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land." A highlight of the following Pops program is to be Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz at the twin-pianos. The narrator is to be Ogden Nash, who will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany this work.

The three concluding weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony will feature the music of Beethoven. Mr. Munch will conduct the concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, while Carl Schuricht, visiting German conductor, will be on the podium in Saturday evening's concert. The program for the latter event includes Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Munch has chosen the following program for Friday's concert; Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") by Honegger; Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as the soloist. On Sunday afternoon, a performance of Copland's "Quiet City" will precede the final Beethoven Ninth. Assisting the orchestra will be the Festival Chorus and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

Wallingford Post 7/1/57

ARTHUR FIEDLER and the Boston Pops Orchestra return to Tanglewood for the gala event, Tanglewood on Parade, where Mr. Fiedler will conduct a typical Pops program, Thursday, August 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

Tanglewood Pops Event August 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animale" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz.

The combined resources of Wallingford's banks is well over $30,000,000.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
AUG 1 1957

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE OFFERS A VARIED PROGRAM

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, on Thursday, August 8 from 6 to 11 p.m. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

At 8:15, in the big shed, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D Minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from Our Town, and excerpts from The Tender Land, his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, The Swan, will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to The Barber of Seville, Tchaikovsky's Marche Slav and a selection of tunes from My Fair Lady by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between August 12 and September 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address at 6 p.m., visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 24 1957

In Brief . . .

It is encouraging to hear that the number of woodlot owners seeking management assistance has doubled in the past year. Since much of the open land is gradually being reclaimed by the forest anyway, as Katharine H. Annin pointed out in her column yesterday, the process really should be planned properly from the beginning . . . The program for Tanglewood on Parade August 8 looks as sure fire as ever, and that's saying a lot. Just the chance to watch three such diverse artists as Charles Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler on the podium in one evening should be worth the price of admission . . .

A warm (but, we trust, not hot and humid) welcome to the 29 4-H members from Kentucky arriving here this afternoon for an eight-day exchange visit in the Berkshires . . . Everyone has seen a painter at work, but who has watched a sculptor? The public demonstration by Peter Abate, starting at Chesterwood tomorrow afternoon, will fill in that last chink in our summer cultural activity.

[247]

Town Crier & Herald
WESTPORT, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200
AUG 1 1957

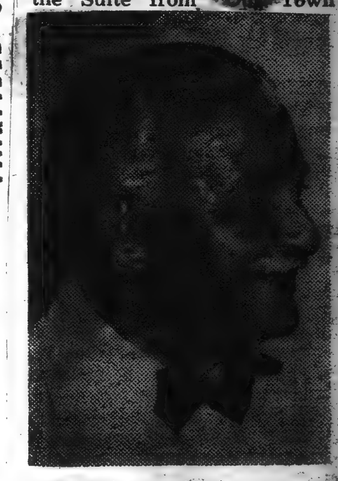
News
FAIRFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,850
AUG 1 1957

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 8th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town",

FAIRFIELD COUNTY FAIR
August 1, 1957
Thursday,



ARTHUR FIEDLER and the Boston Pops Orchestra return to Tanglewood for the gala event, Tanglewood on Parade, where Mr. Fiedler will conduct a typical Pops program, Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30 o'clock in the Music Shed.

and excerpts from "The Tender Land", recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 8,807
JUL 25 1957

Plans for Tanglewood On Parade Announced

LENOX, Mass., July 25—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553
AUG 4 1957

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival Concludes With 'Tanglewood On Parade'

By GORDON ARMSTRONG

This is the "big week" at Tanglewood, as the final week of the Berkshire Music Festival has invariably been in the past. "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be a highlight in the unusual number of events scheduled for the windup of this season's 20th Berkshire Festival. Next Sunday afternoon's concert, when Charles Munch will conduct Beethoven's monumental Ninth Symphony, will be the concluding event of the current festival.

Space does not permit a full listing of this final week's programs. However, we shall note those which may be considered of major interest and simply add that if one had a full week to devote to attendance at the festival activities, he would have "scarcely a dull moment" at Tanglewood between now and Aug. 11.

A few weeks ago I devoted some space to the workshop program instituted this season by Boris Goldovsky, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Opera Department. This workshop has for its primary purpose the experimenting with revolutionary ideas in scene designing and lighting through the use of plastics and other materials.

The third and final public demonstration of the opera workshop's activities will be given tomorrow evening in the Theater-Concert Hall at 8:30. Fourteen singers and a chamber orchestra will be heard in this program which includes the world premiere of Mark's Bucci's one-act opera, "Tale for a Deaf Ear." The composer, a Tanglewood student in 1949, who is now on his second Guggenheim Fellowship, wrote the opera, "Sweet Betsy from Pike," which had its TV premiere last winter. Tomorrow's workshop demonstration will also include excerpts from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." This event is open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

In fact, the Friends (those who make a contribution to the Music Center) may reap a bonanza of music enjoyment this week. A concert of modern chamber music on Tuesday evening at 8:30 and another modern program on Friday afternoon at 2:30 are events to which this group will be admitted free of charge. Lectures in the Seminar of Contemporary Music series tomorrow and Wednesday afternoons at 3:15 are also among the week's programs to which the Friends have a cordial invitation.

On Wednesday evening at 8:30, the Zimbler Sinfonietta will take over the final assignment of the regular Chamber Music concerts at the festival. This outstanding ensemble, which is scheduled to leave very shortly for a South American tour, will be heard on Wednesday in a program of works by Boyce, Tansman, Boccherini, Mozart, and Shostakovich.

Thursday's "Tanglewood on Parade" activities will get under way at 4 that afternoon with two special performances by the Opera Department and the Tanglewood Study Group. A Fanfare and Welcome at 5:45 will be followed at 6 by simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. The Tanglewood Choir will give an outdoor concert at 7, while festival patrons enjoy a picnic supper on the lawns.

The principal event on Thursday is, of course, the concert that evening at 8:15 during which Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will be heard, along with the regular Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch. Mr. Munch will conduct Schumann's Fourth Symphony, after which Aaron Copland, chairman of the Berkshire Center's faculty will conduct two of his own works—the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land." A highlight of the following Pops program is to be Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz at the twin-pianos. The narrator is to be Ogden Nash, who will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany this work.

The three concluding weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony will feature the music of Beethoven. Mr. Munch will conduct the concerts on Friday evening and Sunday afternoon, while Carl Schuricht, visiting German conductor, will be on the podium in Saturday evening's concert. The program for the latter event includes Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

Munch has chosen the following program for Friday's concert; Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique") by Honegger; Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and the Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as the soloist. On Sunday afternoon, a performance of Copland's "Quiet City" will precede the final Beethoven Ninth. Assisting the orchestra will be the Festival Chorus and the following soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

ARTHUR FIEDLER and the Boston Pops Orchestra return to Tanglewood for the gala event, Tanglewood on Parade, where Mr. Fiedler will conduct a typical Pops program, Thursday, August 8 at 8:30 p.m. in the Music Shed.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292
AUG 1 1957

/TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE OFFERS A VARIED PROGRAM

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, on Thursday, August 8 from 6 to 11 p.m. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

At 8:15, in the big shed, Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D Minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from Our Town, and excerpts from The Tender Land, his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, The Swan, will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to The Barber of Seville, Tchaikovsky's Marche Slav and a selection of tunes from My Fair Lady by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between August 12 and September 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address at 6 p.m., visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music groups. Concertgoers may then enjoy picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 24 1957

In Brief . . .

It is encouraging to hear that the number of woodlot owners seeking management assistance has doubled in the past year. Since much of the open land is gradually being reclaimed by the forest anyway, as Katharine H. Annin pointed out in her column yesterday, the process really should be planned properly from the beginning . . . The program for Tanglewood on Parade August 8 looks as sure a bet as ever, and that's saying a lot. Just the chance to watch three such diverse artists as Charles Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler on the podium in one evening should be worth the price of admission . . .

A warm (but, we trust, not hot and humid) welcome to the 29 4-H members from Kentucky arriving here this afternoon for an eight-day exchange visit in the Berkshires . . . Everyone has seen a painter at work, but who has watched a sculptor? The public demonstration by Peter Abate, starting at Chesterwood tomorrow afternoon, will fill in that last chink in our summer cultural activity.

Tanglewood Pops Event August 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade; to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz.

The combined resources of Wallingford's banks is well over $30,000,000.

Wallingford Item 8/1/57

[247]

Town Crier & Herald
WESTPORT, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,200
AUG 1 1957

News
FAIRFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,850
AUG 1 1957

Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 8th. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town",

ARTHUR FIEDLER and the Boston Pops Orchestra return to Tanglewood for the gala event, Tanglewood on Parade, where Mr. Fiedler will conduct a typical Pops program, Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30 o'clock in the Music Shed.

and excerpts from "The Tender Land", recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

FAIRFIELD COUNTY FAIR
August 1, 1957
Thursday,

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 8,807
JUL 25 1957

Plans for Tanglewood On Parade Announced

LENOX, Mass., July 25—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

AARON COPLAND, left, noted American composer, and Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will conduct portions of "Tanglewood on Parade" program Thursday, Aug. 8, in the Berkshire Music Festival near Lenox, Mass.

TALKING IT OVER

Munch, Copland, Fiedler Will Conduct Gala in 'Tanglewood'

By Emma Van Wormer

Dr. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and of the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," summer home of the orchestra, announces a varied program for the gala concert, "Tanglewood on Parade," on Thursday, Aug. 8.

Dr. Munch, Aaron Copland, widely known American composer and Arthur Fiedler, erudite leader of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will conduct.

The opening number, the Fourth Symphony of Schumann, will be played by the full Boston Symphony, Dr. Munch conducting. Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty of Berkshire Music Center, and known in Syracuse where he appeared a season or so ago for Syracuse Friends of Chamber Music will lead The Boston in two of his own works. They are the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, comprising students of the School, prepared for concert by Hugh Ross.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops make their fourth consecutive appearance at "Tanglewood on Parade," Director Fiedler coming to the Berkshires from Miami and leaving immediately after the concert for San Francisco wher he will conduct from Aug. 12 to Sept. 4. A perofrmance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with Piano Soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, members of Berkshire Music Center faculty, is scheduled. The solo in the most familiar section of this Saint-Saens work, "The Swan" will be played by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops.

Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tschaikowsky's "Marche Slav" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Lowe also are scheduled by Mr. Fiedler. There will, of course, be the traditional Pops encores. Mr. Fiedler's schedule in addition to May and June concerts in Boston has included engagements in Milwaukee with the Pops Orchestra. Member of the Milwaukee Pops is Walter Smolenski Jr., who plays in the violin section and who has been a frequent visitor here when his aunt, Mrs. Carl M. Tichenor, now of Racine, Wis., lived here.

Mrs. Tichenor and Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Love entertained at supper in their homes for Conductor Fiedler in successive years when Famous Artists booked the orchestra. Mr. and Mrs. Roy O. Sykes gave a dinner also in Mr. Smolenski's honor, guests including Concert Violinist Mary Becker here from New York City on a periodical visit to her former home town.

In connection with "Tanglewood on Parade" and its important night music, starting at 8:15 o'clock, there are to be performances by various departments of Berkshire Music Center including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera students. These student programs will follow a "Fanfare" and a welcoming address and will precede a picnic supper on the Tangelwood lawn. The gala concert will be in the great Music Shed which seats more than 6,000.

Theodore Stravinsky drew the ornamental design on the "Tanglewood" program featuring "Canticum Sacrum" composed by his father, Igor Stravinsky, the celebrated musician. This canticle was performed in The Shed by Orchestra Festival Chorus and soloists, Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Previously, Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring" was conducted by Pierre Monteux. The canticle was composed in 1955 and had its first performance at the Festival of Venice in September, 1956. Its first western performance was in Los Angeles last June.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacques S. Levey may attend performances in "Tanglewood" early in August. Mrs. Levey is secretary of the Onondaga Symphony Orchestra, Inc. . . . John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone, who sang in Crouse College here last week, went from Cincinnati, where he sang in "Der Rosenkavalier" under Fausta Cleva, to rehearse a leading part in "Fanny." This is the role created by the late Ezio Pinza.

[248]

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops orchestra return to Tanglewood for "Tanglewood on Parade" where Mr. Fiedler will conduct a typical pops program Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30 o'clock in the Music Shed.

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE:

Boston Symphony To Climax Benefit

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the program for its concert of "Tanglewood on Parade", to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schuman's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Couland, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, made up of students of the school.

POPS FEATURE

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at "Tanglewood on Parade." A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals," with piano soloist Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady."

Ticket holders for the evening concert may attend performances by various departments of the center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers are invited to eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the concert at 8:15 P. M.

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 181,325

JUL 23 1957

Munch, 'Pops' and Copland On Tanglewood Parade List

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, made up of students of the school.

Fourth Appearance

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra, in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco, where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wis.) Pops Orchestra and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Various Programs

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including those in the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Berkshires Gala Program Announced

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Lengendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Arthur Fiedler

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

JUL 24 1957

Tanglewood on Parade Is Slated for Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, Aug. 8, will climax the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Aaron Copland, composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade.

Tanglewood Feature

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 8.

The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Lengendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

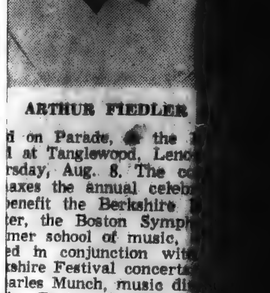
News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 27 1957

ALA CONCERT WILL BE HELD NEXT MONTH

Tanglewood on Parade ... Present Varied Program ... Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orch... has announced the progr... its gala concert of Tang...



ARTHUR FIEDLER

...d on Parade, ... the ... at Tanglewood, Lenox ... rsday, Aug. 8. The co... ...axes the annual celeb... ...benefit the Berkshire ... ...ter, the Boston Symph... ...mer school of music, ...ed in conjunction with ... ...kshire Festival concerts ... ...arles Munch, music di... ...he Boston Symphony ... ...uct the opening work ... ...ram, Schumann's Sym...

Tanglew... Progr...

Lenox, July 23— ... Symphony Orchestra ... nounced the program ... concert of Tanglewo... ...rade, to be performed ... ...sic Shed at Tanglewo... ...day, August 8. The ... ...maxes the annual cel... ...benefit the Berkshire ... ...ter, the Boston Symph... ...mer school of music, ...in conjunction with th... Festival concerts.

Munch to Cond...

Charles Munch, mus... of the Boston Symphon... tra, will conduct th... work on the progra... mann's Symphony No... minor. Following this, ... land, noted composer ... man of the faculty of ... shire Music Center, w... the Boston Symphony ... in two of his own work... from "Our Town," an... from "The Tender Lan... cent opera. The opera ... will be sung by the ... Festival Chorus made ... dents of the school.

The second part of th... will feature Arthur F... the Boston Pops Or... their fourth consecuti... ance at Tanglewood o... feature of the progra... performance of ... "Carnival of the Ani... piano soloists Seym... and Ralph Berkowitz, ... whom are members ... ulty of the Berkshire ... ter. The solo in the ... miliar section of the ... Swan," will be perfor... cobus Langendoen, p... ist of the Boston Pops ... Mr. Fiedler also will ... sini's Overture to ... of Seville," Tc... "Marche Slave" and ... of tunes from "My ... by Loewe. There will ... traditional Pops encor...

Ticket holders for ... concert are invited to ... formances by vari... ments of the Berk... Center. After a fanfa...

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

JUL 27 1957

GALA CONCERT WILL BE HELD NEXT MONTH

Tanglewood on Parade to Present Varied Program Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

ARTHUR FIEDLER

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town", and excerpts from "The Tender Land", his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan", will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville", Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

JUL 23 1957

Parade Program For Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Pops Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788

JUL 28 1957

ARTHUR FIEDLER, BOSTON POPS AT LENOX ON AUG. 8

To Appear in Final Half of Tanglewood-On-Parade Concert

Lenox, July 27—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, here on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Berkshire Festival Concerts.

Aaron Copland

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

ARTHUR FIEDLER

The second part of the program will feature Authur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saints-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymore Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston, in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee Wisconsin Pops Orchestra and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047

JUL 28 1957

C2497

Music

Hot Voodoo Dances Heat a Hot Day at Lee

By RAYMOND MURPHY,
Telegram Music Critic

We have seen voodoo dances in Haiti, but never in such oppressive heat as experienced by Jean-Leon Destine & Co. in a recent Saturday afternoon performance at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee.

The hottest thing on the program was a "bamboche" (spree) called "Banda."

Destine was the ancient blade who hobbled into a spirited and youthful carnival scene. Forgetting age and discretion, the fever for cavorting took over and he did right well—between collapses.

It might have been a formidable chore with make-up, but Destine wore a mask that completely covered his head.

New Company

His new company is larger and a little less enticing than it used to be. Their Trinidadian bit, "Limbo," was more improvisational than perfected.

Destine's two animated male dancers are Arthur Wright and Marlo Timmonz, who do an awful lot of things in a short time and seem to be working on high voltage.

Alphonse Cimber is no longer with the company. He's the voodoo drummer who could inject life into a stone statue.

In his place are two parchment pounders by the names of Calvin Edner and Max Morisset. Their best was a duet that started from opposite ends of the theater and conversationed to the stage. It didn't stir up much of a froth.

Spectacular

As usual, Destine was spectacular. His technique is to get down to fundamentals, and put across a moral or gruesome narrative without the adulteration of prettiness.

His famous "Slave Dance" perked up the sweltering audience. It starts off with an invocation to the gods, after which the slave tells his sorrows and finally frees himself from bondage.

It's a remarkable technical feat. Destine can convert his neck into weak glue. He does a rotary head motion at unlawful speed that's almost frightening. His muscular control is such that his arms, shoulders and torso perform separate functions. Apart from these eye-poppers, Destine projects the theme as gripping drama.

Brilliant Debut

The world premier of "Ceremony Bembe" was a brilliant debut for Marguerite Adrien. This is a typically Haitian cult epic in which an ancestral spirit is transferred to the next person in line of inheritance.

Bizarre is the word. The visual cresendo starts from nothing, literally. As the inheritant, Miss Adrien progressed from a state of coma to com-

World Premiere

Miss Kitchell's world premiere of "Nymph in Pursuit of a Faun" was a let-down. The music is by Rachmaninoff. While Miss Kitchell makes it clear that the nymph is convulsed with abysmal sorrow over unrequited love, it isn't quite as funny as it sounds.

"Non-Objective" was ribald tomfoolery in which Miss Kitchell completely dismembered the art of Martha Graham and left the audience howling over the question marks.

It has no accompaniment, which was merciful because it wastes itself delightfully on a succession of poses, stances, and grimaces without the slightest shred of logic.

From classic ballet were two exciting artists, Sonia Arova of Bulgaria, and Erik Bruhn of Denmark.

There was fine stability and finesse in the Job Sanders' choreography for Greig's "Holberg Suite." But the "coup d'elegance" was a pas de deux from Tchaikovsky's "Black Swan." The ensemble was beautifully coordinated composition.

Miss Arova did ornate passagework in her solo variation with agility and verve, and we've never seen more precise combinations of entrechats and pirouettes than Bruhn's.

'Tanglewood on Parade'

Diversified attractions are announced for the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" gala concert on Thursday, Aug. 8. This is an extra in the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox and benefits the Music Center.

Beginning at 4 p. m., visitors may observe work by the Center's student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn. The main event begins at 8:15.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Schumann's Fourth Symphony, followed by Aaron Copland's suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from his recent opera, "The Tender Land," both conducted by the composer.

The second part of the program will be given by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler.

Works include the Overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," selections from "My Fair Lady," and Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," with duo-pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both faculty members of the Berkshire Music Center.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Program Set for Aug. 8

Lenox, July 23—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Munch to Conduct

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler also will present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box offices. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411

JUL 25 1957

Tanglewood's Aug. 8 Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its concert of "Tanglewood on Parade," to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct the opening work, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood-on-Parade. A feature will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Pops Orchestra.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

JUL 24 1957

Symphony Announces Benefit Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the pdogram for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, oon Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schuman's Symphony No. 4 ino D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Ous Town", and excerpts from "The Tender Land", his recent opera.

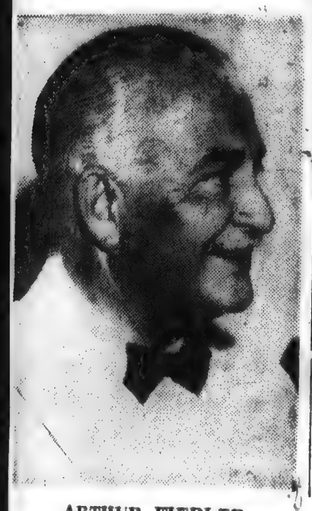
The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535
JUL 27 1957

GALA CONCERT WILL BE HELD NEXT MONTH

Tanglewood on Parade to Present Varied Program Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.



ARTHUR FIEDLER

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town", and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan", will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville", Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 23 1957

Tanglewood On Par... Program Set for ...

Lenox, July 23—The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Munch to Conduct

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler also will present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., WEDNESDAY, JULY 24, 1957

Mor... BOS... In... Ci...

JI...

Tanglewood's Aug. 8 Program

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert of "Tanglewood on Parade," to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's Summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct the opening work, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct the Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood-on-Parade. A feature will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Pops Orchestra.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
JUL 28 1957

ARTHUR FIEDLER, BOSTON POPS AT LENOX ON AUG. 8

To Appear in Final Half of Tanglewood-On-Parade Concert

Lenox, July 27—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, here on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Berkshire Festival Concerts.

Aaron Copland

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston, in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee Wisconsin Pops Orchestra and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Parade Program For Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announces the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

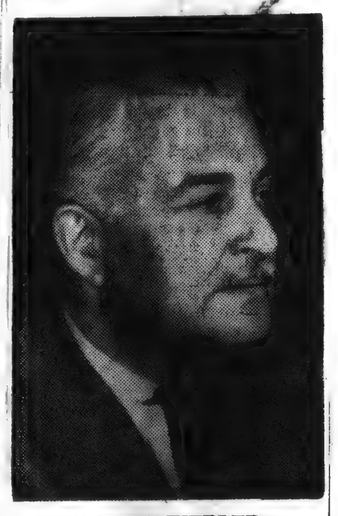
Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town," and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville" Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Mr. Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. Mr. Fiedler's busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston, in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee Wisconsin Pops Orchestra and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the gala concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 8.15 p. m.

Tickets for Tanglewood on Parade are now on sale at the box office. Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.



ARTHUR FIEDLER

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
JUL 28 1957

C2497

Music

Hot Voodoo Dances Heat a Hot Day at Lee

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

We have seen voodoo dances in Haiti, but never in such oppressive heat as experienced by Jean-Leon Destine & Co. in a recent Saturday afternoon performance at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee.

The hottest thing on the program was a "bamboche" (spree) called "Banda."

Destine was the ancient blade who hobbled into a spirited and youthful carnival scene. Forgetting age and discretion, the fever for cavorting took over and he did right well—between collapses.

It might have been a tolerable chore with make-up, but Destine wore a mask that completely covered his head.

New Company

His new company is larger and a little less enticing than it used to be. Their Trinidadian bit, "Limbo," was more improvisational than perfected.

Destine's two animated male dancers are Arthur Wright and Marlo Timmonz, who do an awful lot of things in a short time and seem to be working on high voltage.

Alphonse Cimber is no longer with the company. He's the voodoo drummer who could inject life into a stone statue.

In his place are two parchment pounders by the names of Calvin Edner and Max Morisset. Their best was a duet that started from opposite ends of the theater and conversationed to the stage. It didn't stir up much of a froth.

Spectacular

As usual, Destine was spectacular. His technique is to get down to fundamentals, and put across a moral or gruesome narrative without the adulteration of prettiness.

His famous "Slave Dance" perked up the sweltering audience. It starts off with an invocation to the gods, after which the slave tells his sorrows and finally frees himself from bondage.

It's a remarkable technical feat. Destine can convert his neck into weak glue. He does a rotary head motion at unlawful speed that's almost frightening. His muscular control is such that his arms, shoulders and torso perform separate functions. Apart from these eye-poppers, Destine projects the theme as gripping drama.

Brilliant Debut

The world premier of "Ceremony Bembe" was a brilliant debut for Marguerite Adrien. This is a typically Haitian cult epic in which an ancestral spirit is transferred to the next person in line of inheritance.

Bizarre is the word. The visual cresendo starts from nothing, literally. As the inheritant, Miss Adrien progressed from a state of coma to completely uninhibited writhings.

Another form of "psuedo" voodoo was presented by that [illegible] dance, Ivo Kitchell. It's her "choreography" [illegible] by her accompanist Harvey Brown.

[illegible] unholy spirits come [illegible] this mesmeristic debauche, they would have been destroyed by laughter. She was dressed in 'a something that Ibo Lele (voodoo boss man) couldn't have taken.

World Premiere

Miss Kitchell's world premiere of "Nymph in Pursuit of a Faun" was a let-down. The music is by Rachmaninoff. While Miss Kitchell makes it clear that the nymph is convulsed with abysmal sorrow over unrequited love, it isn't quite as funny as it sounds.

"Non-Objective" was ribald tomfoolery in which Miss Kitchell completely dismembered the art of Martha Graham and left the audience howling over the question marks.

It has no accompaniment, which was merciful because it wastes itself delightfully on a succession of poses, stances and grimaces without the slightest shred of logic.

From classic ballet were two exciting artists, Sonia Arova of Bulgaria, and Erik Bruhn of Denmark.

There was fine stability and finesse in the Job Sanders' choreography for Greig's "Holberg Suite." But the "coup d'elegance" was a pas de deux from Tchaikovsky's "Black Swan." The ensemble was beautifully coordinated composition.

Miss Arova did ornate passagework in her solo variation with agility and verve, and we've never seen more precise combinations of entrechats and pirouettes than Bruhn's.

'Tanglewood on Parade'

Diversified attractions are announced for the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" gala concert on Thursday, Aug. 8. This is an extra in the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox and benefits the Music Center.

Beginning at 4 p. m., visitors may observe work by the Center's student orchestra, chorus, chamber music and opera. Concertgoers may then eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn. The main event begins at 8:15.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Schumann's Fourth Symphony, followed by Aaron Copland's suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from his recent opera, "The Tender Land," both conducted by the composer.

The second part of the program will be given by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler.

Works include the Overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," selections from "My Fair Lady," and Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," with duo-pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both faculty members of the Berkshire Music Center.

...s Benefit Program

...toda... ...ra for its gala concert ... ...wood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, oon Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schuman's Symphony No. 4 ino D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and Chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Ous Town", and excerpts from "The Tender Land", his recent opera.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade. A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center.

TIGHT BINDING

[250]

Back Bay Ledger & Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 10,000 Free
JUL 25 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Program To Feature Three Conductors

Concert Planned As Climax To Music Festival At Lenox, Munch, Copeland, Fielder To Direct

The Boston Symphony Orchestra today announced the program for its gala concert of Tanglewood on Parade, to be performed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Thursday, August 8. The concert climaxes the annual celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor.

Continued on Page Seven

Following this, Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the Faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will himself conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town", and excerpts from "The Tender Land", his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra in their fourth consecutive appearance at Tanglewood on Parade.

A feature of the program will be a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, both of whom are members of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan", will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville", Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. There will also be the traditional Pops encores.

Fiedler comes to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between August 12 and September 4. His busy schedule for this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Pops Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700
AUG 1 - 1957

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE WILL BE HELD AUG. 8

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, Lenox, will be held next Thursday evening, Aug. 8 on the Tanglewood grounds.

At 4 p.m., holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 o'clock.

At 7 o'clock, while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

The climax of the evening will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor. Dr. Munch will direct the orchestra in Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Aaron Copland, eminent composer and chairman of the School faculty, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Following the drawing for door prizes during the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the second half of the program conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra. The feature of his program will be Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with original verses by Ogden Nash, which will be read by Mr. Nash himself at this performance. Piano soloists will be Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. Mr. Fiedler will also present the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini, Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. Encores may also be performed in the Pops tradition.

NEWARK N. J. NEWS
AUG 4 1957

Jacob's Pillow Show Honors Silver Jubilee

LEE, Mass.—Myra Kinch and her company, with Ted Shawn as guest star, will open a seven performance engagement during the coming sixth Silver Jubilee week at Jacob's Pillow. William Milie also will appear in featured roles. The program, to be offered evenings at 9 on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, plus matinees at 4 on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, will consist entirely of works by and with Myra Kinch. The dance festival is popular with vacationists in the Berkshire Hills and yet is close enough to the metropolitan area to attract visitors for single performances.

Among the other highlights of this week's Berkshire Hills attractions will be the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" program at Tanglewood today.

Next weekend will be the final one of the 1957 Tanglewood season. Charles Munch will conduct Friday and Sunday, and Carl Schuricht, Saturday night.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
JUL 25 1957

Plans for 'Tanglewood on Parade'

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present its annual "Tanglewood on Parade" in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday, Aug. 8. The concert will climax a celebration to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony's summer school of music, maintained in conjunction with the Berkshire Festival concerts.

Charles Munch will conduct the opening work on the program, Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor. Following this, Aaron Copland; composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works—the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from "The Tender Land," his recent opera. The opera selections will be sung by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, made up of students of the school.

The second part of the program will feature Arthur Fiedler in his fourth consecutive appearance at "Tanglewood on Parade." A feature of his program will be a performance of Saint-Saëns' "Carnival of the Animals," with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Barkowitz as piano soloists. The solo in the most familiar section of the work, "The Swan," will be performed by Jacobus Langendoen, principal cellist of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Mr. Fiedler will also present Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," and a selection of tunes from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe.

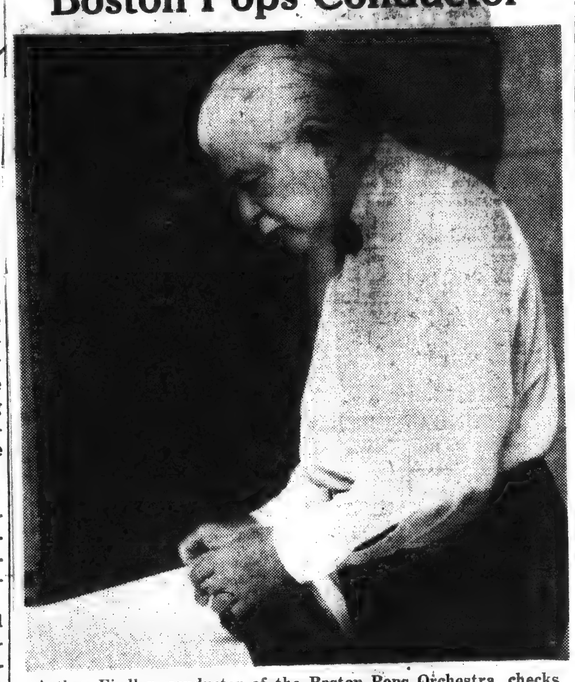
Mr. Fiedler will come to Tanglewood directly from a performance in Miami and will leave immediately after the concert for San Francisco where he will conduct between Aug. 12 and Sept. 4. His schedule this summer has included nine weeks of regular Boston Pops concerts in Boston in May and June, two weeks of free concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, an appearance with the Milwaukee (Wisconsin) Pops Orchestra, and a visit to San Francisco in July to conduct concerts of the San Francisco Symphony Summer Pops series.

Ticket holders for the evening concert are invited to attend performances by various departments of the Berkshire Music Center. After a fanfare and welcoming address, visitors may attend performances by students of the school, including the student orchestra, chorus, chamber music, and opera. Concertgoers may eat picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawn, followed by the concert by the Boston Symphony at 8:15.

Telephone reservations may be made by calling Lenox 600.

Sprfld Rep. 8/4

Boston Pops Conductor



Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, checks musical score in preparation for annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program in the Shed at Lenox Thursday night. The Boston Symphony holds forth in the first half of the Parade program, with the Pops taking over after intermission.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 - S. 1,189,293
AUG 4 1957

LENOX FETE THURSDAY

Tanglewood on Parade to Aid Berkshire Music Center

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, will be held Thursday at the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass.

As in previous seasons, there will be many events on the festival grounds, starting with a concert at 4 P. M.

The climax of the evening will be a concert in the Shed, with the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch and the Boston "Pops" conducted by Arthur Fiedler. Ogden Nash will read his verses to "The Carnival of the Animals," conducted by Mr. Fiedler.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.
UNION-STAR
Circ. D. 36,678
AUG 5 1957

Tanglewood Benefit Set Thursday

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., will hold its annual benefit, "Tanglewood on Parade," Thursday at 4 p.m.

The concert at 7 will include the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch, which will present Schumann's Fourth Symphony; the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler and Aaron Copland, who will direct the Berkshire Festival Chorus in the presentation of the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land."

Ogden Nash will appear with the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224
AUG 2 1957

Annual 'Parade' Slated Thursday At Tanglewood

Tanglewood-on Parade th annual benefit for the Berkshir Music Center, the Boston Sy phony Orchestra's summ school, Lenox, Mass., will held Thursday evening, Augu 8.

At 4 p.m. holders of box a reserved seats are invited to formal gardens, and a conce by the Tanglewood Study Grou in the Barn.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket holde are admitted to the Tanglewo grounds. Ralph Berkowitz, dea of the school, will invite visito to attend any of several simu taneous performances by d ferent school departments at p.m. These are the Student O chestra in the Shed, Tanglewo composers in the Chamb Music Hall, opera scenes in t Theatre.

The program of the stude orchestra will include Webe Overture to "Euryanthe" co ducted by Wyn Morris, the fi movement of Schumann's Pia Concerto conducted by Michi Senturia, with Morey Ritt soloist, and the fourth movem of Villa-Lobos "Bachianas sil sileiras" No. 2 conducted Gustave Meier.

At 7 o'clock while visitors enjoying a picnic supper grounds, the Tanglewood C will present a choral progr on the porch of the Main Hou

The climax of the evening be the gala concert in the Mu Shed by the Boston Symph Orchestra, Charles Munch, m sic director, and the Bos Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fied conductor.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker Ne
Circ. D. 53,178
AUG 4 1957

Berks

Tanglewo

W

The Berkshire Festi about to enter its final w a week including the Tanglewood on Parade on the final weekend, Beethoven.

Tanglewood on Parade take up most of Thursday the benefit of the Berk Music Center, it will in performances by the va student departments and night, a two-barreled co by the Boston Symphony chestra and the Boston Orchestra.

Charles Munch will duct the symphony in mann's Fourth Symp and then Aaron Co will take the baton i of his own works—the Town", Suite and "The der Land" excerpts.

Arthur Fiedler will le Pops in a typical Bosto program to close the Ogden Nash will re verses of Saint-Saens val of the Animals."

Dr. Munch will cond orchestra Friday, an Schuricht, of the Vien harmonic Orchestra, w over Saturday. Along Beethoven will be Honegger and Schube Meanwhile, Monday the opera students dir Boris Goldovsky, will wor d premiere of a opera, "Tale for a De by the American Mark Bucci.

Wednesday night's music will be by the Sinfonietta, composed ton Symphony memb

POUGHKEEPSIE
NEW YORK
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 2

JUL 29 195

anglewood Parad Scheduled Aug. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade" scheduled for Aug. 8 at Tan wood, Lenox, Mass., for benefit of the Berkshire Mu center. The events will t place for 8 to 11 o'clock, gardless of weather conditi Holders of boxes and reser seats are invited to a spec performance of opera at clock in the formal garde There will also be a concert the Tanglewood Study group 4 o'clock in the barn.

The program, which opens 5:45 o'clock, includes "T Berkshires Music Center Operation," simultaneous s tions of each department, a o'clock. The orchestra will featured in the shed, Tang wood composers in the Cha ber Music hall and opera the Theater-Concert hall. At o'clock there will be a lav party in the form of a picn supper and at 8:15 o'clock t concert will be presented in t shed.

Music for the concert, to given by the Boston Sympho orchestra, conducted by Charl Munch, will include Sympho no. 4 in D minor, Schuman and the orchestra under the d rection of Aaron Copland, wi play "Our Town," Suite, Co land, and "The Tender Land Excerpts, Copland. There al will be a choral square danc The Promise of Living, by t Berkshire Festival chorus.

The Boston Pops orchestr with Arthur Fiedler as conduc tor, will present a typical Bosto Pops program, including Over ture to "The Barber of Seville, concert; Marche Slave, Tcha kovsky; "The Carnival of th Animals," Grand Zoologic Fantasie Saint-Saens, with Se mour Lipkin and Ralph Berk witz as piano soloists; and se lection from "My Fair Lady Loewe. "Get Me to the Churc on Time," "Wouldn't It B Lovely," "I've Grown Accus tomed to Her Face," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," "The Rain in Spain" and "With a Little Bit of Luck."

MILLBROOK ROUND TABLE
Thursday, August 1, 1957

Mirror & Herald
Tanglewood on Parad Benefit Next Thursday

The annual benefit for the shire Music Center, the B Symphony Orchestra's su school of music at Tangle Lenox, Mass., will be held Thursday evening, August the Tanglewood grounds.

Two preliminary events will place at 4 P.M. when holde box and reserved seats are in to attend a special opera per ance in the Formal Gardens ticket holders are invited to a cert by the Tanglewood S Group in the Barn, also o'clock.

At 5:45 p.m. all ticket ho are admitted to the Tangle grounds. Visitors are invite attend any of several simultan performances by different s departments at 6 p.m.: the dent Orchestra in the Shed, glewood composers in the Cha Music Hall, Opera Scenes in Theatre. These performances summarize the work of the dents during the six weeks' ses

At 7 o'clock, while visitors enjoying a picnic supper on grounds, the Tanglewood C will present a choral progra the porch of the Main House.

The climax of the evening be the gala concert in the M Shed by the Boston Symph Orchestra, Charles Munch, M Director, and the Boston Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler ductor. Aaron Copland will con play "Our Town," Suite, Co land, and "The Tender Land Excerpts, Copland. There al will be a choral square danc from the opera, "The Tender La with the Berkshire Chorus.

Arthur Fiedler will be in ch of the second half of the progr conducting the Boston Pops chestra. The feature of his gram will be Saint-Saens' Ca val of the Animals" with the iginal verses by Ogden Nash, w will be read by Mr. Nash him at this performance.

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 4 1957

Berkshire Festival Finale

Tanglewood on Parade, Lots of Beethoven Will Be Highlights of Week

The Berkshire Festival is about to enter its final week—a week including the annual Tanglewood on Parade and, on the final weekend, lots of Beethoven.

Tanglewood on Parade will take up most of Thursday. For the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, it will include performances by the various student departments and, at night, a two-barreled concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Boston Pops Orchestra.

Charles Munch will conduct the symphony in Schumann's Fourth Symphony, and then Aaron Copland will take the baton in two of his own works—the "Our Town" Suite and "The Tender Land" excerpts.

Arthur Fiedler will lead the Pops in a typical Boston Pops program to close the night. Ogden Nash will read his verses of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals."

Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra Friday, and Carl Schuricht, of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, will take over Saturday. Along with the Beethoven will be some Honegger and Schubert.

Meanwhile, Monday night the opera students directed by Boris Goldovsky, will give the world premiere of a one-act opera, "Tale for a Deaf Ear," by the American composer Mark Bucci.

Wednesday night's chamber music will be by the Zimbler Sinfonietta, composed of Boston Symphony members.

AARON COPLAND: Conducts Own Works.

STUDENT GROUPS IN ATTRACTIONS THURSDAY NIGHT

Ogden Nash to Appear With Boston 'Pops' At Tanglewood

Spfld Rep. 8/4

Lenox, Aug. 3 — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, will be held Thursday evening, on the Tanglewood grounds. Two preliminary events will take place at 4 p. m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the formal gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the barn, also at 4.

Student Concerts

At 5:45 p. m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school. He will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p. m. the student orchestra in the shed—Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, opera scenes in the theater. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

The program of the student orchestra in the Music Shed at 6 will include Weber's Overture to "Euryanthe" conducted by Fernand Graton, the first movement of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony conducted by Wyn Morris, the first movement of Schumann's piano concerto conducted by Michael Senturia, with Morey Ritt as soloist, and the fourth movement of Villa-Lobos' "Bachianas Brasilieras" No. 2 conducted by Gustav Meier.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall also at 6, will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

Ogden Nash to Read

The noted poet Ogden Nash has agreed to appear at the gala concert in the Music Shed at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses, originally composed for a recording, were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 27,892

JUL 29 1957

Tanglewood Parade Scheduled Aug. 11

"Tanglewood on Parade" is scheduled for Aug. 8 at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for the benefit of the Berkshire Music center. The events will take place for 6 to 11 o'clock, regardless of weather conditions. Holders of boxes and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of opera at 4 o'clock in the formal gardens. There will also be a concert by the Tanglewood Study group at 4 o'clock in the barn.

The program, which opens at 5:45 o'clock, includes "The Berkshires Music Center in Operation," simultaneous sessions of each department, at 6 o'clock. The orchestra will be featured in the shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music hall and opera in the Theater-Concert hall. At 7 o'clock there will be a lawn party in the form of a picnic supper and at 8:15 o'clock the concert will be presented in the shed.

Music for the concert, to be given by the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will include Symphony No. 4 in D minor, Schumann, and the orchestra under the direction of Aaron Copland, will play "Our Town," Suite, Copland, and "The Tender Land," Excerpts, Copland. There also will be a choral square dance, The Promise of Living, by the Berkshire Festival chorus.

The Boston Pops orchestra, with Arthur Fiedler as conductor, will present a typical Boston Pops program, including Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Rossini; Marche Slave, Tchaikovsky; "The Carnival of the Animals," Grand Zoological Fantasia, Saint-Saens, with Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz as piano soloists; and selections from "My Fair Lady," Loewe, "Get Me to the Church on Time," "Wouldn't It Be Lovely," "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," "The Rain in Spain" and "With a Little Bit of Luck."

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,535

AUG 5 - 1957

ACTIVE WEEK IS SCHEDULED FOR FESTIVAL

'Tanglewood on Parade' to Be Major Highlight on Thursday

Lenox, Aug. 5 — The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood-on-Parade," will be held on Thursday evening. Following two special performances by the Opera Department and The Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p. m., the ceremonies will open with a fanfare and welcome at 5.45, and at 6 simultaneous performances by the various departments of the school, the student orchestra, Tanglewood composers, and opera department. At 7 there will be a concert by the Tanglewood Choir accompanying picnic supper on the grounds. At 8.30 in the Music Shed a gala concert by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras will bring the evening to a close. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will conduct the Fourth Symphony of Schumann. Aaron Copland, noted composer and chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land." After the intermission Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a lighter vein with Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave," Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" with piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, and a selection from Loewe's "My Fair Lady" score. Pops encores will also be presented.

Modern Chamber Music

The second of two concerts of Modern Chamber Music presented under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chigo will be heard tomorrow evening at 8.30, and will include works by Walter Piston, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Robert Palmer, Ernst Krenek and Igor Stravinsky. A concert by Fromm Fellows, young musicians who are working with contemporary music at Tanglewood this summer also under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation, will be given on Friday afternoon at 2.30 and will include works by William Denny, Edgard Varese and Karl Kohn, a member of the school's faculty. In addition to these concerts the two final lectures in the Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held on Monday and Wednesday afternoons at 3.15. Irving Fine and Aaron Copland will discuss Contemporary Americans. All these events are open to members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Complete programs for the week follow:

Wednesday, Aug. 7, 8.30, Chamber Music, Zimbler Sinfonietta.

Boyce	Symphony No. 1
Tansman	Triptych
Boccherini	Concerto for Flute and Strings
(Soloist: James Pappoutsakis)
Mozart	Serenata Notturna for two String Orchestras, K. 239
Shostakovitch	Concerto for Piano and Strings, with Trumpet Obbligato, Op. 35

(Piano: Menahem Pressler; Trumpet, Roger Voisin)

Thursday, Aug. 8, 8.30 p. m., Tanglewood on Parade.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Schumann	Symphony No. 4 in D Minor

(Conducted by Charles Munch)

Copland	Suite from "Our Town" Excerpts from "The Tender Land"

(Conducted by the composer)

Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler Conductor

Rossini	Overture to "The Barber of Seville"
Tchaikovsky	Marche Slave
Saint-Saens	Carnival of the Animals
(Piano Soloists: Ralph Berkowitz, Seymour Lipkin)
Loewe	"My Fair Lady" Selections

(Encores)

Friday, Aug. 9, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

(Charles Munch Conducting)

Beethoven	Leonore Overture No. 3
Honegger	Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique")
Beethoven	Violin Concerto
(Soloist: Isaac Stern)

Saturday, Aug. 10, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

(Carl Schuricht Conducting)

Bruckner	Konzertante Musik
Schubert	Unfinished Symphony
Beethoven	Symphony No. 5 ("Eroica")

Sunday, Aug. 11, 8.30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra

(Charles Munch Conducting)

Copland	"Quiet City"
Beethoven	Symphony No. 9

(Soloists: Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum, Donald Gramm) Berkshire Festival Chorus

BALTIMORE, MD.
AMERICAN
Circ. S. 322,925

AUG 4 1957

Berkshire Music Fete

This week will highlight the annual Berkshire Mountains music festival with Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops and Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestras vying with each other as stellar attraction.

This is the annual Tanglewood-on-Parade program. On top of this is the week's music festival at Lenox.

For the travel-minded who like New England, the green Berkshire hills have much to recommend them.

The areas around Pittsfield, and Greenfield and Deerfield have long been considered among the most beautiful in the East.

And to the summer tourist in one's own car, they are readily accessible.

Not to mention the big music activities starting this week.

GREENVILLE, N. Y.
LOCAL
Circ. W. 467

AUG 7 1957

"Tanglewood On Parade" Thursday

The annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood, will be held this Thursday evening, on the Tanglewood grounds

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 p. m. when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to attend a special opera performance in the Formal Gardens. All ticket holders are invited to a concert by the Tanglewood Study Group in the Barn, also at 4 o'clock.

At 5:45 p. m. all ticket holders are admitted to the Tanglewood grounds. A brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, will be followed by a welcome to all guests from Ralph Berkowitz, Dean of the School. Mr. Berkowitz will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p. m.: the Student Orchestra in the Shed, Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall, Opera Scenes in the Theatre. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

At 7 o'clock while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the Main House.

The climax of the evening will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, Music Director, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor. Dr. Munch will direct the Orchestra in Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Aaron Copland, eminent composer and Chairman of the School Faculty, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Following the drawing for door prizes during the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the second half of the program conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra. The feature of his program will be Saint-Saerns "Carnival of the Animals" with original verses by Ogden Nash, which will be read by Mr. Nash himself at this performance.

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,
THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1957

'Tanglewood On Parade' Tonight

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center will be held tonight at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under Charles Munch and Aaron Copland, and the Boston Pops Orchestra, under Arthur Fiedler, will share the principal concert at 8:15 in the Music Shed. Ticket holders are also invited to attend a performance by the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p. m. and by other groups of the Center at 6 p. m. The committee in charge of the benefit has announced various door prizes.

The poet Ogden Nash will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens grand zoological fantasia. Proceeds from Tanglewood on Parade are for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

[25?]

AUG 7 - 1957

Combine Forces For Tanglewood Parade Program Tomorrow

The famed Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Pops Orchestra and all the department of the Berkshire Music Center will combine forces tomorrow to present "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual stellar event of the final week of the Berkshire Music Festival season at Tanglewood, Lenox..

Benefit Program

The program for the annual seven-hour benefit affair, proceeds of which go to help support the Music Center, was announced in detail today.

It will open at 4 p. m. with two simultaneous activities.

Holders of box seats and reserved seats have been invited to a special performance of the Forest Scene from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel," in the formal gardens, given by the opera department. At the same time, the Study Group will perform works by Tunder, Haydn, Purcell, Hindemith and Peuerl in the Barn. Ludwig Zirner, head of the Study Group, and assistants Karl Kohn and Miss Florence A. Dunn, the latter of Williamstown, will conduct.

At 5.45 visitors will be welcomed with a Fanfare composed by Paul Dukas and directed by Roger Voisin, and Ralph Berkoqitz, dean of the Music Center, will give a welcoming address.

Works by Weber, Nielsen, Schumann, Villa Lobos and Tchaikovsky are to be featured at a student orchestra concert in the Music Shed at 6 p. m. Conductors who will lead the orchestra are Fernand Graton of Montreal, Wyn Morris of South Wales, Michael Senturia of Washington, D. C.; Gustav Meier of Zurich Switzerland; and David Wooldridge of London, England. Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N. Y., is soloist in a performance of the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

Opera Scenes

The opera department will present scenes from Bizet's "Carmen" and Puccini's "La Boheme" at 6 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, with settings made from new plastic and fiberglass materials which are being used for experimentation by the opera department this summer.

A Composer's Forum at 6 in the Chamber Music Hall features works by David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La.; Michael Kassler of Maple Shade, N. J.; Gordon Sherwood of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Malcolm Peyton of Princeton, N. J.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, and William O. Smith of Manhattan Beach, Calif. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship Players, who are spending the summer at the Berkshire Music Center working in contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

The Tanglewood Choir will present works by Schroeder, Peterson, Freed, Bartok, Verdi, Bergsma, Toch, Chirard, Riegger and Thomson at 7 p.m. on the steps outside the Main House. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, will conduct, assisted by Alfred Nash Patterson, Lorna Cooke DeVaron and students of choral conducting.

Gala Concert

At 8.15 in the Music Shed the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra will present a gala concert as a climax to "Tanglewood on Parade." Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Schumann's Symphony No. 4. Aaron Copland will direct the Boston Symphony in performance of his "Our Town" Suite and excerpts from his opera "The Tender Land."

After intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a typical pops program, featuring a performance of Saint-Seans' "Carnival of the An[illegible] with piano soloists Ralph

TIGHT BINDING

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957—17

Ogden Nash To Give Readings At Tanglewood on Parade

TANGLEWOOD — Ogden Nash, celebrated American poet, will be at Tanglewood for the first time at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday evening on the Tanglewood grounds.

Mr. Nash will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" as a feature of the program to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Thursday's benefit also will be the first time that Dr. Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, will be conducting at a Tanglewood on Parade.

Ogden Nash

Events Start at 4 p.m.

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 p.m., when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special opera performance in the formal gardens. All ticket holders may attend a concert by the Tanglewood study group in the barn at 4 p.m.

All boxes already have been sold. In anticipation of a large crowd, Tanglewood authorities advise those attending to arrive early to obtain unreserved seats.

At 5:45, there will be a brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, will welcome those attending and invite them to attend simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p.m.: The student orchestra in the Shed; Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall; opera scenes in the Theater. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

Student Orchestra Program

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's Overture to "Euryanthe," conducted by Fernand Graton; the first movement of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony, conducted by Wyn Morris; the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto, conducted by Michael Senturia, with Morey Ritt as soloist; and the fourth movement of Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasilieras No. 2, conducted by Gustav Meier.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 p.m. while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main house.

The climax of the evening will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will direct the orchestra in Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Aaron Copland, eminent composer and chairman of the school faculty, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

Pops Orchestra Too

After the drawing for door prizes during the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the second half of the program, conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra. The feature of his program will be Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with original verses by Mr. Nash. Piano soloists will be Seymour Lipkin of the Berkshire Music Center faculty and Mr. Berkowitz. Mr. Fiedler will also present the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini, Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. Encores may also be performed in the pops tradition.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 7 - 1957

Vandamm
Ogden Nash will read his own verses on the various subjects in Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals" at "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday.

[252]

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, July 30, 1957—15

Ogden Nash In Benefit at Tanglewood

Ogden Nash will take part in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, when he will read the verses which he composed for Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals." This work will be played by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fielder's direction.

Gerard Souzay, French baritone, will give a recital tonight for the fifth event of the weekly Berkshire Festival chamber music series at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's week-end festival concerts will be devoted to Brahms and contemporary composers, with Carl Schuricht conducting Friday night and Charles Munch on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the soloist on Saturday, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist, on Sunday.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Music Shed in a program including Cesar Franck's Symphony and Henry Brant's "The Grand Universal Circus," for orchestra, chorus and percussion groups. Part of this work was performed at Columbia University's McMillin Theater on May 19, 1956. A program of modern music is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall.

Mark Bucci's one-act "Tale for a Deaf Ear" will have its first performance Monday night at Tanglewood in the third of the Berkshire Music Center's experimental programs, prefaced by excerpts from Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and "The Marriage of Figaro." The new work, based on a story by Elizabeth Enright, was commissioned by Samuel Wechsler of New York last year.

Syracuse Herald American, Aug. 4

National Symphony, World Premieres

Tonight at the theater in "Tanglewood," in the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., the world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," by the American composer, Mark Bucci, will be presented by the opera department of the center with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

On the same program, operatice excerpts will be presented, including scenes from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department and the Opera Theater, is in charge. Composer Bucci, in his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland in 1949 in Tanglewood, receiving the Gregor Piatigorsky Award for musical excellence.

This date in music: 1782, in St. Stephen's Church, Vienna, Mozart marries Constanze Weber.

Ogden Nash will come to "Tanglewood" this week from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz in a performance of "Carnival of the Animals" by Saint-Saens" at "Tanglewood on Parade," Aug. 8. He will read the original verses he wrote to accompany this interesting work.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 30 1957

Ogden Nash Will Appear At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that poet Ogden Nash has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There from Here," is a current favorite.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550
AUG 1 1957

Ogden Nash at Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, will appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony.

Ogden Nash to Read Verse At Benefit for Tanglewood

Ogden Nash will take part in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, when he will read the verses which he composed for Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals." This work will be played by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fielder's direction.

Gerard Souzay, French baritone, will give a recital tonight for the fifth event of the weekly Berkshire Festival chamber music series at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's week-end festival concerts will be devoted to Brahms and contemporary composers, with Carl Schuricht conducting Friday night and Charles Munch on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the soloist on Saturday, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist, on Sunday.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Music Shed in a program including Cesar Franck's Symphony and Henry Brant's "The Grand Universal Circus," for orchestra, chorus and percussion groups. Part of this work was performed at Columbia University's McMillin Theater on May 19, 1956. A program of modern music is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall.

Mark Bucci's one-act "Tale for a Deaf Ear" will have its first performance Monday night at Tanglewood in the third of the Berkshire Music Center's experimental programs, prefaced by excerpts from Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and "The Marriage of Figaro."

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 529,253
JUL 31 1957

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
JUL 30 1957

Poet Ogden Nash Will Be in Tanglewood On Parade Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced today that the poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Nash will take part in the gala concert in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
AUG 2 1957

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Thursday evening, August 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366
JUL 31 1957

Ogden Nash Will Appear At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 30—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8.30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700
AUG 1 - 1957

Ogden Nash to Appear At Tanglewood Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8.30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL,

Section II, Aug. [illegible], 1957

OGDEN NASH TO APPEAR TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

[illegible] has agreed t[illegible] August 8) a[illegible] Parade, the an[illegible] the Orchestra[illegible] of music, th[illegible] Center. M[illegible] part of the ga[illegible] Music She[illegible] Lenox at 8:30. H[illegible] Tanglewood fro[illegible] Baltimore to appe[illegible] with Arthur Fiedler, the Bosto[illegible] Pops Orchestra and piano solo[illegible] ists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralp[illegible] Berkowitz, in a performance [illegible] Saint-Saens "Carnival of th[illegible] Animals" and will read th[illegible] original verses which he wrot[illegible] to accompany the work.

The verses were originall[illegible] composed for a recording of th[illegible] "Carnival of the Animals[illegible] where they were read by No[illegible] Coward, but Mr. Nash has him[illegible] self recited them in two prev[illegible] ous orchestral performance[illegible] with Thomas Scherman and th[illegible] Little Orchestra Society of Ne[illegible] York, and with Reginald Stew[illegible] art and the Baltimore Sym[illegible] phony. Mr. Nash's most recen[illegible] book of verse, "You Can't G[illegible] There From Here," is a curre[illegible] favorite.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,404
JUL 30 1957

TO READ VERSE
The Boston Symphony [illegible] chestra announces t[illegible] Ogden Nash, poet, will [illegible] pear at Tanglewood [illegible] Parade, the annual ben[illegible] for the Berkshire M[illegible] Center, in the Music S[illegible] Tanglewood, Lenox, at [illegible] p. m., Aug. 8. He will [illegible] pear with Arthur Fiedl[illegible] the Boston Pops Orches[illegible] and piano soloists, Se[illegible] mour Lipkin and Ral[illegible] Berkowitz, in a perfor[illegible] ance of Saint-Saens "C[illegible] nival of the Animals" a[illegible] will read the origi[illegible] verses which he wrote [illegible] accompany the work.

Apshire Gazette (e)
THAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,052
JUL 30 1957

Poet Ogden Nash To Appear At Tangl[illegible]

The Boston Symphon[illegible] tra announces that [illegible] known poet, Ogden [illegible] greed to appear at [illegible] on Parade, the annua[illegible] the orchestra's summ[illegible] music, the Berkshire [illegible] er. Mr. Nash will be [illegible] gala concert in the [illegible] Tanglewood, Lenox, [illegible] Thursday evening, [illegible] 8:30. He will come to [illegible] from his home in B[illegible] appear with Arthur [illegible] Boston Pops Orchestra [illegible] soloists, Seymour L[illegible] Ralph Berkowitz, in [illegible] ance of Saint-Saens "C[illegible] the Animals" and will [illegible] original verses which h[illegible] accompany the work.

The verses were [illegible] composed for a record[illegible] "Carnival of the Anima[illegible] where they were read by No[illegible] but Mr. Nash has him[illegible] them in two previous [illegible] performances with [illegible] Scherman and the Lit[illegible] tra Society of New [illegible] with Reginald Stewa[illegible] Baltimore Symphony. [illegible] most recent book of [illegible] Can't Get There From [illegible] current favorite.

VARIE[illegible]
NEW YOR[illegible]
AUG 7 [illegible]

Ogden Nash will [illegible] Saens' "Carnival of [illegible] Symphony's Summ[illegible] Thursday (8). The[illegible] Arthur Fiedler, th[illegible] Lipkin as part of [illegible]

The verses were [illegible] with a reading by [illegible] previous performa[illegible] Society of New Y[illegible] Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle

The appearance [illegible] give an unusual f[illegible] tertaining "Tangl[illegible] morrow night. To [illegible] over his verse, N[illegible] gnome-like legend[illegible] poet . . .

udy Group O[illegible]
Tanglewood T[illegible]

The Tanglewood Stu[illegible] inaugurate the [illegible] lewood on Parade [illegible] with a program [illegible] instrumental mu[illegible] lewood Barn at [illegible] on the program [illegible] by Franz Tunder, [illegible] the German chor[illegible] e Burg." Tunder [illegible] r of the compos[illegible] The Study Grou[illegible] nt the cantata, [illegible] to Youth to Appl[illegible] " from Hindem[illegible] n Festival Music,[illegible] 1802. The Study G[illegible] under the direction [illegible] r, assisted by [illegible] Florence Durst, [illegible] early orchestral

Morning G[illegible]
BOSTON, M[illegible]
Independe[illegible]
Circ. 225,[illegible]
AUG 7 19[illegible]

The 15th anniv[illegible] Berkshire Music C[illegible]

TIGHT BINDING

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957—17

Ogden Nash To Give Readings At Tanglewood on Parade

TANGLEWOOD — Ogden Nash, celebrated American poet, will be at Tanglewood for the first time at Tanglewood on Parade Thursday evening on the Tanglewood grounds.

Mr. Nash will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" as a feature of the program to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

Thursday's benefit also will be the first time that Dr. Charles Munch, Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, will be conducting at a Tanglewood on Parade.

Events Start at 4 p.m.

Two preliminary events will take place at 4 p.m., when holders of box and reserved seats are invited to a special opera performance in the formal gardens. All ticket holders may attend a concert by the Tanglewood study group in the barn at 4 p.m.

All boxes already have been sold. In anticipation of a large crowd, Tanglewood authorities advise those attending to arrive early to obtain unreserved seats.

At 5:45, there will be a brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the BSO and a member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, will welcome those attending and invite them to attend simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p.m.: The student orchestra in the Shed; Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall; opera scenes in the Theater. These performances will summarize the work of the students during the six weeks' session.

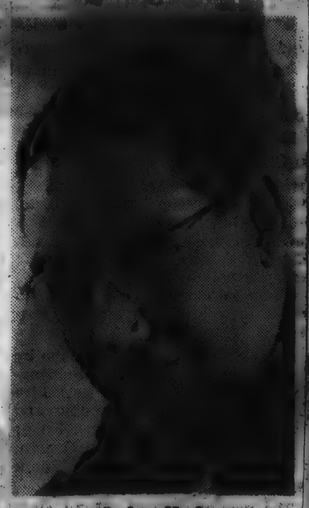
Student Orchestra Program

The program of the student orchestra will include Weber's Overture to "Euryanthe," conducted by Fernand Gratton; the first movement of Nielsen's Fifth Symphony, conducted by Wyn Morris; the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto, conducted by Michael Senturia, with Morey Ritt as soloist; and the fourth movement of Villa-Lobos' Bachianas Brasilieras No. 2, conducted by Gustav Meier.

The concert in the Chamber Music Hall will include works composed during the summer by students of the composition department performed by Fromm Fellowship players.

At 7 p.m. while visitors are enjoying a picnic supper on the grounds, the Tanglewood Choir will present a choral program on the porch of the main house.

The climax of the evening will be the gala concert in the Music Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Dr. Munch will direct the orchestra in Schumann's Fourth Symphony; Aaron Copland, eminent composer and chairman of the school faculty, will conduct two of his own works, the Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from the opera, "The Tender Land" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus.



Ogden Nash

Pops Orchestra Too

After the drawing for door prizes during the intermission, Arthur Fiedler will be in charge of the second half of the program, conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra. The feature of his program will be Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with original verses by Mr. Nash. Piano soloists will be Seymour Lipkin of the Berkshire Music Center faculty and Mr. Berkowitz. Mr. Fiedler will also present the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" by Rossini, Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slave" and a selection from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. Encores may also be performed in the pops tradition.

The Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957—15

Ogden Nash In Benefit at Tanglewood

Ogden Nash will take part in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, when he will read the verses which he composed for Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals." This work will be played by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fielder's direction.

Gerard Souzay, French baritone, will give a recital tonight for the fifth event of the weekly Berkshire Festival chamber music series at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's week-end festival concerts will be devoted to Brahms and contemporary composers, with Carl Schuricht conducting Friday night and Charles Munch on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the soloist on Saturday, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist, on Sunday.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Music Shed in a program including Cesar Franck's Symphony and Henry Brant's "The Grand Universal Circus," for orchestra, chorus and percussion groups. Part of this work was performed at Columbia University's McMillin Theater on May 19, 1956. A program of modern music is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall.

Mark Bucci's one-act "Tale for a Deaf Ear" will have its first performance Monday night at Tanglewood in the third of the Berkshire Music Center's experimental programs, prefaced by excerpts from Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and "The Marriage of Figaro." The new work, based on a story by Elizabeth Enright, was commissioned by Samuel Dushkin of New York last year.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,675
AUG 7 - 1957

Vandamm

Ogden Nash will read the verses of his own ... various subjects in Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" at ... Parade" ...

[252]

Syracuse Herald American, Aug. 4

National Symphony, World Premieres

To[illegible]ght in the theater in "Tanglewood," in the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., the world premiere of "Tale for a Deaf Ear," by the American composer, Mark Bucci, will be presented by the opera department of the center with the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

On the same program, operatice excerpts will be presented, including scenes from Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" and "The Magic Flute." Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department and the Opera Theater, is in charge. Composer Bucci, in his second Guggenheim Fellowship, was a student of Aaron Copland in 1949 in Tanglewood, receiving the Gregor Piatigorsky Award for musical excellence.

This date in music: 1782, in St. Stephan's Church, Vienna, Mozart marries Constanze Weber.

[illegible]n Nash will come to [illegible] this week from [illegible] Baltimore to appear [illegible] Fiedler, the Boston [illegible] and pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of "Carnival of the Animals" by Saint-Saens. [illegible] Tanglewood on Parade" Aug. 8. He will read the original verses he wrote to accompany the work.

NEW YORK [illegible]
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,441 - S. 520,2[illegible]
JUL 31 1957

Ogden Nash to Read Verse At Benefit for Tanglewood

Ogden Nash will take part in the "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 9, when he will read the verses which he composed for Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals." This work will be played by the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fielder's direction.

Gerard Souzay, French baritone, will give a recital tonight for the fifth event of the weekly Berkshire Festival chamber music series at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's week-end festival concerts will be devoted to Brahms and contemporary composers, with Carl Schuricht conducting Friday night and Charles Munch on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Isaac Stern, violinist, will be the soloist on Saturday, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist, on Sunday.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra tomorrow night in Tanglewood's Music Shed in a program including Cesar Franck's Symphony and Henry Brant's "The Grand Universal Circus," for orchestra, chorus and percussion groups. Part of this work was performed at Columbia University's McMillin Theater on May 19, 1956. A program of modern music is scheduled for Saturday afternoon in Tanglewood's Chamber Music Hall.

Mark Bucci's one-act "Tale for a Deaf Ear" will have its first performance Monday night at Tanglewood in the third of the Berkshire Music Center's experimental programs, prefaced by excerpts from Mozart's "The Magic Flute" and "The Marriage of Figaro."

THE LAKEVILLE JOURNAL,
Section II, August 8, 1957

OGDEN NASH TO APPEAR TONIGHT AT TANGLEWOOD

Ogden Nash, has agreed t[o] appear tonight (August 8) a[t] Tanglewood on Parade, the an[nual] benefit for the Orchestra[l] summer school of music, th[e] Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the ga[la] concert in the Music She[d] Tanglewood, Lenox at 8:30. H[e] will come to Tanglewood fro[m] his home in Baltimore to appe[ar] with Arthur Fiedler, the Bosto[n] Pops Orchestra and piano solo[ists], Seymour Lipkin and Ralp[h] Berkowitz, in a performance o[f] Saint-Saens "Carnival of th[e] Animals" and will read th[e] original verses which he wro[te] to accompany the work.

The verses were originall[y] composed for a recording of th[e] "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by No[el] Coward, but Mr. Nash has him[self] recited them in two prev[i]ous orchestral performanc[es] with Thomas Scherman and t[he] Little Orchestra Society of Ne[w] York, and with Reginald Stew[art] and the Baltimore Sy[m]phony. Mr. Nash's most rece[nt] book of verse, "You Can't G[et] There From Here," is a curre[nt] favorite.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
JUL 30 1957

Ogden Nash Will Appear At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that poet Ogden Nash has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541
JUL 30 1957

Poet Ogden Nash Will Be in Tanglewood On Parade Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announced today that the poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. Nash will take part in the gala concert in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances, with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366
JUL 31 1957

Ogden Nash Will Appear At Tanglewood

Lenox, July 30—The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Thursday evening, Aug. 8 at 8.30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

News Advertiser
WESTFIELD, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2700
AUG 1 - 1957

Ogden Nash to Appear At Tanglewood Aug. 8

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8.30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra, and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,404
JUL 30 1957

TO READ VERSE

The Boston Symphony [illegible] chestra announces t[hat] Ogden Nash, poet, will [appear] at Tanglewood [on] Parade, the annual ben[efit] for the Berkshire M[usic] Center, in the Music S[hed] Tanglewood, Lenox, at [8:30] p. m., Aug. 8. He will [come] pear with Arthur Fied[ler] the Boston Pops Orches[tra] and piano soloists, S[eymour] Lipkin and Ra[lph] Berkowitz, in a perfor[mance] of Saint-Saens "C[arnival] nual [illegible] Animals" [and] will [illegible] verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 26,550
AUG 1 1957

Ogden Nash at Tanglewood on Parade

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, will appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159
AUG 2 1957

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well-known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, on Thursday evening, August 8 at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward, but Mr. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There From Here," is a current favorite.

TIGHT BINDING

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052
JUL 30 1957

Poet Ogden Nash To Appear Aug. 8 At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Thursday evening, Aug. 8, at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the "Carnival of the Animals" where they were read by Noel Coward. Nash has himself recited them in two previous orchestral performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony. Mr. Nash's most recent book of verse, "You Can't Get There from Here," is a current favorite.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,40
JUL 30 19

VARIETY
NEW YORK, N. Y.
AUG 1957

Inside Stuff—Music

Ogden Nash will read the verses which he wrote to accompany Saint Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," at the annual benefit for the Boston Symphony's Summer School of Music at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., Thursday, (8). The poet, who lives in Baltimore, will appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloist Seymour Lipkin as part of "Tanglewood on Parade."

The verses were originally composed for a recording of the work with a reading by Noel Coward. However, Nash has recited them in previous performances with Thomas Scherman and the Little Orchestra Society of New York, and with Reginald Stewart and the Baltimore Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1957

In Brief . . .

The appearance of Ogden Nash will give an unusual fillip to the always entertaining "Tanglewood on Parade" tomorrow night. To many who have roared over his verse, Nash has seemed more a gnome-like legend than a flesh-and-blood poet . . .

propriate niche
Vander Voort th ship of Golf Wo tender age of si veteran of five
Eagle sports de

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 3 - 1957

...y Group Opens ...nglewood Parade

...Tanglewood Study Group ...augurate the gala event, ...wood on Parade, on Thurs... ...h a program of vocal ...rumental music in the ...wood Barn at 4 p.m. Fea... ...s the program is a can... Franz Tunder, based up... German chorale, "Ein ...burg." Tunder is a prede... of the composer, Buxte... The Study Group will also ... the cantata, "Admoni... Youth to Apply Itself to ... from Hindemith's work, ...estival Music," composed ... The Study Group, which ... the direction of Ludwig ... assisted by Karl Kohn ...rence Dunn, will also pre... ...y orchestral pieces.

Northampton Gazette

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 225,411
AUG 7 1957

Tanglewood Benefit

The 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center will be obser... in "Tanglewood-on-Parade" tomorrow. The gala event ... the benefit of the Music Center, ...tures demonstrations by five departments of the Summer music school and is climaxed by a concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., presented by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras. Ticket-holders are urged to come early and attend a performance by the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., followed by other Music Center performances at 6.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
AUG 1 1957

Ogden Nash To Be In Tanglewood On Parade

The Boston Symphony orchestra announces that the well known poet, Ogden Nash, has agreed to appear at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of music, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, on Aug. 8 at 8:30 p.m. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra, and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

Ogden Nash Appears At Benefit Tonight

The Boston Symphony Orchestra announces that the well known poet, Ogden Nash, will appear tonight at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Orchestra's summer school of musiv, the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Nash will be part of the gala concert in the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, at 8:30. He will come to Tanglewood from his home in Baltimore to appear with Arthur Fiedler, the Boston Pops Orchestra and piano soloists, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, in a performance of Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animale" and will read the original verses which he wrote to accompany the work.

BOSTON HERALD, THURSDAY, AUG. 8, 1957

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Democratic
Circ. 95,585
AUG 6 - 1957

No Shortage of Door Prizes For Gala Event on Thursday

Tanglewood on Parade Gifts Range All the Way From Bicycle to Brace of Pheasants; Reserved Seats in Shed Sold Out

Lenox, Aug. 6—The 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center will be observed at Tanglewood on Parade, Thursday. The gala event for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center features demonstrations by five departments of the summer music school and is climaxed by a concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 p. m., presented by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras. Ticket-holders are urged to come early and attend a performance by the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p. m., followed by other Music Center performances at 6 p. m.

Door prizes for the gala event have been announced by the Tanglewood on Parade Committee. Among the prizes which will be awarded are: Tickets for two for the 1958 Berkshire Festival season in the Music Shed; six long-playing records from the Tanglewood Music Store; a Metronoma (electric metronome which measures audio-visual tempo precisely), Ogden Nash, who will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" at the gala concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 p. m., has donated six personally autographed volumes of his poetry.

Still They Came!

An English bicycle, a lifetime subscription to High Fidelity magazine, a portable radio donated by Sammy Vincent of Pittsfield, and an RCA-Victor Orthophonic Victrola Phonograph, "Mark VI" will also be awarded. Featured on the list of prizes are "Berkshire Specialties": a brace of pheasants from Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Linwood Farm, Stockbridge; assorted herbs and sauces from the House of Herbs in Salisbury, Conn.; a bottle of white lilac perfume from Mary Chess, Inc., New York City; stationery from Crane & Co., Dalton; Old Fashioned Candies from the Country Store, Jenifer House, Great Barrington. Winning ticket numbers will be drawn during the intermission of the evening's concert in the Music Shed by William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Winners may collect their prizes at the Glass Reception Room immediately after the drawing.

Reserved seats for the evening concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 are sold out. Tickets for unreserved sections in the Music Shed and general admission tickets are still available and may be obtained from the Festival Ticket Office at Tanglewood, telephone Lenox 600.

Berkshire Eagle, Tuesday, Aug. 6, 1957

Clark

DUO PIANISTS Seymour Lipkin, left, and Ralph Berkowitz will be soloists with the Boston Pops Orchestra under direction of Arthur Fiedler in performing Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" at "Tanglewood on Parade" Thursday.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 6 - 1957

Music Center Plans Anniversary Event

The 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center will be observed at Tanglewood on Parade, Thursday.

The event for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center will feature demonstrations by five departments of the summer music school, climaxed by a concert in the Music Shed at 8.15 p.m., presented by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras. A performance by the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., will be followed by other Music Center performances at 6.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 12 1957

Traffic And Trade Heavy In Weekend

Both tourist business and traffic were reported medium to heavy over the weekend in Northern Berkshire.

On Friday night the expected tourist volume was somewhat below expectations, but on Saturday no-vacancy signs were up at almost all major motels, cabins and inns.

One of the major tourist attractions along the Mohawk Trail reported business as fair to good both Saturday and Sunday, but a spokesman said volume was still below a year ago.

The area caught the fringe of the Berkshire Music Festival crowds in Lenox. The six-week program at Tanglewood wound up with record attendance, and many of the visitors were quartered here.

Berkshire Eagle, Wednesday, Aug. 7, 1957

Tanglewood Completes Plans For Annual Parade Tomorrow

TANGLEWOOD — Plans have been completed for the Berkshire Music Center benefit, Tanglewood on Parade, tomorrow.

The event, which marks the 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center, will begin at 4 p.m. It will feature demonstrations by five departments of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer music school, and is climaxed by a concert in the Music Shed. A performance by the Tanglewood Study Group will be held at 4 p.m., followed by other Music Center performances at 6 p.m.

Door prizes have been announced by the Tanglewood on Parade committee. They include a 12-cubic foot GE refrigerator; tickets for two for the 1958 Berkshire Festival; six long-playing records from the Tanglewood Music Store; an electric metronome. Ogden Nash, who will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" at the gala concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., has donated six autographed volumes of his poetry.

An English bicycle, a lifetime subscription to High Fidelity magazine, a portable radio donated by Sammy Vincent of Pittsfield, and an REC-Victor Orthophonic Victrola phonograph, "Mark VI" will also be awarded. Featured on the list of prices are "Berkshire Specialties"; a brace of pheasants from Mrs. Percy Musgrave, Linwood Farm, Stockbridge; assorted herbs and sauces from the House of Herbs in Salisbury, Conn.; a bottle of white lilac perfume from Mary Chess Inc., New York City; stationery from Crane & Co., Dalton; old fashioned candies from the Country Store, Jenifer House, Great Barrington. Winning ticket numbers will be drawn during the intermission of the evening's concert by William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Winners may collect prizes at the glass reception room immediately after the drawing.

Reserved Seats Sold Out

Reserved seats are sold out. Tickets for unreserved sections and general admission tickets still are available and may be obtained from Tanglewood.

Holders of box seats and reserved seats are invited to a special performance of the Forest Scene from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel," at 4 p.m. in the [illegible] gardens, given by the opera department. Simultaneously, the Tanglewood Study Group will perform works by Tunder, Haydn, Purcell, Hindemith and Feuerl in the Barn. Ludwig Ziner, study group head, and assistants Karl Kohn and Florence A. Dunn will conduct.

Works by Weber, Nielsen, Schumann, Villa-Lobos and Tchaikovsky are featured at the student orchestra concert in the Music Shed at 6 p.m. Conductors who will lead the orchestra are Fernand Gratton of Montreal, Canada; Wyn Morris of South Wales, Great Britain; Michael Senturia of Washington, D.C.; Gustav Meir of Zurich, Switzerland; and David Wooldrige of London, England. Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N.Y., is sololist in a performance of the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor.

Opera Scenes

The opera department will present scenes from Bizet's "Carmen" and Puccini's "La Boheme" at 6 p.m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, with settings made from new plastic and fiberglas materials which are being used for experimentation by the opera department this summer.

A composers' forum at 6 p.m. in the Chamber Music Hall features works by David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La.; Michael Kassler of Maple Shade, N.J.; Gordon Sherwood of Ann Arbor, Mich.; Malcolm Peyton of Princeton, N.J.; Joseph Lukewitz of Chicago, Ill.; and William O. Smith of Manhattan Beach, Calif. Their works will be performed by Fromm Fellowship Players.

The Tanglewood Choir will present works by Schroeder, Peterson, Freed, Bartok, Verdi, Bergsma, Toch, Ghirard, Riegger and Thomson at 7 p.m. on the steps outside the Main House, Hugh Ross, head of the choral department, will conduct, assisted by Alfred Nash Patterson, Lorna Cooke DeVaron and students of choral conducting.

At 8:15 p.m. in the Music Shed the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestra will present a concert. Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Schumann's Symphony No. 4. Aaron Copland will direct the Boston Symphony in performances of his "Our Town" Suite and excerpts from his opera "The Tender Land." After intermission, Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present a typical pops program, featuring a performance of Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," with piano soloists Ralph Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin. The celebrated poet Ogden Nash will read his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals in Saint-Saens grand zoological fantasia.

[253]

[254]

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1957

Tanglewood to Hold Music Center Benefit

The gala concert program for the Berkshire Music Center, "Tanglewood on Parade," will be held tonight on the Tanglewood grounds near Lenox, Mass., with music by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch and the Boston Pops orchestra under Arthur Fiedler in programs opening in the music shed at 8:15 o'clock.

* * *

PROCEEDS OF the event will be given to the music center, which this year is marking its 15th anniversary.

Reserved seats for the evening concert have been sold out, but tickets for unreserved sections of the music shed and general admission tickets may be obtained at the festival ticket office.

All ticket holders will be admitted to the Tanglewood grounds at 5:45 p.m. and greeted by a brass fanfare by students under the direction of Roger Voisin, first trumpet of the Boston Symphony. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the school, will invite visitors to attend any of several simultaneous performances by different school departments at 6 p.m. and at 7 o'clock visitors may enjoy their picnic suppers on the grounds while the Tanglewood chorus presents a program on the porch of the main house.

* * *

DR. MUNCH will direct the Boston Symphony in Schumann's fourth symphony for the evening concert and Aaron Copland will conduct his "Suite from 'Our Town'" and excerpts from "The Tender Land."

The feature of the Boston Pops program will be the Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with original verses by Ogden Nash, to be read by Mr. Nash himself. Piano soloists will be Seymour Lipkin and Mr. Berkowitz.

Fiedler will also present the "Overture to 'The Barber of Seville'" by Rossini; Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slav" and a selection from "My Fair Lady" by Loewe. Encores may also be performed in the Pops tradition.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 7 - 1957

Door Awards For Tanglewood On Parade

The fifteenth anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center will be observed at Tanglewood on Parade, Thursday. The gala event for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center features demonstrations by five departments of the summer music school and is climaxed by a concert in the Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., presented by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras. Ticketholders are urged to come early and attend a performance by the Tanglewood Study Group at 4 p.m., followed by other Music Center performances at 6 p.m.

Door prizes for the gala event have been announced by the Tanglewood on Parade Committee. Among the prizes which will be awarded are: tickets for two for the 1958 Berkshire Festival season in the Music Shed; six long-playing records from the Tanglewood Music Store; a Metronoma (electric metronome which measures audio-visual tempo precisely). Ogden Nash, wh will read his own rhymed cor mentaries on the various anima in Saint-Saens "Carnival of th Animals" at the gala concert i the Music Shed at 8:15 p.m., ha donated six personally aut graphed volumes of his poetry.

An English bicycle, a lifetim subscription to High Fidelit Magazine, a portable radio and a RCA-Victor Orthophonic Victrola Phonograph, "Mark VI" will also be awarded. Featured on the lis of prizes are "Berkshire Special ties," a braid of pheasants, assorted herbs and sauces, a bottle of white lilac perfume, stationery and old-fashioned candies.

NEW YORK TIMES, SATURDAY, AUGUST 10, 1957.

RECORD THRONGS AT FETE IN LENOX

12,493 See Tanglewood on Parade, Marking 15th Year of Music Center School

Special to The New York Times.

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., Aug. 8 —Good weather, and an all-day series of musical events, prompted a record audience of 12,493 at the annual Tanglewood on Parade Thursday.

This year's event celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school run in conjunction with the Berkshire Music Festival.

As usual, the day's events were on the three-ring circus order. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon a concert of early music was held in the Barn, and at the same time an excerpt from "Hansel and Gretel" was being given in the Formal Gardens.

At 5:45 o'clock came the annual fanfare. At 6 the visitors had the choice of hearing the student orchestra and student conductors in the Music Shed, opera scenes in the Theatre-Concert Hall, or new music by Tanglewood composers.

At 7 P. M. there was a concert by the Tanglewood Choir. The gala concert in the Shed at 8:15 was divided between the Boston Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra. Charles Munch and Aaron Copland conducted the Boston Symphony—Mr. Munch in the Schumann Fourth Symphony, Mr. Copland in the "Our Town" suite and excerpts from "The Tender Land," with the Festival Chorus.

With the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler conducting, Ogden Nash appeared as poet-narrator, reading his "rhymed commentaries" on the Saint-Saëns "Carnival of the Animals." Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz were the piano soloists. The concert and the evening concluded with orchestral excerpts from "My Fair Lady" and a group of encores ending with "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Register (e)
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 95,656

AUG 14 1957

Norfolk, Va., Ledger-Dispatch & Portsmouth Star
D.

AUG 14 1957

STRASBURG, VA.
Northern Va. Daily
Circ. D. 7,530

Sentinel (m)
WATERVILLE, Me.
Independent
Circ. 17,542

AUG 14 1957

N.Y. JOURNAL 7/14 AMERICAN

Chronicle (e)
WILLIMANTIC, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 5,700

AUG 14 1957

MOBILE, ALA.
REGISTER
Circ. D. 35,481

AUG 14 1957

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 28,614

AUG 14 1957

Express (e)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 30,373

AUG 14 1957

Time (e)
GREENWICH, Conn.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,091

AUG 14 1957

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 62,179

AUG 14 1957

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.
TIMES HERALD
Circ. D. 30,319

AUG 14 1957

LONG BRANCH, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 15,324

AUG 14 1957

ROANOKE, VA.
WORLD-NEWS
Circ. D. 40,347

AUG 14 1957

SUFFOLK, VA.
NEWS-HERALD
Circ. D. 7,550 - S. 7,551

AUG 14 1957

NEW IBERIA, LA.
IBERIAN
Circ. D. 4,561

AUG 15 1957

DANVILLE, VA.
REGISTER
Circ. D. 11,057 - S. 18,534

AUG 14 1957

DUBUQUE, IOWA
TELEGRAPH-HERALD
Circ. D. 39,534 - S. 40,082

AUG 14 1957

MARION, IND.
LEADER TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 8,613

AUG 15 1957

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.
LIGHT
Circ. D. 103,831 - S. 133,598

AUG 14 1957

BASTROP LA. ENTERPRISE

AUG 14 1957

PETERSBURG, VA.
PROGRESS-INDEX
Circ. D. 17,445 - S. 17,641

AUG 14 1957

News (m)
BANGOR, Me.
Independent
Circ. 71,105

AUG 13 1957

BATON ROUGE, LA.
STATE TIMES
Circ. D. 32,045

AUG 19 1957

ALEXANDRIA, LA.
TOWN TALK
Circ. D. 23,572

AUG 14 1957

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE,

Tanglewood Benefit Draws Record Crowd of 12,493

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 8.—A record crowd of 12,493 attended Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood tonight. Opening with a brass fanfare and introduction by Ralph Berkowitz, the school's dean, visitors heard a series of performances by students of the school and enjoyed picnic suppers on the Tanglewood lawns on a perfect summer evening.

The gala concert climaxing the benefit was opened by Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducting at Tanglewood on Parade for the first time. Dr. Munch led the orchestra in Schumann's fourth Symphony. American composer Aaron Copland next conducted two of his own compositions, the "Our Town" suite and excerpts from "The Tender Land."

During the intermission door prizes were awarded and lucky ticket holders won such prizes as a refrigerator, a phonograph and a set of autographed books by Ogden Nash.

Mr. Nash appeared during the second half of the program reading his own poetry to accompany Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" with Arthur Fielder conducting the Boston Pops Orchestra. Piano soloists were Mr. Berkowitz and Seymour Lipkin. Mr. Fielder conducted a typical pops program, closing with excerpts from "My Fair Lady" and a series of Pops encores. A rousing performance of "The Stars and Stripes Forever" brought the evening to an end.

THESE DAYS

Tanglewood Produces Sense of Stability

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

It is something to sit next to Fritz Kreisler while listening to Schumann's "Fourth Symphony" and to hear the grow ading composer and violinist recount what Brahams told him about Schumann. That is an atmosphere that one remembers long because there are giants in a world that knew a stability which most of us seek to restore, at least in our own lives.

The curious institution, Tanglewood on Parade, is a music festival and a youth festival combined in the beautiful Berkshires. To it should be brought delegations from neutralist countries or even from the satellites to witness a spectacle of freedom and culture living together in harmony. There each year student composers and student soloists and student conductors have an opportunity to show what they have and from this group have come many of the most brilliant and most skilled in this and the next generation.

Perhaps what won for Aaron Copland so much applause was the sheer beauty of his compositions which somehow was not anticipated. Copland has a reputation as a modern and from him one expects atonality and dissonance which can, at times, be sheer noise and as difficult, if not impossible, to understand as are many modern things including some of the geometry that goes by the name of objective art which can only mean art without a soul.

This year, at Tanglewood on Parade, Copland directed his own compositions and they possessed beauty and life and meaning and one was grateful that we have no commissar of art, such as Zdanov was in Soviet Russia. No one stopped Copland in his younger mood from expressing a genius for orchestration without too much mind and heart to justify the effort. Today, he is a mature, thoughtful composer, born on our soil and a product of our tradition.

Fritz Kreisler must be only a name on a record for many young Americans who cannot know what a glory he was to their parents. He has reached those years of discretion, in his 80's, when he lives quietly and does not risk playing a false note. But violinists the world over continue to keep alive his work which, for the violin, is already among the immortals. Here, in the Berkshires, he lives in the peaceful atmosphere of Heaton Hall, a stately hotel on a hill, which has somehow uncompromisingly managed to retain the flavor of unhurried years when one sat on a porch and gazed upon an unruffled sky and wondered what Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was saying to James Russell Lowell up the road a bit.

It was a noble America that created a summering place in the Berkshires, in Lenox and Lee and Stockbridge, when the Vanderbilts met the Hannas and the Sedgwicks had something to say about everything. But summering places decay and are forgotten as Newport is bound to become a monument to vulgarity in its current pursuit to revive itself by becoming the jazz capital of the world. Not that jazz is altogether unworthy, but those who live by it seem to distort life and manners and therefore morals, and make of beauty a rank thing. It is what Oscar Wilde meant when he wrote Dorian Gray.

But here in the Berkshires, because of the genius of one woman, Gertrude Robinson Smith, when towns lost their summering appeal and the rich came no more, the atmosphere was rescued from defeat and that concept is Tanglewood and its remarkable music school, both of which are now permanent institutions in American life. Twelve thousand tickets were sold for Tanglewood on Parade, a benefit performance for the school. And that, of itself, means much, for it was on a Thursday night when the week-ender cannot hop into his car to spend a few hours with Beethoven or Berlioz.

It means that the young children who are sent to the camps made up much of this huge audience. And many of them sat out on the lawn, under a moon, and listened from Schumann to Sousa, from Charles Munch to Arthur Fiedler, from the "4th Symphony" to the "Stars And Stripes Forever," and did we all have a glorious time! I had never seen a happier audience come out of anywhere, not even from Madison Square Garden after a fight when everyone won who should have won.

[2553]

Record Crowd Is Thrilled By Tanglewood On Parade

An all-time record of 12,493 eager seekers after varied musical entertainment stormed the gates of Tanglewood Thursday from 3 until well after the evening performance had started. Sunny skies and crystal clear air helped to make the 15th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center's annual benefit, Tanglewood on Parade, a festive affair for all.

Starting at 4 p.m., members of the opera department headed by Boris Goldovsky and assisted by Robert Gay, Ruth Glass and Arthur Schoep in staging division, Elmer Nagy and Claude Marks, scenic division, Leo Van Witsen, costume division, Felix Wolfes, repertoire, and Tom Gaetini, lighting and technical direction, gave a charming performance of Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" in the formal gardens, a perfect setting stage-wise. The voices of all the characters, which included Elaine Quint, Anne Rothgeb and Nancy Williams in the leading roles of Hansel, Gretel and the witch, assisted by Lesli Loosli and Elaine Freybler, were with good taste.

At the same time in The Barn, the Tanglewood Study Group, directed by V. Ludvig Zirner, assisted by Karl Kohn and Florence Dunn, presented a most enjoyable program including instrumental and vocal works by Tunder, Haydn, Purcell, Hindemith and Peuerl. As the personable Miss Dunn remarked, this is the only place at Tanglewood where music is made "just for fun." Here amateurs in all stages are gathered for a very rewarding two, four or six weeks of playing and singing under the patient guidance of these able leaders.

At 5:45 a brass fanfare, composed by Paul Dukas, starting and finishing in true martial fashion, with a lovely chorale mid-section, introduced Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, who announced the various and simultaneous programs given by the 350 students from all over the Americas, Europe and the Orient, the climax of a successful fifteenth summer session.

The student orchestra, one of the finest in virtuoso membership this year, trained by Eleazar de Carvalho, assisted by Seymour Lipkin, opened their program in the Big Shed with a stirring performance of Weber's Overture to Euryanthe, conducted by Fernand Graton, followed by a sensitive reading of the rather repetitive and lengthy first movement of the Danish composer Nielson's Fifth Symphony, with Wyn Morris conducting. The rest of the program included the first movement of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A minor with Morey Ritt as soloist and Michael Senturia directing, Bachianas Brasilieras, No. 2 and the fourth movement of Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony.

In the Chamber Music Hall the excellent Fromm Fellowship Players presented several compositions by the Tanglewood Composers studying with Aaron Copland, assisted by Milton Babbitt and Irving Fine. Most interesting Piano Sonata by David Ward-Steinman a Sonata for violin and piano by Michael Kassler, and a group of songs by Gordon Sherwood, Malcolm Peyton, Joseph Lukewitz and David Ward-Steinman appealing both in text and their musically reflective form. A Divertimento for Violin, Cello, Oboe, Clarinet and French Horn by William Smith closed a future-promising program.

At the Theatre-Concert Hall one heard the first act of Carmen, which included Edward Purrington of Northampton acting and singing well the role of the guide, the third act of La Boheme, all pleasing vocally but one wished for more dramatic depth, which of course is a result of many more rehearsals than this department's overflowing schedule allows.

As the lovely and spacious grounds were slowly engulfed by picnickers the Tanglewood Choir sang a provocative group of songs from the Main House Porch, ending with the Saints Procession from Virgil Thompson's Four Saints in three acts. The Festival Chorus and Choir are trained by Hugh Ross, assisted by Lorna Cooke de Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson.

From the beginning of the evening's gala concert at 8:15 Dr. Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a festive and exuberant performance of Schumann's Fourth Symphony. Aaron Copland enthralled the audience with his Suite from "Our Town" and excerpts from his opera "Tender Land," including the Choral Square Dance and The Promise of Living, assisted by the Festival Chorus in expansive, rollicking and hearty mood, infected by this typically American music.

Following the drawing for 10 door prizes, in which a lady from Northampton was among lucky recipients, the program was strictly "Pops." Arthur Fiedler started the Boston Pops Orchestra in Rossini's Overture to the Barber of Seville, followed by the colorful Marche Slav of Tschaikowsky's. Then to complete and chuckling delight of all Ogden Nash became the "super smash" with his unique narration of his own rhymed verses for Saint-Saens "Carnival of Animals." Mr. Nash said that he had been a little concerned over the size of the audience, but he needn't have worried for his projection was so direct and simple, without mannerisms or frills, that each individual received and reveled in his aptly turned, pungent and ridiculously truthful rhymes. The timing was without flaw. Mr. Fiedler guiding the orchestra and the perfectly co-ordinated pianists Ralph Berkowtiz and Seymour Lipkin in a performance all obviously enjoyed.

Selections from popular "My Fair Lady" relaxed and swayed the almost audibly humming listeners, and of course, in true Pops tradition, Mr. Fiedler was more than generous in the innumerable and favorite encores. A satiated and utterly happy audience cheered its approval of a very successful Tanglewood on Parade.

M. deB. B.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 9 - 1957

Tanglewood On Parade Draws Record Crowd To Famed Lawns

The lawns of Tanglewood were covered with a crowd of 12,493 people Thursday night, the biggest ever to turn out for the annual Tanglewood On Parade held to raise money for the Berkshire Music center.

All departments of the center gave demonstrations during the late afternoon and early evening; there was an outdoor choral concert during the picnic supper hour; and the Boston Symphony orchestra and Boston Pops orchestra provided the concert in the Music shed at night.

For the gala concert Dr. Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony in a graceful performance of Schumann's Symphony No. 4, bringing it to a glorious climax as if to mark a special occasion. Then Aaron Copland, probably the most successful of living American composers and one long associated with Tanglewood, conducted two of his own works.

These were the poignant "Our Town" suite and excerpts from "The Tender Land." The first was handled very smoothly, a work of strong melodic pattern and rich orchestration. The Berkshire Festival chorus joined the orchestra in the Choral Square dance, a gay rousing piece, and "The Promise of Living," a stirring chorus from "The Tender Land."

The Berkshire chorus was magnificent, with a gorgeous ringing vocal quality that combined well with the orchestra.

The second half of the program was presented by the Boston Pops under the baton of Arthur Piedler. Rossini's Overture to "The Barber of Seville" and Marche Slave by Tschaikowsky were followed by a completely charming presentation of Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of the Animals" with Ogden Nash there in person to interpolate his own bright verses written to match. The program ended with a medley from "My Fair Lady," and several Boston Pops encores.

The Berkshire festival draws to a close this week end with concerts featuring the works of Beethoven.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Charles Munch and will include the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger.

Saturday night Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert on Sunday afternoon conducted by Dr Charles Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Voisin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire festival chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

—A.B.M.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 10 1957

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 201,107

AUG 9 - 1957

MUSIC

Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Aug. 8 — The Boston Symphony Orchestra had its 11th annual "Tanglewood on Parade" in beautiful summer weather this evening, attracting a record crowd of 12,493 to attend a series of musical events and demonstrations culminating in one of Arthur Fiedler's pops concerts.

The high point of the concert itself, which began seriously enough under Charles Munch with Schumann's fourth symphony and works by Aaron Copland, the composer conducting, was the appearance of Ogden Nash. Mr. Nash convulsed the immense crowd, which overflowed onto the lawn outside the shed, with his reading of his own verses commenting on Saint Saens' "Carnival of the Animals."

The poet, whose highly evolved comic verses are famous, read his verses with a droll, dry sense of humor, in a rich Harvard (or is it Yale) accent, but unfortunately there was no sound system and he was largely inaudible save to those in the immediate area.

Fiedler Cuts Loose

The piano soloists were Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, who did the entertaining piano parts in Saint Saens' familiar burlesque of everyone, himself included, in his portraits of the creatures of his carnival.

Following the playing of Mr. Fiedler's current big pops number, selections from "My Fair Lady," the real fun began as Mr. Fiedler cut loose with a number of the pops comic encores. The ones that drew the roof of the great shed with merriment were the translations of "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing" and "The Banana Boat Song." By the time he finished up with "The Stars and Stripes Forever," he and the orchestra had attained one of the biggest ovations ever heard in these green hills.

Aaron Copland for his part, conducted a brief section from his score to "Our Town," a quiet, gentle and charming thing all of a mood but pleasant to hear. Two choral excepts from his opera "The Tender Land" sung by the Berkshire Festival chorus, concluded his part in the concert, which followed the traditional lawn party and picnic supper on the green.

According to the management, the current season at Tanglewood has run consistently ahead of all previous years with some 106,934 people in attendance so far. Two factors, aside from the constantly growing audience in general, are held responsible. The weather, for one thing, has been exceptionally good throughout, with only one severe rainstorm to hold the audience of a concert down to 3500. The other is the Massachusetts Turnpike, which has brought up a good many more Bostonians than have hitherto made the trek, cut now from four or more hours to an easy two.

Concerts tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday afternoon bring the festival to a close.

R.F.E. JR.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 9 - 1957

'Tanglewood Parade' A Seven-Ring Circus

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — It was a seven-ring circus for as many hours at "Tanglewood on Parade" yesterday afternoon and evening. By their atendance, 12,493 persons contributed to the Berkshire Center for whose benefit this annual event is held and who provided five parts of the entertainment. Proceeds were over $31,000.

The evening concert was given by the Boston Symphony conducted by Charles Munch—also by Aaron Copland in two of his own compositions. Following intermission, the Boston Pops Orchestra and Arthur Fiedler took over, with duo-pianists Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, assisted by Ogden Nash in his own rhymed commentaries on Saint-Saens.' "Carnival of the Animals."'

Melody Lines

In part, Munch gave Schumann's symphony No. 4 in D minor an almost frenetic reading. It opened with finely-sculptured melody lines, exuding warmth in strings. Vigor was unrestrained, but seemingly doled out with composure. Heavy brass was all that blotted a fine aura of tonal balances and dynamics.

The conductor interrupted the second movement when a sceraming child added a persistent aligato to Schumann's delicate melodies. More important is that it was beautifully played.

Munch handled the scherzo with almost violent action at a tremendous clip, and the finale again had some almost offensively loud volume from brass. Some of the most brilliant work was done by the cellos and bases.

Pallid Complexion

Copland's "Our Town" suite gave the program a pallid complexion. It's moaning, groaning, pathetic little tune just about tired itself out. It was conducted more engagingly than it was written.

The excerpts from Copland's "The Tender Land" were quite another matter. This is music for fun, and was so treated by the Berkshire Center Chorus, who snapped out the words to the "Square Dance" supported with vigorous touches from orchestra.

It would have helped if the words to "The Promise of Living" (same Copland work) had been better understood. The orchestra managed to drown out the chorus pretty thoroughly and the composer did nothing about it — or couldn't. Nevertheless, a certain quality of the grandiose was achieved.

Rossini's Overture

The evening went from a virtuoso Boston Symphony to a mighty efficient Boston Pops under Fiedler. The overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" was sparkling, but didn't reach any very great moments.

Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slav" grew from sinuous, quiet solos in woodwinds to a full-scale, conglorous ending.

The start of Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals" was the quiet-spoked, impeccably-enunciating, reedy-voiced Ogden Nash. He wrung every ounce of humor out of every verse with which he prefaced the zoological parade — the shortest being, "in the world of mules — there are no rules."

Splendid Pianist

Messrs. Lipkin and Berkowitz were splendid in the duo-pianist roles, particularly in the mimicry of pianists and the imitations of donkeys. The orchestra smacked every selection with apparent relish. They crawled with the tortoise, lumbered with the elephant, and roared, chirped, and growled in the best tradition.

Remaining numbers were a medley from "My Fair Lady," "Fast Track," "Calypso, 1, and other fine, pop fodder.

Simultaneous

A half-dozen Bershire Center events were taking place almost simultaneously beginning at four in the afternoon. We managed to look in on some of each. While comparisons weren't intended, they were inevitable.

The natural beauty of the grounds beyond Tanglewood's formal gardens was a perfect setting for scenes from Humperdinck's opera, "Hansel and Gretel." Both title roles were done with remarkable naturalness by Anne Rothgeb and Elaine Quint. Their voices were both mature and fluid enough for conviction. A more ominous witch has never invaded the scene than Nancy Williams'.

It was a charming experience even for those of us who had to face a hot and glaring sun.

Less Exciting

Less exciting were the offerings of the Tanglewood study group, comprising about 30 singers and 15 instrumentalists. They held forth in the barn with excerpts from cantantas, catches, and chorus from the 17th Century to the present.

A scene from Purcell's "Dido and Aeneas," conducted by Ludwig Zirner was poor in pitch and sounded mechanical. Florence A. Dunn directed the group in some English catches that were just as spotty but more entertaining in themselves.

One of the most valuable aspects of the exhibition was the work of Tanglewood composers. We were particularly interested in a piano sonata written and played by David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La.

Rythmic

Its abstract music is derived from mood-music. The composer played it well, which wasn't a foregone conclusion. In spots it was hard to glean the message Ward-Steinman wishes to convey. In general, the opening movement is rhythmically alive, harmonically vague and and melodically objective. The second movement had more good moments that were not impeded with evasions.

A Prokofieff-Scriabin genre appeared in the finale, which is both percussive and concentrated on rhythmic complexities, the least of which was syncopation.

Rich talent was manifested in the performances of the Berkshire Center Orchestra, performing under five conductors from five nations.

Few Cues

At times it appeared as if the most remarkable thing about Nielsen's Fifth Symphony was that conductor Wyn Morris from Wales had averted an emotional collapse. He spent his energy keeping time, looking overcome, and giving few cues. The orchestra played very well.

Morey Ritt from Hempstead, N. Y. was soloist in the opening movement from Schumann's piano concerto. It was a light-fibered performance, agile-fingered and pliant. Conductor Michael Senturia from Washington, D. C. gave her a sympathetic, helpful background.

One might have judged Miss Ritt's projection of dynamics more accurately if it hadn't been for several hundred lusty-voiced youngsters who must have thought they really were at a circus.

Fine Control

The most tasteful student-conducting was by Gustav Meier from Zurich, Switzerland. He demonstrated a fine control over the unruly rhythms of Bachianas Brasileiras No. 2 by Villa-Lobos, and drew out a ringing account of its melodies. The orchestra played it remarkably well.

Tonight marks the opening of the Festival's final series. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Leonore Overture, No. 3. And Isaac Stern is soloist in the Beethoven Violin Concerto. The remaining work is Honegger's Symphony No. 3 "Liturgique."

[2567]

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 102,404
AUG 9 1957

12,500 Attend Gala Benefit At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX, Aug. 9 — The avowed purpose of "Tanglewood on Parade," the gala annual event presented yesterday, was to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, which again has served over 400 students from all parts of the globe in six weeks of topflight instruction.

That this goal was served well is evident from the announcement by William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of Berkshire Music Center, that over 12,500 attending yesterday's program had paid in a gross of more than $31,000.

This throng had a delightful day embracing all sorts of student presentations and culminating in a concert in which the Boston Symphony was conducted by Charles Munch and Aaron Copland, and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra, by Arthur Fiedler. All performers donated their services.

Good Legs Needed

You need a good pair of legs and some patience to sample all the "Parade" wares.

At 4 p. m., Boris Goldovsky at the piano and a student cast entertained the box-holders and reserved seat patrons with opera in the open air, using a corner of the orchard near the formal gardens.

Imagination was evident in the acting and costuming, and delightful voices tempted one to forget the blazing sun.

At the same time, off the grounds in the "Barn," the Tanglewood Study Group of singers and instrumentalists was tackling music from earlier centuries, most of it choral.

The conductors were Ludwig Zirner, Karl Kohn and Florence A. Dunn.

Dilemma Worsens

At 6 o'clock the critic's dilemma was even more bewildering.

From snatches of opera scenes in the Theater-Concert Hall, again presented by Goldovsky's department, I fled the role of a standee to relax in the big Music Shed at a concert by the student orchestra of 70, trained by Eleazar de Carvalho and Seymour Lipkin, and performing under the direction of student conductors hailing from Canada, Wales, Washington, D. C., Switzerland and London.

Single movements of works by Weber, Nielsen, Villa Lobos, Tchaikovsky and Schumann were presented, the latter with a winsome, capable girl soloist.

I had to miss the interesting program by Tanglewood composers in the Chamber Music Hall at the same hour. Here the young writers in many cases were perforrming their own music, assisted by 11 players of the Fromm Fellowship.

Massed Hundreds

At 7, the Tanglewood Choir sang from the porch of the Main House to hundreds massed solidly on the lawn.

Trained by Hugh Ross, Lorna Cook de Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson, the chorus performed under their direction and also that of several student conductors.

At the evening concert in the shed, more than 6,000 crowded the building, while thousands more camped on the vast lawns.

His great personal energy drew from the famed orchestra the utmost in romanticism with technical precision and feats hidden beneath an air them-like richness of tone and a superb utterance of dramatic passages.

There was tenderness in the elegiac opening of the 'Romanze" and delightfully lyric and elastic phrasing in the "Scherzo."

Wins Audience

Aaron Copland, for many years invaluable to the school as a composer, teacher and consultant, won the audience completely as conductor, with a Suite from the music he composed in 1942 for the film "Our Town" and excerpts from his recent opera, "The Tender Land."

"Our Town" was music of tender memories, and "The Tender Land" exploited American idioms both in "Choral Square Dance," where a chorus of 100 voices, prepared by Patterson, sang vigorously and accurately, and in "The Promise of Living," where singers a orchestra reached a nobler mood.

After the intermission drawing of fascinating door prizes, Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" took over in a program frankly designed for pleasure.

Among the preliminaries was a stunning version of Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slav." The Boston percussion and brasses are not timid.

Big Fun

The big fun was a complete rendition of Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of Animals." Fourteen brief and pungent episodes were highlighted by introductory verses recited by their famed author, Ogden Nash.

Listeners began chuckling then, and did not stop when the composer's witticisms carried forward the jokes mimicking various animals directly or by innuendo. Throughout this work, Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz (dean of the Music Center) did brilliant work at two pianos, with a keen sense of humor.

The cello solo of Jacobus Langendoen in "The Swan" was a high point.

The audience went home humming hit tunes from "My Fair Lady" and tingling from numerous encores, including E. Strauss' "Fast Track Polka," "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," "Calypso" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

Mahan

CONGRATULATIONS are offered by Arthur Fiedler, right, conductor of the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, to Ogden Nash, who read his own rhymed commentaries on Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," which made a great hit with the audience.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 9 1957

Tanglewood on Parade . . . An Evening in the Berkshires

Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — Tanglewood re-visited.

Pressures of a different sort have kept me from the Berkshire Music Center the last couple of years after an unbroken record of having heard every concert for nearly two decades, beginning with the tent affair on the Hanna farm.

Remarkably, Tanglewood is little changed—only a little more of what it was, a relaxed outing mood in a dizzy variety of apparel, combined with a deeply attentive respect for whatever music was offered and a ready vociferation.

Tanglewood on Parade was like that last night. The more serious, baccalaureate activities had been going on through the afternoon when in all the smaller sheds and practice rooms, the various departments had made music in the nature of progress reports.

BY NIGHTFALL all of the parking fields were filled to capacity, the first time I have ever known them to be so, and the private yards were packed at 50 cents a car.

There were familiar sights: Hugh Ross, seen earlier at his accustomed table at Chef Karl's, contemplating from the edge of the pavilion, the gathering audience; George Judd, now retired but looking as distinguished as ever, a Beacon Hill counterpart of Charles Munch; crossing the lawn with his wife was another veteran of the critics' corps, Jay Rosenfeld of the Berkshire Eagle. One would have looked for him in the press room but he said he had done reviews for ten nights in a row and was taking a holiday.

There was music, of course, the highlight of which was Ogden Nash reciting his rhymed commentaries on the characters in Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals." The composer's quip at pianists was handsomely polished off by Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz.

THE EVENING was a sort of Carnival of Conductors—Munch, Aaron Copland and Arthur Fiedler all taking their turns with the baton. The first delivered up a solid performance of Schumann's D minor Symphony which, from where I sat, testified that the brass department of the Boston Symphony Orchestra continues to be its most brilliant section. Later there was some trumpet playing that was dazzling.

Much as I like Copland's suite "Our Town" it wasn't a particularly good choice for this program because of its low-key dynamics. It is doubtful that the folks on the lawn—and their ratio to the reserved seat contingent represents the submerged part of the iceberg—heard much of it. His excerpts from "The Tender Land" were fetching and brought into voice the lusty Festival Chorus.

Fiedler gave us Marche Slav, Rossini's Barber overture, and wound up with the amazingly durable tunes from "My Fair Lady."

C. E. L.

CHARLES MUNCH
Conducts at Lenox

Annual Parade Draws 12,493 To Tanglewood

$31,000 Gross For Music Center Sets New Record

By ARTHUR MYERS

A sunny, cool afternoon and a beautiful evening, complete with silvery full moon, combined with some well-known musical and literary talent yesterday to bring off the most successful Tanglewood on Parade in history.

A total of 12,493 came through the gates, clicking off a $31,000 gross for the Berkshire Music Center. The figure smashed the extant record to smithereens — 10,050 admissions for a $24,000 gross, set in 1954. Last year 9,787 turned out for a $24,266 gross.

What might have provided the extra fillip to the turnstiles was the appearance of humorist Ogden Nash, who recited a series of verses as punctuation to the Boston Pops' rendition of Saint-Saens' "Carnival of Animals."

There was no immediate report on the number of sandwiches consumed, bowls of potato salad sat in, or martinis spilled, but the total is believed also to have broken new ground.

Three types of box lunches were available — cold roast chicken, sliced turkey sandwich, and roast beef sandwich, with choice of

Tanglewood
Continued on Second Page

Mahan

A RECORD CROWD of 12,493 converged on Tanglewood last evening for the Tanglewood on Parade program for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. A record for the 15-year-old musical potpourri also was set by the gross, which reached a whopping $31,000. More than half the visitors, as may be seen before the Shed concert, camped on the lawn.

Tanglewood Goes on Parade Before Record Crowd

Tanglewood

Continued From First Page

beverage and a plum for dessert. Coca Cola was priced at 25 cents. Miniatures of beer also went for two bits.

Feast for Gourmets

It was a feast for gourmets and music appreciators alike.

The early part of the festival was given over to performances by students. They began at 4 with a presentation of a scene from Humperdinck's "Hansel and Gretel" near the formal gardens. Nearby, in the Barn, more esoteric tastes were titillated with renditions of centuries-old chamber music, including Old English Catches.

At 6, music lovers were faced with more decisions, as simultaneous performances went on in the Music Shed, the theater-concert hall and the Chamber Music Hall. These were light symphonic selections, played with verve and joyousness by the student orchestra, scenes from "Carmen" and "La Boheme," and chamber music composed by Tanglewood composers.

An interesting example of the last was "Tell Me Where Is Fancy Bred," done by Malcolm Peyton of Princeton, N.J. Some excellent varieties can be obtained on Columbus Avenue in Pittsfield.

A concert at 7 by the Tanglewood Choir ran into the height of the dinner hour but was nevertheless well attended.

At 8:15 Tanglewood moved up its big guns.

The Music Shed filled up, the last baked bean and banana were hastily consumed on the lawn, and the old pros took over.

The opening offering was Schumann's Symphony No. 4 in D minor, conducted as one teen-ager put it, "by Charles What's-His-Name."

Following this, Aaron Copland conducted his "Our Town Suite" and excerpts from "The Tender Land."

Draws Mother's Name

During the intermission, door prizes were drawn. Among the prizes were a Hi-Fi set and 15 bottles of champagne. But the high light of this interlude was an amazing stroke of chance perpetrated by Miss Natasha De Leuchtenburg, a Brookline student who was drawing the stubs from a huge box. Reaching in among 12,493 stubs, Miss De Leuchtenburg came up with her mother's, good for two season passes to Tanglewood.

"I could die!" she explained. "This is so embarrassing!"

After the intermission the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler took over, and drew a response that tended to solidify any lurking suspicion that most Tanglewooders are lowbrows who tap their feet and whistle in the shower.

After banging off the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" and "Marche Slav," the piece de resistance stepped onto the stage, in the person of Ogden Nash, poet.

Mr. Nash, who looks and speaks like somebody's English professor, recited a collection of verses he had composed to punctuate Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of the Animals."

To this literary critic, they seemed hardly first-rate Nash, but the man who gave the language the couplet—

The interest I take in my neighbor's nursery
Would have to grow to be even cursory can't go too far wrong.

Here are some of them—every reader his own critic:

Come crown my brow with leaves of myrtle
I know the tortoise is a turtle.
Come carve my name in stone immortal,
I know the tortoise is a turtle.
I know to my profound despair
I bet on one to beat a hare.
I also know I'm now a pauper
Because of its tortley turtley torpor.

Or:

The rooster is a roistering hoodlum,
His battle-cry is doodle-doodlum.
Hands in pockets, cap over eye,
He whistles at bullets passing by.

Or:

The swan can swim while sitting down,
For pure conceit he takes the crown.
He looks in the mirror over and over,
And claims to have never heard of Pavlova.

Or:

At midnight in the museum hall
The fossils gathered for a ball.
There were no drums or saxophones
But just the clatter of their bones,
A rolling, rattling, carefree circus
Of mammoth polkas and mazurkas.
Pterodactyls and brontosauruses
Sang some ghostly prehistoric choruses.
Amid the mastodonic wassail
I caught the eye of one small fossil.
Cheer up, sad world, he said, and winked—
It's kind of fun to be extinct.

Four Maids Polled

A quick poll of four maids from the Bronx produced the following depositions:

"I didn't think he was so funny."
"I think he's fabulous."
"I liked him."
"I liked him."

It must be added that the nonconformist was a delinquent type who tickled her neighbor during Schumann, ate more than her share of the community orange, and was reprimanded by a nearby serious music lover for continuous giggling.

The concert was now drawing to a close, but a possible new record was set when not one of the 12,493 broke for his car during the last number. For it was a selection from "My Fair Lady," and the audience was enthralled. Nobody walks out on "Get Me to the Church on Time," "Wouldn't It Be Loverly," "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face," "I Could Have Danced All Night," "On the Street Where You Live," "The Rain in Spain," and "With a Little Bit of Luck."

No one would leave after that, and Mr. Fiedler came down the stretch with an encore titled "Fast Track" and followed that up with "Calypso."

For a clincher he knocked loose the rafters with "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

It was a real nice clambake.

Mahan

WELCOME address to the 12,493 persons who attended last night's Tanglewood on Parade program was given by Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Beethoven Works Are Featured In Final Weekend Concerts

TANGLEWOOD—Music of Beethoven will be featured as the programs of the final weekend here of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, music director.

Concerts tonight and tomorrow evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed and will include a performance by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto tonight, a guest conductor, Carl Schuricht, tomorrow evening and on Sunday afternoon a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Tonight's concert will be conducted by Dr. Munch and will include, in addition to the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Mr. Stern, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 (Liturgical) by the French composer, Arthur Honegger. At tomorrow evening's concert Carl Schuricht will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, several years ago composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center. Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 "Eroica."

The final concert on Sunday afternoon, to be conducted by Dr. Munch, will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" (solo trumpet: Roger Volsin, solo English horn: Louis Speyer). Dr. Munch will close the 20th Berkshire Festival season with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass. The Berkshire Festival Chorus will be prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson and Hugh Ross.

The Saturday morning rehearsal of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at 10 o'clock will be open to the public. Admission is $1 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center include a special concert of contemporary chamber music by resident fellows of the Fromm Music Foundation's special program at the Berkshire Music Center this summer, the final concert by the Student Orchestra in the Shed at 3 p.m. tomorrow and the final student chamber music concert on Sunday morning at 10 in the theater-concert hall.

Pops Goes the Symphony

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE GALA concert in the Shed last night by the Boston Symphony orchestra was the climax, as usual, of the great annual festive occasion of Tanglewood-on-Parade.

The program proved to be the giant economy size which included within its short two-and-three-quarters hours exhibits of three of the major activities of the Berkshire Festival.

Exhibit one was the performance by the Boston Symphony under the leadership of its musical director, Charles Munch, of Schumann's fourth Symphony; exhibit two was the same orchestra, assisted by the Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, in several short excerpts of Aaron Copland, led by the composer; exhibit three, the last half of the program, was the Boston Pops orchestra under its regular conductor, Arthur Fiedler, in a half-dozen selections from their vast and enchanting repertory.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA played Schumann for Munch with all its wealth of tone and virtuosity and the four short movements, played without pause, showed the famous Bostonians at their best.

Copland's music was the hit of the evening. "Our Town" is a fascinating atmospheric orchestral invention of quiet imaginative charm. The chorus joined the orchestra in two excerpts from "The Tender Land," Copland's opera on the book of the late James Agee which was concerned with the wooing of a Western-farm girl by an itinerant farm-worker. The chorus, in the pink of alertness and responsiveness, sang for Copland to make "The Choral Square Dance" and "The Promise of Living" more communicable as pure music than the pieces had been as integrated in the stage production. Certain it was that this concert version, on the whole, had the advantage of better performers than the opera, both within the voices and the instruments. Copland appears personally as conductor only on rare occasions. His music pleased the huge audience enormously. Its transparent formula is distinctive and appealing, and his performing forces caught his infectious ardor.

* * *

AFTER A slight metamorphosis and game of musical chairs, the orchestra, in its altered disposition, became the Boston Pops and Fiedler, its famed leader, whipped them through their familiar pages to afford the eager audience endless delight. Saint-Saens grand zoological fantasia, "The Carnival of the Animals," had as piano soloist, Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz, who had already this season shown prowess, and as narrator in his own rhymed commentaries on the various animals, Ogden Nash himself.

Nash's verses to the Saint-Saens sketches are high peaks of the inimitable wit's individuality and his articulation and timing were a masterwork in their own right. The wealth of talents employed in this production made an overwhelming performance. The illusions and implications in the music were hilarious and such more serious moments as the flute solo by James Pappoutsakis and the cello solo in "The Swan" by Gustav Langedoen were appreciatively recognized.

Aaron Copland

* * *

FIEDLER delighted his audience as he ran through the overture to Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," Tchaikovsky's "Marche Slav" and selections from Loewe's "My Fair Lady," after which came the encores which only the endurance of the performers limited. The inevitable and rousing "Stars and Stripes Forever" brought the evening to an explosive climax.

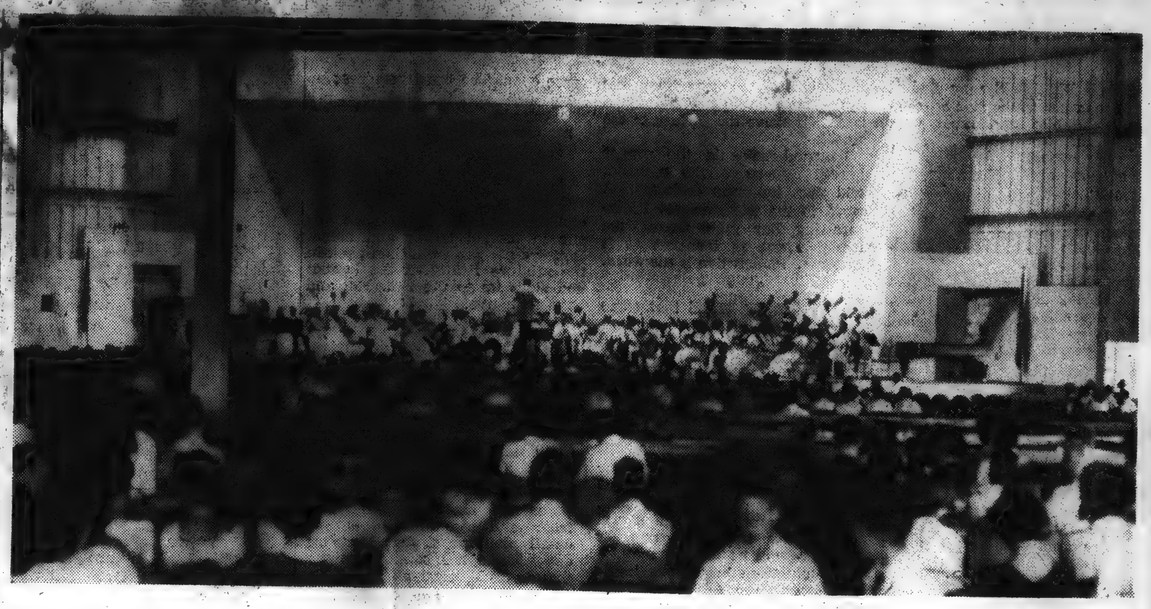
Art Festival Set Aug. 23 at Shelburne Falls

SHELBURNE FALLS — The Mohawk Trail's first summer art festival will be held here Aug. 23, 24 and 25, drawing from the work of artists in nearby areas of Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire.

The three-day show, including paintings by summer visitors and area residents, will be staged at the Bridge of Flowers near Salmon Falls on the Deerfield River. It will be presented by the Deerfield Valley Art Assn. and the local Women's Club.

In charge of the event are Stephen G. Mainatty of Old Deerfield, president of the art association, and Mrs. John J. Shea, vice president of the Women's Club. Mrs. Shea is accepting registrations from artists until Aug. 15.

The Bridge of Flowers is a 400-foot span which used to serve as a trolley bridge.



Mahan

STUDENTS who make up the Berkshire Music Center orchestra presented works of five composers in the Music Shed at opening of benefit program last night at Tanglewood. The orchestra, trained by Eleazar de Carvalho, assisted by Seymour Lipkin, was directed by five student conductors during the demonstrations given by all departments in the school.

Final Concert by Students At Shed Tomorrow at 3

TANGLEWOOD—The student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center will present its final weekly concert of the 1957 season on Saturday afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed.

The program features works by Beethoven, Prokofieff, Walton, Bartok, Haydn and De Falla. Four student conductors will share the podium with Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho and Seymour Lipkin, both of the Music Center faculty.

Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, will direct a performance of Beethoven's "Coriolanus" Overture. Jesse Levine of the Bronx, New York, is soloist in a performance of the first movement of Walton's Viola Concerto under the direction of Michael Senturia of Washington, D.C. Fernand Graton of Montreal, Canada, will conduct Prokofieff's "Lieutenant Kije" Suite, while Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, will lead the orchestra in a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. Following the intermission, Eleazar de Carvalho will direct a performance of Haydn's "Sinfonia Concertante," with soloists Verona Graf, violin; Deborah Reeder, cello; Peter Angelo, oboe, and Isabelle Clore, bassoon. Seymour Lipkin will direct the concluding work, De Falla's "Three-Cornered Hat."

On Sunday morning the sixth and final chamber music concert will feature works by Stravinsky, Prokofieff, Schoenberg and Brahms. Both concerts are open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

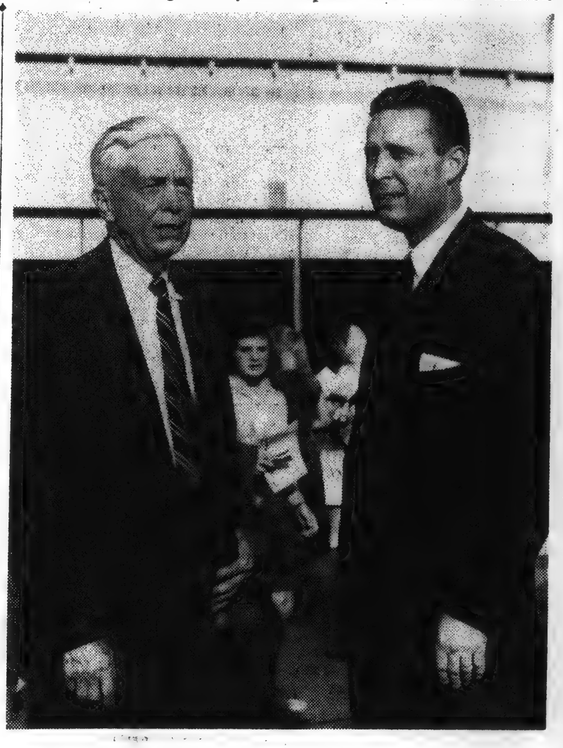
Theater Plans Myers Musical

WILLIAMSTOWN — A 25-minute musical, "Oh Happy Day," will be presented in the Adams Memorial Theater of Williams College next Wednesday and next Friday evenings as an addtional feature of the Williamstown Summer Theater production of "The Enchanted."

The musical, which will be given after the regular performance, is a one-woman show written and choreographed by Martha Myers, with music by Aaron Copland and Virgil Thomson.

The six characters in the story are all portrayed, in monologue, dance and song, by Mrs. Myers. The plot, in the true musical-comedy tradition, concerns a love affair. Decor for the production is by Will Steven Armstrong and lighting is by Tanya Komisarjevsky. Mrs. Myers designed the costumes.

Mrs. Myers is the wife of Gerald E. Myers, assistant professor of philosophy at Williams. She has worked in several of the theater's productions and teaches dance and stage movement for the theater's apprentice program.



Mahan

BEST WISHES are extended by George E. Judd, left, retired manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, to Gail W. Rector, assistant manager of BSO, who is leaving the BSO Sunday to take up his new duties as executive director of Universal Musical Society of the University of Michigan.

Mahan

FIRST APPEARANCE on the podium at a Tanglewood on Parade program was made last night by Dr. Charles Munch, who conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first part of the concert in the Music Shed. With members of the BSO, he is acknowledging an ovation from the huge crowd.

Mahan

THE FANFARE, which traditionally opens Tanglewood on Parade, was given last night by a group of brass players from the student orchestra under the baton of Roger Voisin, first trumpet in the Boston Symphony, in front of the Shed.

[258]

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

Annual "Tanglewood On Parade" Features Boston Pops, Og[illegible]ash

A record crowd of over 12,000 people attended the Berkshire Festival's special "Tanglewood on Parade," August 8. They were treated to an evening of varied entertainment which included simultaneous sessions of the Berkshire Music Center in operation, a concert by the Tanglewood Choir, picnic suppers and lawn parties, and concerts by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, with Ogden Nash reading his verses to Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals.

The evening started with a welcome to the crowd at 5:45, and then from 6-7 the Shed, Chamber Music Hall and Theatre-Concert Hall featured performances of the Boston Symphony, Tanglewood Composers and Opera, respectively. These were open performances and offered an opportunity for the public to see the different departments of the Music Center in operation.

Following this, the Tanglewood Choir gave a concert from the porch of the Main House. This was also the time for picnicking, with some of the crowd taking advantage of the lawn fronting the porch so as to enjoy the choral strains of Ave Maria and The Lord's Prayer with their dinner.

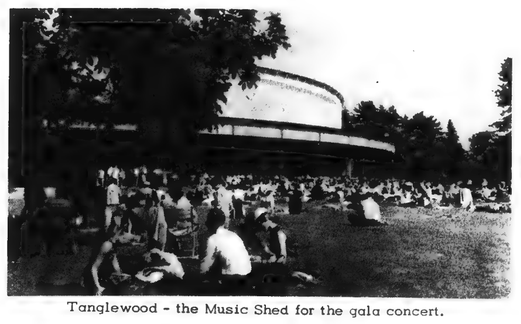
At 8:15, in the Music Shed, the main concert began with the Symphony, under the baton of Charles Munch, performing Schumann's Symphony No. 4, followed by Aaron Copland's Our Town Suite and Choral Square Dance and The Promise of Living from his opera, The Tender Land. The composer of these two contemporary works was on hand to conduct the orchestra in its performance of them.

After a brief intermission, Arthur Fiedler conducted his Boston Pops Orchestra in one of their typical programs which included the Overture to Rossini's The Barber of Seville, Tchaikovsky's stirring Marche Slave, The Carnival of the Animals (complete with Ogden Nash reading his clever verses), and selections from My Fair Lady, in typical "Pops" arrangements. The "Pops" were so well received by the huge audience that Fiedler was called on to do four encores. He showed the versatility of his amazing orchestra by doing a Calypso Melody in a way which would send an "islander" into a fit of ecstasy, a tender version of the romantic, Love Is a Many Splendored Thing, and closed with a rousing, exciting rendition of The Stars and Stripes Forever March that brought the crowd to its feet long before the last, pulsating notes had ended to conclude Tanglewood's Parade for 1957.

THE SANBORN STANDARD
Published by and for Sanborn Employees
Printed by Sanborn personnel

TANGLEWOOD

During my vacation I attended a weekend of concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. One of the program highlights was "Tanglewood on Parade" with over 12,000 lovers of music literally besieging the grounds from mid-afternoon to midnight to hear and to see the varied musical performances by the students of the Berkshire Music Center.



Tanglewood - the Music Shed for the gala concert.

The "Parade" starting in the Formal Gardens for opera in the open air with The Forest Scene from "Hansel and Gretel" -- continued on to The Theater-Concert Hall for opera scenes from "Carmen" and "La Boheme" -- and further on to the Main House Lawns to outdoor "Concerts of the Tanglewood Choir". At this point, although filled to overflowing with this glorious music, with the natural beauties of Tanglewood and the grandeur of the Berkshires in the background, one was swept along to The Music Shed for the Gala Concert -- a superb performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, followed by the Boston Pops Orchestra with its colorful Arthur Fiedler. A delightful feature of the "Pops" concert included "The Carnival of the Animals" with Ogden Nash presenting his own whimsical rhymed commentaries on the various animals. What a day of music, one of my most enjoyable at Tanglewood and one long to be remembered. Mary Fredman

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 9 - 1957

Record Audience of 12,493 At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Favored by ideal weather, the annual Tanglewood on Parade program attracted a record crowd of 12,493 persons to the Lenox concert grounds last night.

Benefit for Center

The program was a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school conducted by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival. The various departments of the school all put on musical demonstrations during the evening.

The highlight of the program was a two-part concert in the big shed. The first half featured the full Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copeland. Mr. Munch led in a performance of Schumann's Fourth Symphony, and Mr. Copland conducted two of his own works, excerpts from the score of "Our Town" and the opera, "The Tender Land." The Festival Chorus appeared in the opera selections.

Pops Takes Part

The second part of the program was devoted to music by the Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fieldler. Appearing with the orchestra was humorist Ogden Nash, who recited verses he had written for the performance of "The Carnival of Animals." Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz appeared as piano soloists in the Pops program.

The final weekend concert series of the festival gets underway this evening. Mr. Munch will conduct in a program which is to include Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Violin Concerto and also the Symphony No. 3 by Honegger. Isaac Stern will be the violin soloist.

Additional programs are scheduled Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Both will feature works by Beethoven.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1957

Opera, Picnics, Symphony, Tanglewood Parade Fare

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Tanglewood, Aug. 8 — Tanglewood opened its doors as widely as they would open today and a record crowd of 12,493 came in to see what the Berkshire Center and Festival were all about. We are told that the crowd was the largest in the history of the traditional "Tanglewood on Parade."

There was much to see and much to hear. One had a choice of opera scenes, a concert by members of the study group during which student choral conductors led works by such composers as Haydn, Purcell and Hindemith, or if fancy desired, there was a charming excerpt from "Hansel and Gretel" sung in the formal gardens under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

Preceded by a fanfare at 5:45, Dean Ralph Berkowitz greeted the visitors and offered them sumptuous fare which included a concert by the student orchestra; scenes from "Carmen" and "La Boheme," a concert of works by the composers who have been studying here this season and an unusually fine choral performance by the Tanglewood Choir. By that time it was time to eat and picnic parties are very much the thing when Tanglewood is on parade.

The spacious lawns were literally hidden by the picnickers who came in all manner of dress.

The weather was balmy, and the evening audience went home under an almost full moon. There were thousands of young people, including a large segment made up of campers from the neighboring summer camps. They were something to look at, for they went in for uniforms of various colors, all scanty, but materially adding to the landscape.

The evening concert was divided into two parts, in the first half, the Boston Symphony Orchestra held forth under the leadership of Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copland. Mr. Munch led a rugged and communicative performance of Schumann's Fourth Symphony. I have seldom heard the brasses play more handsomely. Mr. Copland conducted two of his most ingratiating compositions, excerpts from the musical score of "Our Town" and, with the assistance of the festival chorus, excerpts from his opera "The Tender Land" which was premiered here at Tanglewood. One could not hope for a more enthusiastic audience which seemed to inspire both conductors and instrumentalists.

Typical Pops Program

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra took over for the remainder of the program playing a typical Pops program but adding for this occasion the person of humorist Ogden Nash, who recited the delightful verses he had written for the performance of "The Carnival of Animals." These verses certainly add to the gaiety of this composition, but as I listened I wondered what Saint-Saens would have thought about them, and what he might be doing now.

Messrs Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz were the skilful pianists in this work. Other works included the overture to "The Barber of Seville;" "Marche Slav" and selections from "My Fair Lady." All were greeted rapturously by the audience, but this is usually the case when the Boston Pops Orchestra and its astute leader get under way. Of course there were encores, plenty of them.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" committee of which Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky is chairman and Miss Margo Miller, secretary, have every reason to be proud of this season's achievement. The list of door prizes was impressive, ranging from an orthophonic phonograph or electric refrigerator to old fashioned candies, perfume and assorted herbs. Everyone had a good time and that is what counted most.

[258]

LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

Annual "Tanglewood On Parade" Features Boston Pops, Ogden Nash

A record crowd of over 12,000 people attended the Berkshire Festival's special "Tanglewood on Parade," August 8. They were treated to an evening of varied entertainment which included simultaneous sessions of the Berkshire Music Center in operation, a concert by the Tanglewood Choir, picnic suppers and lawn parties, and concerts by the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops Orchestras, with Ogden Nash reading his verses to Saint-Saens Carnival of the Animals.

The evening started with a welcome to the crowd at 5:45, and then from 6-7 the Shed, Chamber Music Hall and Theatre-Concert Hall featured performances of the Boston Symphony, Tanglewood Composers and Opera, respectively. These were open performances and offered an opportunity for the public to see the different departments of the Music Center in operation.

Following this, the Tanglewood Choir [illegible] rt from the porch [illegible] n House. This was the time for picnicking, [illegible] of the crowd taking advantage of the lawn fronting the porch so as to enjoy the choral strains of Ave Maria and The Lord's Prayer with their dinner.

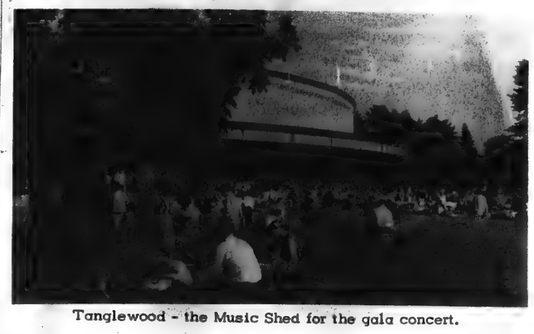
At 8:15, in the Music Shed, the main concert began with the Symphony, under the baton of Charles Munch, performing Schumann's Symphony No. 4 followed by Aaron Copland's Our Town Suite and Choral Square Dance and The Promise of Living from his opera, The Tender Land. The composer of these two contemporary works was on hand to conduct the orchestra in its performance of them.

After a brief intermission, Arthur Fiedler conducted his Boston Pops Orchestra in one of their typical programs which included the Overture to Rossini's The Barber of Seville, Tchaikovsky's stirring Marche Slave, The Carnival of the Animals (complete with Ogden Nash reading his clever verses), and selections from My Fair Lady, in typical "Pops" arrangements. The "Pops" were so well received by the huge audience that Fiedler was called on to do four encores. He showed the versatility of his amazing orchestra by doing a Calypso Melody in a way which would send an "islander" into a fit of ecstasy, a tender version of the romantic, Love Is a Many Splendored Thing, and closed with a rousing, exciting rendition of The Stars and Stripes Forever March that brought the crowd to its feet long before the last, pulsating notes had ended to conclude Tanglewood's Parade for 1957.

THE SANBORN STANDARD
Published by and for Sanborn Employees
Printed by Sanborn personnel

TANGLEWOOD

During my vacation I attended a weekend of concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. One of the program highlights was "Tanglewood on Parade" with over 12,000 lovers of music literally besieging the grounds from mid-afternoon to midnight to hear and to see the varied musical performances by the students of the Berkshire Music Center.



Tanglewood - the Music Shed for the gala concert.

The "Parade" starting in the Formal Gardens for opera in the open air with The Forest Scene from "Hansel and Gretel" -- continued on to The Theater-Concert Hall for opera scenes from "Carmen" and "La Boheme" -- and further on to the Main House Lawns to outdoor "Concerts of the Tanglewood Choir". At this point, although filled to overflowing with this glorious music, with the natural beauties of Tanglewood and the grandeur of the Berkshires in the background, one was swept along to The Music Shed for the Gala Concert -- a superb performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, followed by the Boston Pops Orchestra with its colorful Arthur Fiedler. A delightful feature of the "Pops" concert included "The Carnival of the Animals" with Ogden Nash presenting his own whimsical rhymed commentaries on the various animals. What a day of music, one of my most enjoyable at Tanglewood and one long to be remembered. Mary Fredman

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 9 - 1957

Record Audience of 12,493 At 'Tanglewood On Parade'

Favored by ideal weather, the annual Tanglewood on Parade program attracted a record crowd of 12,493 persons to the Lenox concert grounds last night.

Benefit for Center

The program was a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the summer music school conducted by the Boston Symphony in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival. The various departments of the school all put on musical demonstrations during the evening.

The highlight of the program was a two-part concert in the big shed. The first half featured the full Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copeland. Mr. Munch led in a performance of Schumann's Fourth Symphony, and Mr. Copland conducted two of his own works, excerpts from the score of "Our Town" and the opera, "The Tender Land." The Festival Chorus appeared in the opera selections.

Pops Takes Part

The second part of the program was devoted to music by the Boston Pops Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Fiedler. Appearing with the orchestra was humorist Ogden Nash, who recited verses he had written for the performance of "The Carnival of Animals." Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz appeared as piano soloists in the Pops program.

The final weekend concert series of the festival gets underway this evening. Mr. Munch will conduct in a program which is to include Beethoven's Leonore Overture No. 3 and Violin Concerto and also the Symphony No. 3 by Honegger. Isaac Stern will be the violin soloist.

Additional programs are scheduled Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Both will feature works by Beethoven.

SPRINGFIELD UNION, SPRINGFIELD, MASS., FRIDAY, AUGUST 9, 1957

Opera, Picnics, Symphony, Tanglewood Parade Fare

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Tanglewood, Aug. 8 — Tanglewood opened its doors as widely as they would [illegible] today and a record crowd of 12,493 came in to see what Berkshire Center and Festival were all about. We are told that the crowd was the largest in the history of the traditional Tanglewood on Parade."

There was much to see and much to hear. One had a choice of opera scenes, a concert by members of the study group during which student choral conductors led works by such [illegible] as Haydn, Purcell and Hindemith, or, if fancy desired, there was a charming excerpt from "Hansel and Gretel" sung in the formal gardens under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

Preceded by a fanfare at 5:45, Dean Ralph Berkowitz greeted the visitors and offered them sumptuous fare which included a concert by the student orchestra; scenes from "Carmen" and "La Boheme," a concert of works by the composers who have been studying here this season and an unusually fine choral performance by the Tanglewood Choir. By that time it was time to eat and picnic parties are very much the thing when Tanglewood is on parade.

The spacious lawns were literally hidden by the picnickers who came in all manner of dress.

The weather was balmy, and the evening audience went home under an almost full moon. There were thousands of young people, including a large segment made up of campers from the neighboring summer camps. They were something to look at, for they went in for uniforms of various colors, all scanty, but materially adding to the landscape.

The evening concert was divided into two parts; in the first half the Boston Symphony Orchestra held forth under the leadership of Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copland. Mr. Munch led a rugged and communicative performance of Schumann's Fourth Symphony. I have seldom heard the brasses play more handsomely. Mr. Copland conducted two of his most ingratiating compositions, excerpts from the musical score of "Our Town" and, with the assistance of the festival chorus, excerpts from his opera "The Tender Land" which was premiered here at Tanglewood. One could not hope for a more enthusiastic audience which seemed to inspire both conduc[illegible]

The Pops Program

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra took over for the remainder of the program playing a typical Pops program but adding for this occasion the person of humorist Ogden Nash, who recited the delightful verses he had written for the performance of "The Carnival of Animals." These verses certainly add to the gaiety of this composition, but as I listened I wondered what Saint-Saens would have thought about them, and what he might be doing now.

Messrs Seymour Lipkin and Ralph Berkowitz were the skilful pianists in this work. Other works included the overture to "The Barber of Seville;" "Marche Slav" and selections from "My Fair Lady." All were greeted rapturously by the audience, but this is usually the case when the Boston Pops Orchestra and its [illegible] under way. Of course there were encores, plenty of them.

The "Tanglewood on Parade" committee of which Mrs. Serge Koussevitsky is chairman and Miss Margo Miller, secretary, have every reason to be proud of this season's achievement. The list of door prizes was impressive, ranging from an orthophonic phonograph or electric refrigerator to old fashioned candies, perfume and assorted herbs. Everyone had a good time and that is what counted most.

BLANK PAGE

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

[200]

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, August 9th
By J. W. H.

The gentlemen of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were still in the [illegible] of their Tanglewood on Parade rendition of Stars and Stripes Forever when they launched into the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 on Friday. It was a big number—spirited, vital and loud. The off platform trumpet calls heralded a genuine escape from impending doom. No doubt, this was exactly the feeling Beethoven was striving to create in his various revisions of this number.

Honegger's Third Symphony was the second offering of the evening and Charles Munch led the orchestra through a dramatic reading of this quasi-religious score. Honegger gave this composition the title Symphony "Liturgique" and followed a program indicated by the sub-titles of each movement: Dies Irae, De profundis clamavi, and Dona nobis pacem. Neither the profundity of the titles nor the disonances of the harmonies, nor the complications of orchestration save the work from triteness.

Beethoven's D Major Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist was the outstanding work of the evening. The complete rapport between orchestra, conductor and soloist in this work resulted in a sympathetic, tender and [illegible] performance. If Mr. Stern and the Boston Symphony [illegible] often, as apparently they [illegible], it would be nice to [illegible].

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

SPRINGFIELD UNION,

TANGLEWOOD PRESENTATION SHEER MAGIC

Orchestra in Brilliant Form, Stern's Performance Inspired

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 9—The final week end of the Berkshire Festival is upon us and tonight 8140 people were on hand to hear a splendid performance of Beethoven's only violin concerto played by Issac Stern, a vigorous and well integrated performance of the "Leonora" overture by Beethoven, and an exciting and tremendous performance of Honegger's Third Symphony which he titled "Liturgique."

Final Concert Tomorrow

The concerts this week end will feature the music of Beethoven and the festival will conclude Sunday afternoon with a performance of his Ninth Symphony, the "Chorale" symphony. Saturday night the German conductor Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance and will undoubtedly duplicate his success of a week ago.

Honegger's symphony is a wild, uninhibited work and, by the composer's own admission, a reflection of the immediate postwar period. It is frankly a direct reaction against the fashion of so-called absolute music and is in the form of a triptych. Each of the three sections undertakes to express an idea. The first movement is entitled "Dies Irau," the second "De Profundis Clamari," and the third "Dona Nobis Pacem."

This is a tragic symphony, with massive harmonies, sharp dissonances and rhythms which drive and clash. All this is noted immediately in the first movement. The second movement promises some relief and there are in it lovely, serene passages during which the flute is allowed to sing its poignant little song.

The unrest returns and burns with scorching flame until it dies out and repose again sets in. The final movement is a march, heavy and inexorable in its beat.

Brilliant Form

Mr. Munch gave everything he had in the communication of this symphony and the orchestra was in brilliant form, playing with wonderfully vital tone and giving full measure of its virtuosity.

In like manner the "Leonora" No. 3 was provided a strong and effective reading. There was a magnificent jubilation in the song of freedom and Mrs. Munch was sensitive to all the implications in the score.

Mr. Stern has played the Tschaikowsky and Brahms violin concertos. Tonight he played the Beethoven concerto. It was an inspired performance during which conductor, orchestra and soloist rose to heights which can only be attained through sheer inspiration.

I have never witnessed a more attentive audience. It held onto every note and from the hundreds of people on the moonlight drenched lawn, not a sound was to be heard. It was sheer magic, something that occurs too seldom.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

AUG 10 1957

More than 8,000 Enjoy Tanglewood And Isaac Stern

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—Something in the nature of a musical "grand slam" was achieved this season at Tanglewood by Isaac Stern, who played three of the major violin concerti with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Last night Mr. Stern turned his attention to the Beethoven Concerto with results that were undoubtedly pleasing to his legion of fans. However, with all due deference to his virtuosic gifts, the violinist seldom gave the impression that his heart and soul were in the performance.

MR. STERN handled the first movement cadenza with the sovereign ease of a great technician and his octave work and double-stopping in the zestful finale were something to take your breath away. But there is certainly more than this to the Beethoven.

What this performance lacked was a warmth and nobility to transfigure the notes into an emotional experience; what it needed was more attention to the lyrical contours. Perhaps Mr. Stern's head rules his heart, but Beethoven more than once admitted that he wrote music "from the heart to the heart."

Despite a momentary fluff in the finale, the orchestra under Charles Munch provided exemplary accompaniment, one that was Beethovenate to the core.

THIS was also true in the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which Richard Wagner called a music-drama in itself. Munch allowed the music to unfold with disarming ease and built his climaxes in imposing sonorities, marred occasionally by too heavy an accent on the brass.

Under the present regime Honegger has come into his own and last night we were privileged to hear his Third ("Liturgique") Symphony, which is the most sharply dissonant of his works in this form.

The rhythms are insistent, the harmonic idiom is [illegible] rigorous, and the tension is unending, so much so that the listener is unprepared for the beatific ending. There are many things here to remind us of the composer's "King David."

Whatever the critical verdict, the Bostonians gave it a handsome performance and the audience of more than 8,000 was considerably more than polite in its enthusiasm.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 10 1957

8,140 Attend Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic.

LENOX — Playing of the highest order by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, marked the opening of the Beethoven series with which this Berkshire Music Festival will close at Tanglewood. Last night's audience numbered 8,140.

The program: Beethoven's "Leonore Overture" No. 3, Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," and the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

It is likely that the Honegger symphony will go down on record as the most significant piece of contemporary music played at this festival. Previously played in Europe by the Boston Symphony, this was its first Tanglewood performance.

Activates Excitement

It activates excitement in the extreme. In three movements, it explores philosophical aspects of man. There is nothing religious about the musical treatment, nor is it subject to debate on that score, in view of its sacred implications.

The first movement is entitled "Dies Irae" which, to one listener at least, is misleading. If it contains the standard "Day of Wrath" theme, it must be secreted somewhere in its elaborate complexities. The music is highly ornate. Everyone is given a great deal to do. Tiny, embellished phrases burst out in anger, the brasses warn growlingly, strings state their causes daringly, snare drum intrudes — there's a general melange of tonal splashes.

War and Revolution

This is what Honegger meant to represent, the [illegible] revolution, by which [illegible] who preside over destinies have gratified their people.

The second movement, "De Profundis Clamati," represents the purity and trust to be found in man, which reaches out toward God. The melodies are quite beautiful. The harmonies are modern but friendly to the ear. The sounds themselves are craftily construed—cavernous tones in the deep reaches of the basses, tuba, and piano — assertive trombones and full drama from the entire string section.

Opening of the third movement, "Dona Nobis Pacem," is reminiscent of the technique used by Ravel in "La Valse." It generates an irresistible drama as it rises, layer by layer, from one sphere of foreboding to the next, until it reaches a smash-up.

The bucolic section with which it closes is a splendid thing—utterly at peace and struck in pastel tonal colors.

Brief Meditation

This describes, acording to Honegger, the inevitable rise of the world's stupidity, and a brief meditation of what life could be: calm, love, joy, a song of birds, of nature.

Stern made his third Tanglewood appearance in as many weeks, playing the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven concertos. Apart from the rather appaling requirements of memory involved, Stern impressed more with the innate musicianship he demonstrated in all three demanding works.

In the Beethoven, he got to the very core of the music. His Tchaikovsky had been brilliant—Brahms, profound—but the Beethoven was pure music, realized with the help of a super accompaniment by Munch and the orchestra.

Slightly Athletic

It was not impaccable playing from the technical standpoint, but what discrepancies existed were trivia. The first movement cadenza tended to be slightly athletic in approach, but this did little injury to the positiveness of phrase and clear vision of its structure.

Stern's Beethoven was musicianly, sympathetic in tone, virile, and interpretively enlightened.

Slight imperfections of beat were heard in the opening sequences of the "Leonore" overture. The mood was completely serene and the tempo leisurely. Nuances were richly produced with delicate repartee between strings and woodwinds.

Drive With Purpose

An exuberance permeated the large-volume phrases and there was drive with purpose toward climazes. Currents of unrest, creating the overture's main impression, were regulated.

The offstage trumpet fanfares by Roger Voisin were brilliantly clear, although the woodwind responses were short of accuracy. The coda was breathtaking. Runs at breakneck speed in strings were joined with split second timing—a dazzling effect.

Tonight's Concert

Tonight, the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Carl Schuricht. The program: Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," opus 10; Schubert's "unfinished" symphony, and Beethoven's Third, or "Eroica" Symphony.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 10 1957

Final Tanglewood Series Under Way; 8,140 at Concert

The final weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, got underway last night before a throng of 8,140 persons as Charles Munch, music director, conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert featuring the music of Beethoven and Honegger.

Last night's concert included the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist; Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgical") by the contemporary French composer Arthur Honegger.

Mr. Stern in previous concerts this summer had played the Brahms and Tschaikovsky violin concertos.

Mr. Honegger's Symphony has three movements, "Dies Irau," "De Profundis Clamari" and "Dona Nobis Pacem."

This evening's concert with Carl Schuricht, guest conductor, will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, former composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert tomorrow afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" with trumpet solo by Roger Voisin and English horn solo by Louis Speyer. The 20th Berkshire Festival season will close as last year with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony ("The Chorale"). The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

[200]

LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

Grace Notes

TANGLEWOOD
Friday, August 9th
By J. W. H.

The gentlemen of the Boston Symphony are still in the Tanglewood clambake tradition of Stars and Stripes Forever when they launched into the "Leonore" Overture No. 3 on Friday. It was a big number—spirited, vital and loud. The off platform trumpet calls heralded a genuine escape from impending doom. No doubt, this was exactly the feeling Beethoven was striving to create in the various revisions of this number.

Honegger's Third Symphony was the second offering of the evening and Charles Munch led the orchestra through a dramatic reading of this quasi-religious score. Honegger gave this composition the title Symphony "Liturgique" and followed a program indicated by the sub-titles of each movement: Dies Irae, De profundis clamavi, and Dona nobis pacem. Neither the profundity of the titles nor the dissonances of the harmonies, nor the complications of orchestration save the work from triteness.

Beethoven's D Major Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist was the outstanding work of the evening. The complete rapport between orchestra, conductor and soloist in this work resulted in a sympathetic, tender and [illegible] performance. If Mr. [illegible] Boston Symphon[illegible]ven, as appar[illegible] would be nice to [illegible]

SPRINGFIELD UNION,

TANGLEWOOD PRESENTATION SHEER MAGIC

Orchestra in Brilliant Form, Stern's Performance Inspired

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 9—The final week end of the Berkshire Festival is upon us and tonight 8140 people were on hand to hear a splendid performance of Beethoven's only violin concerto played by Isaac Stern, a vigorous and well integrated performance of the "Leonora" overture by Beethoven, and an exciting and tremendous performance of Honegger's Third Symphony which he titled "Liturgique."

Final Concert Tomorrow

The concerts this week end will feature the music of Beethoven and the festival will conclude Sunday afternoon with a performance of his Ninth Symphony, the "Chorale" symphony. Saturday night the German conductor Carl Schuricht will make his second appearance and will undoubtedly duplicate his success of a week ago.

Honegger's symphony is a wild, uninhibited work and, by the composer's own admission, a reflection of the immediate postwar period. It is frankly a direct reaction against the fashion of so-called absolute music and is in the form of a triptyoh. Each of the three sections undertakes to express an idea. The first movement is entitled "Dies Irau," the second "De Profundis Clamari," and the third "Dona Nobis Pacem."

This is a tragic symphony, with massive harmonies, sharp dissonances and rhythms which drive and clash. All this is noted immediately in the first movement. The second movement promises some relief and there are in it lovely, serene passages during which the flute is allowed to sing its poignant little song.

The unrest returns and burns with scorching flame until it dies out and repose again sets in. The final movement is a march, heavy and inexorable in its beat.

Brilliant Form

Mr. Munch gave everything he had in the communication of this symphony and the orchestra was in brilliant form, playing with wonderfully vital tone and giving full measure of its virtuosity.

In like manner the "Leonora" No. 3 was provided a strong and effective reading. There was a magnificent jubilation in the song of freedom and Mrs. Munch was sensitive to all the implications in the score.

Mr. Stern has played the Tschaikowsky and Brahms violin concertos. Tonight he played the Beethoven concerto. It was an inspired performance during which conductor, orchestra and soloist rose to heights which can only be attained through sheer inspiration.

I have never witnessed a more attentive audience. It held onto every note and from the hundreds of people on the moonlight drenched lawn, not a sound was to be heard. It was sheer magic, something that occurs too seldom.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200

Times (c)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012

AUG 10 1957

More than 8,000 Enjoy Tanglewood And Isaac Stern

By GEORGE W. STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—Something in the nature of a musical "grand slam" was achieved this season at Tanglewood by Isaac Stern, who played one of the major violin concerti with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Last night Mr. Stern turned his attention to the Beethoven Concerto with results that were undoubtedly pleasing to his legion of fans. However, with all due deference to his virtuosic gifts, the violinist seldom gave the impression that his heart and soul were in the performance.

MR. STERN handled the first movement cadenza with the sovereign ease of a great technician and his octave work and double-stopping in the zestful finale were something to take your breath away. But there is certainly more than this to the Beethoven.

What this performance lacked was a warmth and nobility to transfigure the notes into an emotional experience; what it needed was more attention to the lyrical contours. Perhaps Mr. Stern's head rules his heart, but Beethoven more than once admitted that he wrote music "from the heart to the heart."

Despite a momentary fluff in the finale, the orchestra under Charles Munch provided exemplary accompaniment, one that was Beethovenate to the core.

THIS was also true in the Leonore No. 3 Overture, which Richard Wagner called a music-drama in itself. Munch allowed the music to unfold with disarming ease and built his climaxes in [illegible] sonorities, marred only by too heavy an accent on the brass.

Under the present regime Honegger has come into his own and last night we were privileged to hear his Third ("Liturgique") Symphony, which is the most starkly dissonant of his works in this form.

The rhythms are insistent, the harmonic idiom is acrimonious, and the tension is unending, so much so that the listener is unprepared for the beatific ending. There are many things here to remind us of the composer's "King David."

Whatever the critical verdict, the Bostonians gave it a handsome performance and the audience of more than 8,000 was considerably more than polite in its enthusiasm.

WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 10 [illegible]

8,140 Attend Tanglewood Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic.

LENOX — Playing of the highest order by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, marked the opening of the Beethoven series with which this Berkshire Music Festival will close at Tanglewood. Last night's audience numbered 8,140.

The program: Beethoven's "Leonore Overture" No. 3, Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," and the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist.

It is likely that the Honegger symphony will go down on record as the most significant piece of contemporary music played at this festival. Previously played in Europe by the Boston Symphony, this was its first Tanglewood performance.

Activates Excitement

It activates excitement in the extreme. In three movements, it explores philosophical aspects of man. There is nothing religious about the musical treatment, nor is it subject to debate on that score, in view of its sacred implications.

The first movement is entitled "Dies Irae" which, to one listener at least, is misleading. If it contains the standard "Day of Wrath" theme, it must be secreted somewhere in its elaborate complexities. The music is highly ornate. Everyone is given a great deal to do. Tiny, embellished phrases burst out in anger, the brasses warn growlingly, strings state their causes daringly, snare drum intrudes — there's a general melange of tonal splashes.

War and Revolution

This is what [illegible] meant to represent revolution, by [illegible] who preside over [illegible] have gratified their [illegible]

The second movement, Profundis Clamavi, presents the purity and [illegible] be found in man. [illegible] reaches out toward God. [illegible] melodies are quite beautiful. The harmonies are modern but friendly to the ear. The sounds themselves are craftily construed—cavernous tones in the deep reaches of the bass, tuba, and piano — assertive trombones and full drama from the entire string section.

Opening of the third movement, "Dona Nobis Pacem," is reminiscent of the technique used by Ravel in "La Valse." It generates an irresistible drama as it rises, layer by layer, from one sphere of foreboding to the next, until it reaches a smash-up.

The bucolic section with which it closes is a splendid thing—utterly at peace and struck in pastel tonal colors.

Brief Meditation

This describes, according to Honegger, the inevitable rise of the world's stupidity, and a brief meditation of what it could be: calm, love, joy, song of birds, of nature.

Stern made his third Tanglewood appearance in as many weeks, playing the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven concertos. Apart from the rather appaling requirements of memory involved, Stern impressed more with the innate musicianship he demonstrated in all three demanding works.

In the Beethoven, he got to the very core of the music. Tchaikowsky had been brilliant—Brahms, profound—but the Beethoven was pure music, realized with the help of a super accompaniment by Munch and the orchestra.

Slightly Athletic

It was not impeccable playing from the technical standpoint, but what discrepancies existed were trivia. The first movement cadenza tended to be slightly athletic in approach, but this did little injury to the positiveness of phrase and clear vision of its structure.

Stern's Beethoven was musicianly, sympathetic in tone, virile, and interpretively enlightened.

Slight imperfections of beat were heard in the opening sequences of the "Leonore" overture. The mood was completely serene and the tempo leisurely. Nuances were richly produced with delicate repartee between strings and woodwinds.

Drive With Purpose

An exuberance permeated the large-volume phrases and there was drive with purpose toward climaxes. Currents of unrest, creating the overture's main impression, were regulated.

The offstage trumpet fanfares by Roger Voisin were brilliantly clear, although the woodwind responses were short of accuracy. The coda was breathtaking. Runs at breakneck speed in strings were joined with split second timing—a dazzling effect.

Tonight's Concert

Tonight, the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Carl Schuricht. The program: Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," opus 10; Schubert's "unfinished" symphony, and Beethoven's Third, or "Eroica" symphony.

Transcript (c)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541

AUG 10 1957

Final Tanglewood Series Under Way; 8,140 at Concert

The final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, got underway last night [illegible] throng of 8,140 persons as Charles Munch, music director, conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a concert featuring the music of Beethoven and Honegger.

Last night's concert included the Beethoven Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist; Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and the Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgical") by the contemporary French composer Arthur Honegger.

Mr. Stern in previous concerts this summer had played the Brahms and Tschaikovsky violin concertos.

Mr. Honegger's Symphony has three movements, "Dies Irau," "De Profundis Clamavi" and "Dona Nobis Pacem."

This evening's concert with Carl Schuricht, guest conductor, will present the Konzertante Musik of Boris Blacher, former composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").

The final concert tomorrow afternoon conducted by Dr. Munch will open with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" with trumpet solo by Roger Voisin and English horn solo by Louis Speyer. The 20th Berkshire Festival season will close as it did last year with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony ("The Chorale"). The soloists are Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, alto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 S. 528,253
AUG 11 1957

MUSIC

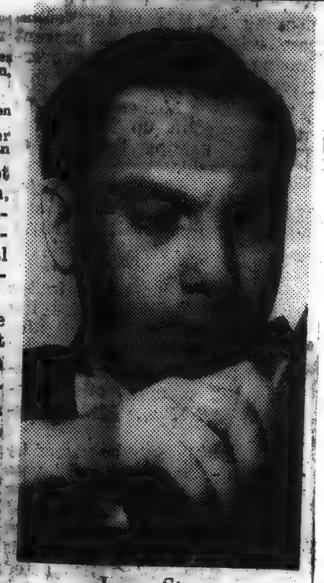
Berkshire Festival

By PAUL HENRY LANG

LENOX, Mass.

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor; soloist, Isaac Stern, violinist.

The program:
Leonore Overture No. 3.....Beethoven
Symphony No. 3 ("Liturgique").....Honegger
Violin Concerto.....Beethoven



Isaac Stern

There are persons who do not particularly care for Beethoven, yet somehow the old archsymphonist still makes it very perilous for any other orchestral composer to keep too close company with him.

The final week end of the Tanglewood festival began last night with a concert in which Honegger's "Symphonie Liturgique" was sandwiched between the third "Leonore" overture and the Violin Concerto.

Well, Honegger and Beethoven did not prove to be enemies, just neighbors, which can be bad enough.

Honegger was a fine composer whose music could rise well above the pop, fizzle and crackle of post-impressionisms, but this particular symphony, though very serious, is not among his best. The thematic material of the first movement is a bit commonplace, which in itself would not matter if its symphonic elaboration had raised it to a higher plane—a process which is the essence of the symphony. But here Honegger, too, indulges in a bit of fizzle and crackle, as he does in the last movement. The middle movement is, however, a deeply felt piece, finely wrought and fervent.

The orchestra is handled as a homogeneous body, the gong, snare drum, and all the other strong spices being used with discretion, and the movement works up to a climax which is perhaps not as strident in the concert hall—this music used favors the brasses.

It is rather interesting to observe that both this movement and the coda of the last are really romantic pieces, soothing and easy on the ear. Why, even the timpani sounded lovely with its gentle punctuation, and how glorious its tune.

It is a little unfortunate that this symphony which meditates on the ills of the world had to be prefaced by that triumphant affirmation of life that is the third "Leonore" overture, and then pitted against that magnificent threnody that is the slow movement of the Concerto. But Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony are faithful to their trust and play contemporary works at almost every concert; they just have to take their chances.

The Concerto was a feast for the ear. Mr. Stern is a master fiddler if there ever was one. What makes him a true master is not his impeccable technique (others have that, too), but his taste, musicianship and glorious violin tone. There is not a trace of "schmalz" in that tone; it is pure and wonderfully rounded. Nor does he ever force it or do any tricks with it.

There were a few spots that were a bit romanticized; both main entrances in the first movement and just before the cadenza.

Mr. Munch joined the soloist in a few rallentandi, but otherwise the performance was extraordinarily artistic.

Where the sentimental approach is usually evident, in the second movement, we were treated to pure song and wondrously clear articulation.

The heaven-storming Overture went well—how the Boston strings can deliver those famous runs that precede the recapitulation!

The orchestra was in excellent form and Mr. Munch conducted with precision and vigor. His conception of these works is sound and firm.

I once more marveled at the acoustics of Tanglewood. Every once in a while something gets lost (the little colloquy between flute and bassoon in the overture); on the other hand, I have seldom heard the horns sound more glorious than at the end of "Leonora." I could almost have sworn that they had been doubled. A fine concert it was, by an incomparable orchestra, a sturdy conductor, and a supreme violinist.

All Worth Hearing

Naturally not all of this music was of equal merit, although everything on the program was worthy of hearing with close attention. The seldom-heard Stravinsky songs, four miniatures for soprano and eight instruments, are exquisitely tooled, delicious examples of whimsy. Roussel's cool, lovely Serenade and the magnificently organized timbres of Varese made an odd but effective contrast.

Kohn's Concert Music was Stravinsky-derived but had considerable force. Denny's rather academic quartet, though idiomatically written, sounded too neutral, and without enough profile to sustain interest completely.

The Fromm Fellowship Players, a hand-picked group of musicians from all over the country, make up a young, alert and well-coordinated group that apparently can read anything and play it with style. This group has been working with the student composers at the Berkshire Music Center this year.

With all due respect to the great music played in the Shed by a great orchestra, over the week-ends, it well might be that the really important contribution of the Tanglewood summer is the modern music being heard here, the composers being developed and the intellectual ferment that is going on behind the scenes.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 557,244 S. 1,189,293
AUG 10 1957

HONEGGER WORK PLAYED AT LENOX

Munch Directs 3d Symphony —Stern Soloist in Violin Concerto by Beethoven

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9—The final week-end of concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood began with a program conducted by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

A fair-sized audience of 8,140 attended to hear Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as soloist, Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3 and Honegger's Third Symphony, the "Liturgique."

Honegger's symphony represents one of the Berkshire Music Festival's relatively uncommon excursions outside the standard repertory. Like so much of this composer's music, the symphony is an angry-sounding work, with sonority, with angry yelps from the brass and winds and with a stern, almost ascetic, melodic line. The impact, even with subdued slow movement, is breathless—one of pent-up emotion and passion letting loose.

And yet, with all the sincerity of the writing, and with all of its compositional and orchestral skill, the end effect is just a little bit stagey, with rhetoric substituted for genuine emotion.

Honegger, one comes away feeling, was a powerful composer. But was he a compassionate one? Honegger was a close friend of Mr. Munch, and the conductor led the score not only as one who has had close personal acquaintance with it, but also as one who had identified himself with its spirit through association with its creator.

The orchestra responded nobly, and only a few lapses in intonation from several solo players prevented the performance from being memorable.

Trumpeter Takes a Bow

In the familiar "Leonore No. 3," Mr. Munch was so pleased with the off-stage work of Roger Voisin, trumpeter, that he led him forth for a bow at the end of the work.

Mr. Stern, in the concerto, was in excellent form. His conception has broadened, and there were several details one had not previously noticed. Among those details was his statement of the theme directly after the first-movement cadenza, where Mr. Stern played it simply, with hardly any vibrato or dynamic inflection, achieving a disembodied effect that was as thrilling as it was musically valid.

The slow movement sang with lyric sweetness, and the finale went with a virtuose snap. Very few living violinists have Mr. Stern's phenomenal control and his pitch, especially a marvel of unfailing purity.

The Beethoven scores are, of course, old stories. Tomorrow night there will be more Beethoven and Schubert's "Unfinished." Sunday afternoon will see Beethoven's Ninth.

But the Berkshire Festival is not all Beethoven. To hear music of an entirely modern outlook—and there is plenty around here—one must attend the week-day chamber music recitals. There was one this afternoon, presented by the Fromm Fellowship Players and other musicians recruited from the student body. They played a string quartet by William Denny, Stravinsky's "Pribautki," Roussel's Serenade, Varese's "Octandre" and Karl Kohn's Concert Music for Twelve Winds.

Music Review

Beethoven at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST of the three concerts in the final weekend of the Berkshire Festival was played at Tanglewood last night by the Boston Symphony orchestra conducted by Charles Munch.

A highly successful pattern was established this season in constructing the programs. Each week the three concerts were devoted to the works of one great master with a modern work inserted for contrast and variety. This week it is Beethoven. Munch started his program with the "Leonore" No. 3 overture and ended with the violin concerto, with Isaac Stern as soloist. Honegger's Symphony No. 3, the "Liturgique," was the contemporary exhibit.

* * *

HONEGGER'S symphony is a product of the days immediately following the close of the last war in which the strife-torn world had discouraged a great many men, appalled at the destruction and fearful of the ability of human beings to live together in peace and amity. It is in this frame of mind that Honegger attempted to set down in music his innermost thoughts. He gives the three movements liturgical subtitles not, by any means, because he is writing religious music but because, in his soul-searching, this is the area where he comes to fulfillment of his aspirations.

It is intense and lugubrious writing, expressing his extremely personal reactions, and he has certainly succeeded in coveying the mood and spirit. The writing is heavy and thick — relentlessly so. Even the central slower movement is immersed in the continuing character, but the cumulative effect is a cleansing and purifying avowal which culminates, in the coda of the final movement, in a sublimely quiet, primitively simple, declaration of penitent faith. This symphony is dedicated to Munch and it was apparent that its spirit had penetrated him personally. He drained the resources of the orchestra, thereby at times neglecting tonal balance, but no one could fail to be impressed by the sincerity of both the music and the performance.

* * *

WITH THE Beethoven concerto, Stern achieved in this one festival the fondest hope of every violinist: To play the three greatest concerti for the instrument with orchestra. Anyone so fortunate as to hear all three will retain indelible memories of performances unsurpassable in loftiness. One does not discuss Stern's violinistic resources any more; they are so superabundant, and he has reduced everything to a simplicity which raises everything he plays, and himself, at the same time, to the most exalted levels attainable in musical expression. He plays with a sublime mixture of head and heart. Munch gave him extremely sensitive collaboration and the orchestra allowed him to spin his tone as thin as precious metal and still retain its inspired message.

* * *

NOT ALL orchestras could answer Munch's demands in the "Lenore" overture in which he presses for speed and volume whenever the slightest opportunity offers itself. His gesture of bringing Roger Voisin to the front of the stage for recognition of his off-stage trumpet announcements was well-enough deserved even if partly in jest, but reveals where the conductor's emphasis lies. It seems that he might better have asked the strings to rise for their tonal and technical accomplishments, or, better yet, have so directed his efforts that this would have been the natural consequence.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847
AUG 10 1957

Stern a Credit To Beethoven At Tanglewood

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 10.—Isaac Stern dominated the Beethoven portion of the Boston Symphony concert in the Music Shed last night. In a beautiful performance of the Violin Concerto, he did his finest playing here this Summer and some of his best ever.

The concert also included a performance of Honegger's Third Symphony, something the 8,140 people present should not forget for some time.

A decade has passed since the Honegger received its New York premiere. Then its impact had immediate meaning, for the work represented a post-war reflection. The impact remains quite as powerful today, but the meaning has shifted. The Honegger now represents one man's thoughts and feeling in the light of his individual expression of them.

That expression has value for the intensity with which it is set forth. The key to the symphony lies in the titles of the movements—"Dies Irau," "De Profundis Clamavi," and "Dona Nobis Pacem." They convey literally the content of the score. Honegger minces no thoughts. He describes the catastrophic aspect of man's bankruptcy more vividly than the beatific vision of what man might be.

No other composer has quite expressed himself so strongly and so personally at the same time. The score is extraordinarily worked out both technically and philosophically. Perhaps its complexity is too great, but then it reflects the period to which it belongs. In that complexity Honegger has written with uncanny skill, achieved his aim, and left something emotionally compelling.

Munch and the orchestra gave the symphony a monumental performance. Personal association contributed a great deal, for the work is dedicated to Munch, was first performed by him, and means much to him. This time the catastrophic elements received more attention than the tragic, but the resolution pronounced its benediction profoundly.

The program opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" overture somewhat erratically played. It ended with the concerto spun out by Stern with a tonal finesse that was delectable even though with a shade too much romanticism.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 185,575
AUG 12 1957

[202]

Finale of Berkshire Music Festival—

Beethoven Works Featured By Munch and Carl Schuricht

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Remarkably fine performances of interesting and well-balanced programs marked the closing weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, its summer home.

The unpredictable public, which had not established any new attendance records for some of this season's Shed concerts, suddenly decided that this last opportunity to hear the 1957 Berkshire Festival could not be missed. Starting with a 14,000 attendance for "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday, the Friday and Saturday concerts found capacity audiences in the Shed and many thousands of listeners on the lawns.

Beethoven was the featured composer for the weekend, a fact that may have had something to do with the improved attendance. Charles Munch opened the Friday program with a vibrant and eloquent projection of the "Leonore" Overture No. 3, in which the orchestra played with a fine tone both as a whole and in the individual choirs. With characteristic generosity the conductor shared the applause with Roger Voisin, who had played the famous off-stage trumpet calls.

For contemporary contrast Mr. Munch chose Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," a work dedicated to the conductor which he has performed several times both in Europe and America. The more one hears the composition the more one admires its strength of expression and forcefulness.

* * *

In spite of its churchly title and the titles of its three movements—Dies Irae, De profundis clamavi, Dona nobis pacem—the work may be considered more in the light of a personal protest against some of this century's return to savagery, and a hopeful vista of better things to come. As always in this work, Mr. Munch conducted with a strength and awareness that made the symphony vibrate with meaning beyond the projected sounds of this impassioned and out-spoken work.

The concert closed with a masterful traversal by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, a performance which fully merited the demonstration accorded him, Mr. Munch, and the players at the close.

Carl Schuricht was guest conductor for the Saturday concert. He is the dean of conductors active in Europe (he was 77 on July 3), and he confirmed the recognition that has been accorded him on these shores through his recordings and by his personal appearances with the Vienna Philharmonic this past season.

* * *

The conductor is a cool and resourceful general who husbands his resources with careful, calculating hands, who lets no detail escape him, who is solicitous of all the inner effects. Yet at moments of climax he can set aside his reserve and become completely identified with the music's surge and emotional meaning. It may also be said of the distinguished conductor that his strength and vigor belie his years.

The contemporary work on this program was Boris Blacher's Konzertante Musik für Orchestra, a well-conceived and beautifully constructed work of much imagination and deftness. The composer uses repeated ostinatos of melodic and rhythmic figures as a base for flowing melodic lines. The instrumental effects are original and most interesting, and while the music is unpretentious its over-all effect shows that a first-class musical mind has been at work.

* * *

Mr. Schuricht conducted the Schubert "Unfinished" Symphony in almost too classical a style, with the Allegro moderato emerging in restrained manner. The Andante con moto was also done in a flowing unhurried way that sacrificed any urgency that may be present in the score for a calm contemplativeness that came close to detachment at times.

Yet any listener who might have classed Mr. Schuricht as an overly-poised conductor must have changed his opinion after hearing him direct the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. This was a forceful, energetic, and even a passionate reading which aroused the audience to enthusiasm. The conductor was recalled to the stage time after time, and many members of the audience came close to the platform to show their pleasure and appreciation for a great and noble performance.

Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with Mr. Munch on the podium on Sunday afternoon, brought the weekend and the festival to a close.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 12 1957

Schubert, Beethoven Paired In Boston Symphony Concert

By DAVID GOTTLEIB

Lenox, Mass.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer engagement here ended this weekend and fortunate were the many thousands who journeyed to Tanglewood Saturday night.

For the next to the last concert the Schubert "Unfinished Symphony" and the Beethoven "Eroica Symphony" were paired for performance under the baton of Carl Schuricht. These, it would seem, are sufficient in themselves for one evening's music, but Boris Blacher's Konzerante music for orchestra was added, conceivably because this uncomplicated and politely modern work is dedicated to Herr Schuricht.

After a straightforward reading of the Blacher piece, which no doubt owes whatever appeal it has to rhythmic repetition and a showy ending, the Schubert symphony was especially welcome. Melancholy and lyrical are the usual descriptives for the first movement of the B-minor symphony. They are totally inadequate for the molten harmonics and cultivate melodic line illicted from the Boston Saturday night.

* * *

HERR SCHURICHT took as much liberty with the tempo as he needed to paint the fine details. One hung on each note wondering what turn or nuance it would take before the next entered. It was not schmaltz; it neved lagged. It was a brooding, mysterious, almost Tchaikowsky - "Pathetique" Schubert. The orchestra seemed especially responsive to the demands for sustained tone imposed by the conductor.

The second movement was no less a masterpiece of interpretation, except that as always it is, by its freer form, less compelling than the first. Familiar as the "Unfinished" is one must say that this was a due and unforgetable hearing.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN began rather disappointingly. One would have expected more Germanic drive to the first movement from Schuricht.

If he did not intend to play it down, in preparation for his grand conception of the Marcia Funebre, surely he did not intend the raggedness that crept in at times. Slow movements seem to be Schuricht's particular fascination again. As in the Schubert he gave the instrumentalists enough breath to search for the richest tone and the most delicate shading they could fashion.

The climaxes in the Marcia were like the awakening of the god Thor, rising slowly and majestically to the heavens. The Scherzo and finale had the impeccable definition, sprightliness and bustle the Boston is known for in this work. Although the last movement was taken more slowly than usual, it was just as exciting for its attention to detail.

There is criticism of the Berkshire Festival for its constant programming of the old symphonic chestnuts, but with such an individual interpreter as Schuricht, and as fine an ensemble as the Boston, they will never lose their appeal.

Spfld. Rep. 8/11

Second Thoughts On Music

Schuricht Scores Success On Podium at Tanglewood

Viennese Conductor Leads Boston Symphony in First Appearance at Festival; Stern and Serkin Heard; New One-Act Opera Presented

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The appearance of a conductor new to Tanglewood and the world premiere of an opera have spiced up the program of these closing days of the Berkshire Festival here at Tanglewood. The new conductor was 77-year-old Carl Schuricht and the new opera was a one-act affair by the American composer Mark Bucci. It is titled "A Tale for a Deaf Ear."

Carl Schuricht conducted the Vienna Symphony Orchestra during its American tour last season. His success was immediate, just as it was at Tanglewood. One listened to sensitive and musical interpretations, to beautifully molded phrases and saw unfold performances which were the result of years of experience. The orchestra collaborated wonderfully.

The first symphony of Brahms was inspiring in its proportions and crystal clear outlines. There was romance aplenty which added a certain intimacy to the reading, which one does not always find. The same composer's "Tragic" overture took on new meanings as it was unfolded.

The German composer Werner Egk was represented by his "Georgica," a set of three peasant dances or rather "Pieces" for orchestra. Egk drew heavily on the folk music of his own Bavaria for his material and the result is a pleasant panorama of love songs, rustic dances and the like, all arranged with proper rhythmic emphasis and no little whimsicality.

The Opera

The Opera Department of the school has been more active in the putting on of opera, in fabricated scenery from fiber glass and aluminum, than it has in an extended opera production this season. The production of "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" by Mark Bucci was interesting more from the projected scenic effects than from the music or story. The music owes a great deal to Menotti, particularly to "The Consul."

The work was commissioned at the end of last season by Samuel Wechsler of New York. It calls for a soprano and baritone lead; a singer in the pit and is scored to two pianos and percussions. Mr. Bocci has written some very effective music and has provided a good vocal line for the singers.

The story concerns four miracles which take place at four different seasons in four different places. The text is sung in the language of the location of each miracle. There were some unnecessarily sordid English dialogue. Boris Goldovsky also presented the second act of "The Marriage of Figaro" and two scenes from "The Magic Flute," thus paying homage to Mozart. The fiber-glass-aluminum scenery will require considerable more experimentation before it is adequate. We have heard outstanding voices in the department this season.

Stern and Serkin

Continuing the music of Brahms, Charles Munch presented Isaac Stern in the violin concerto and Rudolf Serkin in the second piano concerto. Stern has been in top form this season which means that we have heard performances of the Tchaikowsky and Brahms concertos which were about as fine as one has the right to expect. The collaboration between conductor, orchestra and soloist has been perfect.

Rudolf Serkin was at the peak of his powers as he played the second concerto. Everything was large scaled, with utterly exquisite soft passages as contrast. It was a scholarly, sensitive and musical reading one heard; one which found the conductor and orchestra in full rapport.

Among the orchestra works offered by Mr. Munch, the excerpts from Samuel Barber's ballet "Medea" were particularly interesting. Barber has scored the "Meditation" and "Dance of Vengence" for full orchestra. Understandably the music is something less than beautiful, but it is powerful and skillfully portrays the scenes.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 175,000
AUG 12 1957

[202]

Finale of Berkshire Music Festival—

Beethoven Works Featured By Munch and Carl Schuricht

By Jules Wolffers

Lenox, Mass.

Remarkably fine performances of interesting and well-balanced programs marked the closing weekend of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, its summer home.

The unpredictable public, which had not established any new attendance records for some of this season's Shed concerts, suddenly decided that this last opportunity to hear the 1957 Berkshire Festival could not be missed. Starting with a 14,000 attendance for "Tanglewood on Parade" on Thursday, the Friday and Saturday concerts found capacity audiences in the Shed and many thousands of listeners on the lawns.

Beethoven was the featured composer for the weekend, a fact that may have had something to do with the improved attendance. Charles Munch opened the Friday program with a vibrant and eloquent projection of the "Leonore" Overture No. 3, in which the orchestra played with a fine tone both as a whole and in the individual choirs. With characteristic generosity the conductor shared the applause with Roger Voisin, who had played the famous off-stage trumpet calls.

For contemporary contrast Mr. Munch chose Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique," a work dedicated to the conductor which he has performed several times both in Europe and America. The more one hears the composition the more one admires its strength of expression and forcefulness.

* * *

In spite of its churchly title and the titles of its three movements—Dies Irae, De profundis clamavi, Dona nobis pacem—the work may be considered more in the light of a personal protest against some of this century's return to savagery, and a hopeful vista of better things to come. As always in this work, Mr. Munch conducted with a strength and awareness that made the symphony vibrate with meaning beyond the projected sounds of this impassioned and out-spoken work.

The concert closed with a masterful traversal by Isaac Stern of the Beethoven Violin Concerto, a performance which fully merited the demonstration accorded him, Mr. Munch, and the players at the close.

Carl Schuricht was guest conductor for the Saturday concert. He is the dean of conductors active in Europe (he was 77 on July 3), and he confirmed the recognition that has been accorded him on these shores through his recordings and by his personal appearances with the Vienna Philharmonic this past season.

* * *

The conductor is a cool and resourceful general who husbands his resources with careful, calculating hands, who lets no detail escape him, who is solicitous of all the inner effects. Yet at moments of climax he can set aside his reserve and become completely identified with the music's surge and emotional meaning. It may also be said of the distinguished conductor that his strength and vigor belie his years.

The contemporary work on this program was Boris Blacher's Konzertante Musik für Orchestra, a well-conceived and beautifully constructed work of much imagination and deftness. The composer uses repeated ostinatos of melodic and rhythmic figures as a base for flowing melodic lines. The instrumental effects are original and most interesting, and while the music is unpretentious its over-all effect shows that a first-class musical mind has been at work.

* * *

Mr. Schuricht conducted the Schubert "Unfinished" Symphony in almost too classical a style, with the Allegro moderato emerging in restrained manner. The Andante con moto was also done in a flowing unhurried way that sacrificed any urgency that may be present in the score for a calm contemplativeness that came close to detachment at times.

Yet any listener who might have classed Mr. Schuricht as an overly-poised conductor must have changed his opinion after hearing him direct the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. This was a forceful, energetic, and even a passionate reading which aroused the audience to enthusiasm. The conductor was recalled to the stage time after time, and many members of the audience came close to the platform to show their pleasure and appreciation for a great and noble performance.

Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with Mr. Munch on the podium on Sunday afternoon, brought the weekend and the festival to a close.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 12 1957

Schubert, Beethoven Paired In Boston Symphony Concert

By DAVID GOTTLEIB

Lenox, Mass.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Summer engagement here ended this weekend and fortunate were the many thousands who journeyed to Tanglewood Saturday night.

For the next to the last concert the Schubert "Unfinished Symphony" and the Beethoven "Eroica Symphony" were paired for performance under the baton of Carl Schuricht. These, it would seem, are sufficient in themselves for one evening's music, but Borl Blacher's Konzerante music for orchestra was added, conceivably because this uncomplicated and politely modern work is dedicated to Herr Schuricht.

After a straightforward reading of the Blacher piece, which no doubt owes whatever appeal it has to rhythmic repetition and a showy ending, the Schubert symphony was especially welcome. Melancholy and lyrical are the usual descriptives for the first movement of the B-minor symphony. They are totally inadequate for the molten harmonics and cultivate melodic line illicted from the Boston Saturday night.

* * *

HERR SCHURICHT took as much liberty with the tempo as he needed to paint the fine details. One hung on each note wondering what turn or nuance it would take before the next entered. It was not schmaltz; it neved lagged. It was a brooding, mysterious, almost Tchaikowsky - "Pathetique" Schubert. The orchestra seemed especially responsive to the demands for sustained tone imposed by the conductor.

The second movement was no less a masterpiece of interpretation, except that as always it is, by its freer form, less compelling than the first. Familiar as the "Unfinished" is one must say that this was a due and unforgetable hearing.

* * *

THE BEETHOVEN began rather disappointingly. One would have expected more Germanic drive to the first movement from Schuricht.

If he did not intend to play it down, in preparation for his grand conception of the Marcia Funebre, surely he did not intend the raggedness that crept in at times. Slow movements seem to be Schuricht's particular fascination again. As in the Schubert he gave the instrumentalists enough breath to search for the richest tone and the most delicate shading they could fashion.

The climaxes in the Marcia were like the awakening of the god Thor, rising slowly and majestically to the heavens. The Scherzo and finale had the impeccable definition, sprightliness and bustle the Boston is known for in this work. Although the last movement was taken more slowly than usual, it was just as exciting for its attention to detail.

There is criticism of the Berkshire Festival for its constant programming of the old symphonic chestnuts, but with such an individual interpreter as Schuricht, and as fine an ensemble as the Boston, they will never lose their appeal.

Spfld. Rep. 8/11

Second Thoughts On Music

Schuricht Scores Success On Podium at Tanglewood

Viennese Conductor Leads Boston Symphony in First Appearance at Festival; Stern and Serkin Heard; New One-Act Opera Presented

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The appearance of a conductor new to Tanglewood and the world premiere of an opera have spiced up the program of these closing days of the Berkshire Festival here at Tanglewood. The new conductor was 77-year-old Carl Schuricht and the new opera was a one-act affair by the American composer Mark Bucci. It is titled "A Tale for a Deaf Ear."

Carl Schuricht conducted the Vienna Symphony Orchestra during its American tour last season. His success was immediate, just as it was at Tanglewood. One listened to sensitive and musical interpretations, to beautifully molded phrases and saw unfold performances which were the result of years of experience. The orchestra collaborated wonderfully.

The first symphony of Brahms was inspiring in its proportions and crystal clear outlines. There was romance aplenty which added a certain intimacy to the reading, which one does not always find. The same composer's "Tragic" overture took on new meanings as it was unfolded.

The German composer Werner Egk was represented by his "Georgica," a set of three peasant dances or rather "Pieces" for orchestra. Egk drew heavily on the folk music of his own Bavaria for his material and the result is a pleasant panorama of love songs, rustic dances and the like, all arranged with proper rhythmic emphasis and no little whimsicality.

The Opera

The Opera Department of the school has been more active in the putting on of opera, in fabricated scenery from fiber glass and aluminum, than it has in an extended opera production this season. The production of "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" by Mark Bucci was interesting more from the projected scenic effects than from the music or story. The music owes a great deal to Menotti, particularly to "The Consul."

The work was commissioned at the end of last season by Samuel Wechsler of New York. It calls for a soprano and baritone lead; a singer in the pit and is scored to two pianos and percussions. Mr. Bocci has written some very effective music and has provided a good vocal line for the singers.

The story concerns four miracles which take place at four different seasons in four different places. The text is sung in the language of the location of each miracle. There were some unnecessarily sordid English dialogue. Boris Goldovsky also presented the second act of "The Marriage of Figaro" and two scenes from "The Magic Flute," thus paying homage to Mozart. The fiber-glass-aluminum scenery will require considerable more experimentation before it is adequate. We have heard outstanding voices in the department this season.

Stern and Serkin

Continuing the music of Brahms, Charles Munch presented Isaac Stern in the violin concerto and Rudolf Serkin in the second piano concerto. Stern has been in top form this season, which means that we have heard performances of the Tchaikowsky and Brahms concertos which were about as fine as one has the right to expect. The collaboration between conductor, orchestra and soloist has been perfect.

Rudolf Serkin was at the peak of his powers as he played the second concerto. Everything was large scaled, with utterly exquisite soft passages as contrast. It was a scholarly, sensitive and musical reading one heard; one which found the conductor and orchestra in full rapport.

Among the orchestra works offered by Mr. Munch, the excerpts from Samuel Barber's ballet "Medea" were particularly interesting. Barber has scored the "Meditation" and "Dance of Vengence" for full orchestra. Understandably the music is something less than beautiful, but it is powerful and skillfully portrays the scenes.

[2631]

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047

AUG 11 1957

Coplana's 'Quiet City' Lenox Feature Today

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The German conductor Carl Schuricht conducted the Boston symphony Orchestra in the second concert of the final series of the Berkshire Music Festival last night at Tanglewood. Boris Blacher's "Concertante Music," Opus 10, was the modern work, combined with Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, "Eroica," Opus 55. The audience numbered 11,668.

Schubert Work

None of the works conducted in Schuricht in the two concerts he directed at Tanglewood has given a clearer exposition of his thinking than the Schubert. It might be pointed out that he has conducted the Vienna Philharmonic, which wasn't unknown to Schubert and the gentleman is 78 years of age. His concept of the Schubert was therefore personalized and the product of experienced thinking.

This does not alter the fact that he romanticized the Schubert to the hilt. At first the tempo seemed suspiciously slow, although there was bite in the vigorous chords.

Second Theme

The famous second theme was beautifully projected by the cellos in spite of interference from the woodwinds, which didn't seem particularly interested Schuricht's wishes.

At what sometimes was retarded to the proverbial "snail's pace," he directed all attention possible on melody to a point of bringing out some secondary themes to glare with prominence. This is a matter of choice.

More questionable were his sluggish speeds that made some of the transitions between themes interminable. Again in the second movement, Schuricht involved himself with details and isolated tonal effects which certainly X-rayed the score but left you concerned with nuances and structural blueprints—which are intended to produce results rather than serve as the work's mainstays.

Blacher Concerto

Unless the facts are considered, there might be some question as to why the Blacher concerto was played at all. From the program notes, we gather that the composer is a friend of the conductor's—and that he taught at the Berkshire Music Center two summers ago.

It's a pretty shallow and pointless piece of music outside of laboratorical examination. The thing starts off with cross-prupose rhythms, creating a unique pattern. There follows a lot of instrumental conversation, none of it particularly important, pleasing or objective.

Suppress Interest

Here and there, one detected a little Prokofieff flair. Elsewhere are sounds of a disturbed aviary, the same little figures gossiping away while the strings try to expound. They don't get very far as soon as something concrete appears on the horizon, the nervous phrases suppress the interest.

It has a wild skirmish at the end. It was welcomed by virtue of its finality.

What we heard of the Beethoven "Troica" indicated an interpretation leveled at vital tempos, prompt and thorough dynamic contrasts, excellent evaluations of melody, and complete tonal lucidity.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony, Festival Chorus, and soloists in the final concert this afternoon. The program is Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," with trumpet, Roger Voisin; English horn, and Louis Speyer; strings, and Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Soloists for the later are Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, Contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass.

STAATSZEITUNG UND HEROLD 18 August 1957
6 B ★★ UNTERHALTUNGSSEITE SONNTAGSB

Ohrenzeugenbericht aus Tanglewood

Krönung des Berkshire-Festes: Schuricht dirigiert Beethoven

Vom 2. Juli bis zum 11. August dauerte das Berkshire Festival. Bach, Mozart, Schubert, Brahms, Hindemith waren die Namen, welche den mit gewohnter Sorgfalt aufgebauten Programmen das Gepräge gaben. Sie erreichten mit Beethoven — kann es anders sein? — den Schlußpunkt.

Carl Schuricht, dessen Künstlerprofil und ausgewogenen Interpretationsstil New York beim Gastspiel der Wiener Philharmoniker kennen und schätzen lernte, dirigierte in Tanglewood drei deutsche, drei sehr unterschiedliche Komponisten. Die "Konzertante Musik für Orchester" von Boris Blacher, op. 10, welche der Komponist Carl Schuricht widmete, wurde von diesem 1937 in Berlin zur Uraufführung gebracht und begründete Blachers Berühmtheit. Ruht demnach die Laufbahn des heutigen Direktors der Berliner Hochschule für Musik (Hardenbergstraße) auf zweifellos vorhandenen musikantischen Beziehungen zwischen Schöpfer und Ausleger, so mußte es besonders instruktiv sein, das Werk nach langer Pause in der zuständigen berufenen Wiedergabe neuerlich organisch aufs Ohr wirken zu lassen.

Der Mathematiker der Töne

Blacher ist nicht Gefühlsmusiker, sondern Mathematiker der Töne. Sowie Schuricht den Stab hob, bestätigte sich dieser Eindruck. Was bezwecken die diversen konstruktiven "Methoden" heutiger und (hoffentlich) morgiger Tondichter? Sie wollen sich vom Zwang, vielleicht auch Mangel der Inspiration freimachen.

Blacher geht nicht den (atonalen) Weg der "Zwölftöner": Er hält ihn bereits für allzu ausgetreten. Er versucht die satztechnische Revolution von der rhythmischen Seite her durch seine "variablen Metren" (die auch dynamische Abstufungen und Finessen ermöglichen). Was er schreibt, ist unsentimentale, mathematische Musik, unter Berufung auf den Bach der konstruktiven Fugen (wohltemperiertes Klavier) und zumal der theorstisierenden "Kunst der Fuge . . ." Keine Dissonanzen — Blacher geht ganz altmodisch-harmonisch zu Werk. Dafür aber auch nicht mehr der überlieferte Symmetrie-Rhythmus, stets teilbar durch die Zahl 2. In seinem "Dialog für Flöte, Violine, Klavier und Streichorchester" ändert er in jedem Takt die metrische Struktur.

Man kann mit Ohren sehen . . .

Carl Schuricht dirigiert die "Konzertante Musik" so, daß man "mit den Ohren hindurchsehen kann". Wenn Fagott und Horn das "Moderato" gewissermaßen untereinander diskutieren, entsteht sogleich geheimnisvoll spukhafte Atmosphäre. Das folgende Allegro, in dem das "Hauptthema" fällig wäre, ist ganz aufgelöstes geistreiches Spiel mit Klängen und Instrumentalnuancen, leicht, scharf, mitunter wie ironisch konversieren Streicher mit Fagotten, dann abwechselnd die übrigen Holzbläser mit den Saiteninstrumenten, die durchaus solistischen Charakter wahren.

Was dann staccato aus der Bratsche tönt, ist quasi Reprise, worauf die Flöte sich allein in einer Weise ergeht, die unschwer als Thema (des Allegro) in der Umkehrung zu erkennen ist. Pikant, wie Carl Schuricht, eigentlich gegen Blachers sachlichen Willen, die prachtvollen Streicher aus Boston nutzt, um ein Meer von Wohllaut aus den breit aufschwirrenden Tutti-Akkorden zu entbinden, mit welchen das mehr eigensinnige als eigenwillige Stück schließt.

Ein Meister der "Durchführung"

Ebenso wundersam die Celli und Kontrabässe — gefördert durch die unerreichte Akustik des Musikschuppens von Tanglewood (der sich nüchtern-zweckhaft nur ansieht, aber nicht anhört) — mit welchen Schuberts 8. Symphonie (die "Unvollendete") anhebt, bevor auf unruhigem Sechzehntelhintergrund der Geigen das erste Thema der Oboe und Klarinette heranschwebt. Schuricht, der maestro, ist insbesonders Meister der Durchführung. Wie er die Sforzato-Ausbrüche dieser Partien, worin das thematische Material stimmungsgemäß und ganz persönlich verarbeitet wird, zügelt, in künstlerische Zucht nimmt, ohne ihren leidenschaftlichen Antrieb zu zähmen, ist neues Hörer-Erlebnis — vor einem bald schon 100jährigen Werk. Der "Franzl" hat eine andere, die Vierte, als "Tragische Symphonie" bezeichnet; aber diese, fast 50 Jahre nach seinem Tode entdeckte Achte, ist, wenn man Schuricht glauben darf und warum sollte man nicht?, seine wahre Schicksalssymphonie.

Der Dirigent korrigiert die in diesen Weisen webende Wehmut, Lebenstrauer und frühe Todesbereitschaft nirgends; keine Beschönigung oder Retusche, das Tempo wird sogar eher verbreitert, um dem Weltschmerz — dieser oft achtlos nachgesungenen Melodien unmißverständlich Ausdruck zu geben. Man hat viel daran gerätselt, warum nur Allegro und Andante vorhanden sind, kein

Carl Schuricht

Scherzo, kein Finale. Aus unüberwindlichem Respekt vor dem Titanen? Aber Beethoven hat genug zweisätzige, denoch in sich geschlossene Werke geschaffen, beispielsweise unter seinen Sonaten. Bestimmt nicht deshalb, weil Schubert kein "richtiges" Gegenthema einfiel; er war kein Kämpfer. Wie wenig seiner weichen problemlosen Natur Widerstand und Trotz lagen, wurde evident, als gleich darauf die "Eroica" mit Macht einherwuchtete. Man muß sich gegen Mächte, Mitmenschen empören können, dann stellt sich auch das Gegen-Thema ein . . . B-Moll ist gleich: Weh-Modus. Dieses vertiefte Begreifen, diese Wiedereroberung eines durch Routine abgenutzten Opus verdankte man Carl Schuricht.

Eine "Eroica" voll Lebenssaft

Seine Interpretation der III. Symphonie Beethovens war klassisch — insofern als das Antiklassische, Revolutionäre des Es-Dur-Werks, op. 54, welches eine vollständige Umwälzung von Regel, Schema, Tradition vornahm, besonders eindringlich und unüberhörbar zur Geltung kam. Nichts vom wienerischen Scharm Schurichts bei Schubert — alles war hier ebenso heldisch wie menschlich. Alle Wunder, welche Beethoven aus dem Nichts, dem signalartig zerlegten Es-Dur-Dreiklang ableitet, Gestalt und Gehalt annehmen läßt, wurden durch diese Wiedergabe realisiert. Eine moderne Interpretation!

Sie vertuschte nichts von den (der Zeit in Sprung und Sturmschritt voraneilenden) Synkopen, die den heroischen Charakter des Motivs verstärken; und aus der gefürchteten, geschmähten Dissonanz wurden mystische Wirkungen gekeltert, wie sie dem ringenden Schöpfer des Riesenwerks vorgeschwebt haben mögen, wenn die Hörner plötzlich, wie ungeduldig mit, Es-G-B (der Tonika) ins As-B der Geigen (Dominantseptakkord von Es-Dur) hineinrufen.

Kein paradoxes Presto

Nichts wird bei Schuricht vom Zaun gebrochen, überhastet und überkrampft. Das elementare Fugato im zweiten Trio des Trauermarsches entfesselte ohne jede sichtbare Übertreibung in Geste oder Verdrehung Horn- und Trompetenstöße wie am Jüngsten Tag. Die Passagen der Streicher, im Finale schnell, doch nie zu schnell (bis zur Unkenntlichkeit, wie's oft genug geschieht); das gezupfte Baßthema hatte klaren Umriß wie jede der elf Variationen; der Witz des Sechsten, ein ungarischer Marsch, "saß", genau im Takt, genau im Ohr. Selbst die dithyrambische Coda blieb bis zum letzten Schlag ein Presto, artete nie in peinlichen Paroxismus aus.

Rühmlichste, einprägsamste Leistung jedoch das Scherzo; ohne Tempokompromisse tupften die Bogen die Saiten, daß der blitzschnelle Strich die akustische Täuschung eines "Pizzicato" auslöste und — endlich einmal — konnten die Hörner die schlichte Waldweise des Trio mit Behagen aussingen, statt sie atemlos auszupuffen. — Hebt Schuricht herausfordernd den Arm in Richtung auf die Bläser, so mildern feinkreisende Fingerbewegungen etwa zu erwartende allzu brutal blasende Wucht; die Bostoner Virtuosen verstanden im Nu und schienen sich sämtlich geborgen zu fühlen unter den behutsam bauenden Händen von Carl Schuricht, dem 12.000 Hörer mit Ovationen dankten.

*

Charles Munch, Kopf und Seele dieses Festes verdient aufrichtigen Dank für die Berufung dieses Gastes. Er selbst schickte der "Neunten" — am letzten Sonntag, an welchem über 15.000 Menschen die Festwiese bevölkerten — eine Gelegenheitsarbeit von Aaron Copland voraus, "Quiet City", ursprünglich Bühnenmusik zu einem Stück, welches New York nie erreichte. Weiträumiges vereinzeltes Pizzicato schildert eingangs nächtliche Stille, auch Einsamkeit der Großstadt, in die ein Trompetensignal von fern hineintönt.

Der Wortführer des Dramatikers war im Stück ein Trompeter — diesem räumt auch der Komponist Vorrang ein, durch ein langes expressives Solo mit jazzartigen Aufschwüngen, Ballungen, die sich zum wiegenliedartigen Rhythmus der Streicher sänftigen. Auf die evokative Trompete antwortet wie berichtigendes Echo das Englischhorn; im Tutti wird beträchtlicher orchestraler Elan erzielt, bevor die Komposition, wie die Stadt, wieder im pp des Auftakts versinkt. Illustrative Musik ohne selbständige Eingebung und Bestimmung. Der Komponist, einer der diesjährigen Pädagogen von Tanglewood, konnte sich nach der gewissenhaften Wiedergabe für gastfreundlichen Beifall bedanken.

Große Elle, geringe Probe

Auf Beethovens Neunte folgt in der Musikgeschichte — nichts. Daher ist es logisch, ein Musikfest in diese unsterbliche musikalische Manifestation eines nach lang versagter Lebensfreude lechzenden, leidenden Menschen ausklingen zu lassen. Leider entbehrte die Aufführung im ganzen durchaus dieser heilsamen Logik. Charles Munch stürzte sich kopfüber in seine Aufgabe, gejagt, gepeitscht von einer merkwürdigen, hier ganz und gar nicht angebrachten Eile. Wohin des Weges, Maestro? Wozu die Überstürzung?

Mit Freude wartet jeder Zuhörer, seit es entstand, auf dieses Werk, auf jeden seiner so bekannten, immer wieder durch kühne Neuheit überrumpelnden Teile.

*

Und schon hielten wir — die ganze Symphonie war in einer knappen Stunde abgetan — beim Adagio molto. Zugegeben, es vollzog sich ruhiger, langsamer, ohne die vorhergehende Verhetzung; aber, wenn das einleitende B-Dur durch dies unbeschreiblich innige D-Dur-Geigen- und Bratschenlied abgelöst wird und das Herz sich angesprochen fühlen möchte, um — in gleicher Tonart des Trostes — antworten zu können, da unterblieb diese wundersame erhoffte Zwiesprache. Der letzte Satz, das phänomenalste Stück Musik, das wir besitzen, kann gar nicht versagen; der verstohlene Einsatz der Baßgeigen mit dem schönsten schlichtesten aller Themen gelang unter den Bedingungen dieser Umgebung gerade idael.

Ausgezeichnet, wie beispielsweise die Piccoloflöte nach dem "alla Marcia" das rhythmisch variierte Freudenthema aufflimmern ließ. Auch der Festival Chorus, unter Hugh Ross und Alfred Nash Patterson (der noch bis 1 Uhr mittags in einem Parkpavillon übte) leistete mit Hingabe das Menschen- und Sängermögliche, zumal die jungen Sopranistinnen erlahmten über dem "ewig" gehaltenen hohen A nicht einen Atemzug lang! Dagegen kam der Stimmungsschwung "Froh, wie seine Sonnen fliegen" nicht zustande, da John McCollums Tenor nicht die Durschschlagskraft dazu besitzt. Auch Donald Gramms hoher Baß(-Bariton) hatte nicht das Definitive der Forderung: "O Freunde, nicht diese Töne" und Florence Kopleffs Alt wurde vom freiströmenden tragfähigen Sopran Adele Addisons überschattet, überleuchtet.

Nein, Meister Munch, wenn Ihnen am letzten Tag das begreiflich, eine dankbare Aufgabe zu anstrengend ist, wollten sie nicht rasch damit fertig zu werden, sondern einen anderen Ausweg suchen. Dieses Konzert war nicht Kulmination, sondern Kehraus.

R. P.

SPRINGFIELD SUNDAY, REPUBLICAN,

CARL SCHURICHT CONDUCTS AGAIN AT TANGLEWOOD

Orchestra Members Appear Inspired by Elderly Musician

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox, Aug. 10—The distinguished conductor Carl Schuricht made his second appearance to conduct at the Berkshire Festival at the head of an audience of 11,668 persons, on hand to greet him. The concert was an unforgettable one. Never have we heard the orchestra with greater luminosity. It was as though each member was inspired by this elderly, diminutive musician, so sincere and musical.

Brilliant, Gay Work

The program opened with a "Konzertante Music" or concert music, by Boris Blacher, who was here in 1955 as a member of the composition department faculty. This work, dedicated to maestro Schuricht, was a brilliant, gay work, that says its say in quite delightful manner. To sum it up, it was real entertainment.

This work was followed by an exquisite performance of Schubert's "Symphony in B Minor" (unfinished). Under the magic of this remarkably sensitive conductor, phrase melted into phrase with ravishing sounds. There was a wonderful delicacy and strength combined. The audience reaction can best be expressed by the moment of silence which followed the conclusion of the work.

The best was left for the last. Mr. Schuricht gave us a performance of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3 in E-Flat" (Eroica) the equal of which we have to think far back to remember. This immense step from his second symphony found Beethoven a man with a free soul and unafraid. The opening movement, restless in action, with stadily increasing forcefulness, was a mighty declamation of conflicting emotions.

Spontaneous Ovation

The poignancy of the adagio was made even more forceful at the beginning through the unusually slow tempo adopted, but there was a calm and lovely enunciation of the elegiac melody of the middle section. The scherzo, one of the finest ever written, was a gay wisp, played with incredible virtuosity, and in the finale, all the tumults of exultant strength were released. It was no surprise that the audience broke into as spontaneous an ovation as we have ever witnessed here. It could not have been otherwise.

The festival closes tomorrow afternoon when Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in Aaron Copland's "Quiet City" for trumpet, English horn and strings and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9 in D Major." Soloists in Schiller's "Ode to Joy" which is the concluding movement will be Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

[264]

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Record Throng Concludes Brilliant Tanglewood Season; Charles Munch Conducts

The final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood was brought to a grand climax by indisputably grand music, a record 15,300 eager music loving opportunists, many of whom were willing to park their cars a mile or more from the grounds in order to hear at least some of the Boston Symphony's last program. This reviewer was delayed by a traffic jam for the first time this season, and thus missed Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," the first half of the program. However, the majestic and soul-searching beauty of Beethoven's choral "Ninth" made up for the loss. For once the applause at the end of each section seemed called for, if only to give Dr. Munch and the musicians a chance to catch a much-needed breath in very warm atmosphere. Each movement was delineated with vigor, grace and transcendant beauty by Dr. Munch and the orchestra. Only the seocnd movement seemed overly long with its repetitious thematic development. The spiritual longing and sustained quality of the third reminded one that the late Dr. Damrosch chose this particular movement to bring to a close the activities of the New York Symphony. In spite of the vocally handicapped attributes of the "Ode to Joy" finale, the quartet, which included Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, orchestra and Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, combined under Dr. Munch's vibrant leadership to make a truly joyous and memorable ending to an exceptionally satisfying Festival season, the twentieth. The audience lingered long to express their appreciation.

Starting the final weekend, dedicated to Beethoven, on Friday evening, Dr. Munch opened with a tightly controlled performance of the Leonore Overture, No. 3, tender, forceful and triumphant, the orchestra evoking with incomparable virtuosity every intended mood of the composer. Dedicated to Dr. Munch, who directed the first performance at Zurich, Honegger's seriously conceived "Liturgique" Symphony, No. 3, was next unfolded in all its changeling colors for the immensely receptive audience. Classically constructed not unpleasantly dissonant, (the second movement is a lovely conception), rhythmically exciting, especially the last movement when it builds up in towering harmonies until literally torn asunder to reveal an ending of quietly serene beauty. Isaac Stern completed the program with a sensitive but uninspired and masterful reading of Beethoven's violin concerto in D major; some questionable rallentandos stood out in the generally tasteful interpretation, whether of Dr. Munch's invention or Mr. Stern's one couldn't be certain.

Carl Schuricht, the German conductor, appeared for the second time on Saturday evening in a program starting with Boris Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Op. 10, dedicated to Mr. Schuricht who directed its first performance in Berlin. Using the common jazz idiom with much syncopation, it is music of worthwhile quality. Mr. Schuricht then directed the well-cued Boston Symphony Orchestra in a completely unorthodox but sympathetic reading of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," revealing hitherto unfathomed depths. Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony which closed the program did not fare as well, surely a result of too few rehearsals, necessary for Mr. Schuricht to fully acquaint the orchestra with his unique interpretations. The balance was unfortunately handled, particularly in the last movement where the fortissimos of the brass drowned out the motives. The audience was enthusiastic in its applause, and one certainly hopes to see Mr. Schuricht at Tanglewood another year.

Dr. Munch has fulfilled his promise of presenting one contemporary work at each performance of this twentieth Berkshire Festival, enlightening and increasing our knowledge of the modern composers, none of which has offended our musical sensitivities.

We can be truly thankful for the high excellence of performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Munch and other conductors, and for many varied and well-chosen programs, a formidable task in itself in attempting to please everyone.

M.deB.B.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday and Sunday
August 10, 11
By A. C. S.

How does a conductor determine the tempo of a musical work, and what license may he take with a composer's instructions? These questions seem most pertinent in reporting events at Tanglewood this past weekend. In this column last week we spoke of the apt choice of tempi in the cast of Carl Schuricht. Several times this season we have been at variance with the choices of Charles Munch. The final two concerts of the Berkshire Festival season point out unmistakably the differences of two conductors on this subject.

Mr. Schuricht led the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening in a program which included Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and the Symphony No. 3 by Beethoven. The tempi chosen were ideal for the content of the scores. If the Schubert seemed a bit slower than usual, it "sang" with most marvelous control and wonderful contrasts. Again, in the "Eroica", tempi were such that rhythmic and melodic details could appear in proper perspective. We have not previously heard such a well-delineated reading. It is to be regretted that Carl Schuright does not appear more often before the American public.

Details and rhythmic figures were lost in the frenetic drive of tempo Sunday afternoon. Having led a fine performance of Copland's Quiet City, with beautiful solo playing by Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English Hore, Dr. Munch seemed to be trying to set a new speed record with the Beethoven Ninth Symphony. Only in the final two movements did any sort of reason reign. Even here, things got out of hand from time to time. The vocal quartet was superb (Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass), and the Festival Chorus was in top form. They had to be to keep up with the conductor. Judging from the audience response (applause after each movement) this listener was almost alone in his dissention. Remembering the eloquent performances given by Dr. Munch this summer of the Bach "St. Matthew Passion," and Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ," it is difficult to understand his reading Sunday.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 16 1957

Beethoven's 9th Ends Berkshire Festival

Superb Performance Closes Tanglewood Season

A perfect summer day and the attraction of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony brought out a record crowd for the final concert in the Berkshire Festival series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Sunday afternoon, with the Music Shed filled, and the lawns solidly populated with rapt listeners on blankets and in deck chairs.

The concert opened with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," for trumpet, English horn and strings. The trumpet was played by Roger Voisin and the horn by Louis Speyer. The piece was composed as incidental music for Irwin Shaw's play of the same name in 1940, and first performed at Town Hall, New York City, in 1941, by the Saidenburg Little Symphony, conducted by Daniel Saidenburg.

According to the composer's note on the piece, the play was a "realistic fantasy concerning the night-thoughts of many different kinds of people in a great city. It called for music evocative of the nostalgia and inner distress of a society profoundly aware of its own insecurity." As such, the composer has eminently succeeded, for the music is poignant and nostalgic, but so quiet and unobtrusive that listeners on the lawn could scarcely hear some of the softer passages. It seemed to us not too happy a choice for an outdoor concert such as the Tanglewood series.

The Ninth, of course, is a different story. Its vastness, powerful crescendos, mysterious opening passages, triumphant finale soared out of the Music Shed and seemed to reverberate throughout the Berkshires. As always, the Boston Symphony, under the masterful direction of Charles Munch, gave a superb performance, and as on every final day of the series, outdid all preceding performances of the summer, ending the season in a burst of glory. The audience, unable to restrain its enthusiasm, applauded after each movement, a practice usually frowned upon at Tanglewood, and at the close, called back conductor and soloists for a tumultuous accolade.

The choral and final movement of the symphony was sung by the Berkshire Festival chorus, with Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. This magnificent organization, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, was as rewarding in the Beethoven opus as it had been the week before in Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christe." Under the sensitive and inspired conducting of Dr Munch, all of the nobility, mysticism and exaltation of the score comes abundantly to life.

The soloists were uniformly fine, with Adele Addison, the lovely-looking and sounding Negro soprano, a joy both to hear and to behold. It seemed to us that in the opening recitative, the basso, Donald Gramm, was a trifle flat, but this was soon rectified, and it would be ungracious to cavil at so minor a fault in a performance, otherwise, not only flawless, but thrilling.

We have never been to Salzburg for its famous music festival, but we have heard recordings of concerts there, and we find it hard to believe that anything in Europe or elsewhere could surpass the general excellence and excitement of the Berkshire Festival in Massachusetts. For as little as $2.00 and a drive through the beautiful Berkshires rewarding in itself, music lovers can enjoy a truly unique and soul-satisfying experience.

M.B.P.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 12 1957

MUNCH EXCELS AS TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL ENDS

Beethoven's Ninth Leaves Audience Looking forward to Next Year

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox-Tanglewood, Aug. 11—The Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded one of finest Berkshire Music Festivals in several years this afternoon, sending 15,300 persons away from Tanglewood with the music of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in their ears and the "Ode to Joy" etched on their hearts. They had heard a tremendous performance under the direction of Charles Munch.

Fitting Finale

It was a fitting finale to a festival which has been notable for consistently fine performances from opening to close. We were told that the audiences for the week-end concerts, chamber music concerts, public rehearsals and Tanglewood on Parade amounted to 162,936 persons. Comparative figures were not available.

The week-end concerts in the shed drew 129,549 persons. 7025 persons attended the chamber music concerts, while 13,869 persons attended the public rehearsals. Tanglewood on Parade drew 12,493 devotees.

Mr. Munch chose to close the festival with two performances, Beethoven's "Chorale" Symphony and Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," thus paying proper tribute to the past and the present.

The "Quiet City" was given a smooth and polished performance, and its frankly nostalgic concept was clearly revealed. One heard expressive playing from both Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, the English horn virtuoso. The high standards of the festival were upheld to the end.

Tremendous Music

Even without its fourth movement, "Chorale," the Ninth Symphony is a tremendous piece of music. It moves majestically from height to height with ever increasing audience impact, until the final movement becomes almost unbearable in its intensity. The Festival Chorus, admirably trained by Hugh Ross, sang the almost unsingable music with a freshness of tone and enthusiasm and, although numerically smaller than many choruses which sing this work, the splendid acoustics of the music shed permitted their voices to be heard, in spite of those moments when Mr. Munch demanded excessive tone from the orchestra.

The soloists, all of whom appeared earlier in the season in a performance of "The Passion According to St. Matthew" by Bach, were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Seated in back of the orchestra, their voices could be heard clearly. The demanding and taxing music was wonderfully enunciated, the high tessitura having apparently no terrors for them.

Mr. Munch Energetic

For the most part, Mr. Munch provided a broad and spacious reading, finely detailed and rich in contrasts. He used a lot of personal energy in his direction. The orchestral response was magnificent, the playing eloquent, communicative and luminous.

The audience bade the orchestra and Mr. Munch a tumultuous farewell. It applauded for minutes on end, calling back the soloists and conductor many times and as the thousands poured out of the shed and joined the other thousands on the grounds, one heard expressions of admiration on every side. It's been a great festival and already we are looking forward to next season.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

AUG 10 1957

Beethoven Played At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 — With the music of Beethoven as the main attraction, the twentieth season of the Berkshire Music Festival came to its final weekend here tonight.

Performance - wise, it did not get off to the best of starts. The "Leonore" No. 3 Overture was the opening work, but Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who must have played it endless times together, gave an uncertain account of it. Mr. Munch gave extreme contrast to the various sections of the score, so that the musical and dramatic ideas did not seem clearly related. And the orchestra found it hard to get together or stay-together through pretty much the whole piece.

Offbeat Offering

Arthur Honegger's Third Symphony, called "Liturgique" by the composer, was the offbeat offering of the evening. Written right after the end of World War II, one can see that perhaps it seemed something urgent to get down on paper, following all the horror and all the lessons imparted by the conflict and the conditions out of which it arose.

Probably the music itself also seemed cloquntly new. It sounds like more than tedious now. However. For its philosophical scenario is really commonplace and its emotional and musical means are obvious, detached from the setting that gave them birth. War and tyrany are no less fearful and threatening. Mr. Hongger's score is not so convincingly their embodiment or moral. The "Liturgique" Symphony, we can see now, is unfortunately another piece of spook music, a field in which composers have been notoriously banal, whether at the Halloween level of the Dans Macabre, or the high - blown level of apocalyptic vision.

Nevertheless, Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony bent their most zealous endeavor to preforming Mr. Honegger's score. They brought out all its rage, however unconvincing, and all its hope, however sentimental on the flutes. It is a large undertaking, technically, and they at least gave it the sound of importance. That is about all that can be done with the composition.

Thoroughly Compensated

Whatever the shortcomings of the first part of the evening, the were thoroughly compensated for in the performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto by Isaac Stern. Few American violinists match him for the purity of his style, the refinement of his taste, and his nice stand between the romantic and classic tempers. Sentimentality is not not in Mr. Stern's musical vocabulary, yet neither is he cold or stiff.

There is a lot one can do to put a sticky surface on the Beethoven Concerto. Mr. Stern did none of it. He did not miss the heart of the music, but he kept the score and the performance lucid and elegan all the way across. He did not let technique snow the music under, but at the points where virtuousiy counts, he achieved it shiningly. It was a very satisfactory account of a choice violin masterpiece, by a master artist. The audience did not let him forget it either.

Nor Mr. Munch and the orchestra for their handsome cooperation.

—T.H.P.

[264]

DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE

Record Throng Concludes Brilliant Tanglewood Season; Charles Munch Conducts

The final weekend of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood was brought to a grand climax by indisputably grand music, a record 15,300 eager music loving opportunists, many of whom were willing to park their cars a mile or more from the grounds in order to hear at least some of the Boston Symphony's last program. This reviewer was delayed by a traffic jam for the first time this season, and thus missed Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," the first half of the program. However, the majestic and soul-searching beauty of Beethoven's choral "Ninth" made up for the loss. For once the applause at the end of each section seemed called for, if only to give Dr. Munch and the musicians a chance to catch a much-needed breath in very warm atmosphere. Each movement was delineated with vigor, grace and transcendant beauty by Dr. Munch and the orchestra. Only the second movement seemed overly long with its repetitious thematic development. The spiritual longing and sustained quality of the third reminded one that the late Dr. Damrosch chose this particular movement to bring to a close the activities of the New York Symphony. In spite of the vocally handicapped attributes of the "Ode to Joy" finale, the quartet, which included Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm, orchestra and Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, combined under Dr. Munch's vibrant leadership to make a truly joyous and memorable ending to an exceptionally satisfying Festival season, the twentieth. The audience lingered long to express their appreciation.

Starting the final weekend, dedicated to Beethoven, on Friday evening, Dr. Munch opened with a tightly controlled performance of the Leonore Overture, No. 3, tender, forceful and triumphant, the orchestra evoking with incomparable virtuosity every intended mood of the composer. Dedicated to Dr. Munch, who directed the first performance at Zurich, Honegger's seriously conceived "Liturgique" Symphony No. 3, was next unfolded in all its changeling colors for the immensely receptive audience. Classically constructed not unpleasantly dissonant, (the second movement is a lovely conception), rhythmically exciting, especially the last movement when it builds up in towering harmonies until literally torn asunder to reveal an ending of quietly serene beauty. Isaac Stern completed the program with a sensitive but uninspired and masterful reading of Beethoven's violin concerto in D major; some questionable rallentandos stood out in the generally tasteful interpretation, whether of Dr. Munch's invention or Mr. Stern's one couldn't be certain.

Carl Schuricht, the German conductor, appeared for the second time on Saturday evening in a program starting with Boris Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Op. 10, dedicated to Mr. Schuricht who directed its first performance in Berlin. Using the common jazz idiom with much syncopation, it is music of worthwhile quality. Mr. Schuricht then directed the well-cued Boston Symphony Orchestra in a completely unorthodox but sympathetic reading of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," revealing hitherto unfathomed depths. Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony which closed the program did not fare as well, surely a result of too few rehearsals, necessary for Mr. Schuricht to fully acquaint the orchestra with his unique interpretations. The balance was unfortunately handled, particularly in the last movement where the fortissimos of the brass drowned out the motives. The audience was enthusiastic in its applause, and one certainly hopes to see Mr. Schuricht at Tanglewood another year.

Dr. Munch has fulfilled his promise of presenting one contemporary work at each performance of this twentieth Berkshire Festival, enlightening and increasing our knowledge of the modern composers, none of which has offended our musical sensitivities.

We can be truly thankful for the high excellence of performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Dr. Munch and other conductors, and for many varied and well-chosen programs, a formidable task in itself in attempting to please everyone.

M.deB.B.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,292

AUG 15 1957

TANGLEWOOD
Saturday and Sunday
August 10, 11
By A. C. S.

How does a conductor determine the tempo of a musical work, and what license may he take with a composer's instructions? These questions seem most pertinent in reporting events at Tanglewood this past weekend. In this column last week we spoke of the apt choice of tempi in the cast of Carl Schuricht. Several times this season we have been at variance with the choices of Charles Munch. The final two concerts of the Berkshire Festival season point out unmistakably the differences of two conductors on this subject.

Mr. Schuricht led the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday evening in a program which included Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and the Symphony No. 3 by Beethoven. The tempi chosen were ideal for the content of the scores. If the Schubert seemed a bit slower than usual, it "sang" with most marvelous control and wonderful contrasts. Again, in the "Eroica", tempi were such that rhythmic and melodic details could appear in proper perspective. We have not previously heard such a well-delineated reading. It is to be regretted that Carl Schuright does not appear more often before the American public.

Details and rhythmic figures were lost in the frenetic drive of tempo Sunday afternoon. Having led a fine performance of Copland's Quiet City with beautiful solo playing by Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, Dr. Munch seemed to be trying to set a new speed record with the Beethoven Ninth Symphony. Only in the final two movements did any sort of reason reign. Even here, things got out of hand from time to time. The vocal quartet was superb (Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, Donald Gramm, bass), and the Festival Chorus was in top form. They had to be to keep up with the conductor. Judging from the audience response (applause after each movement) this listener was almost alone in his dissention. Remembering the eloquent performances given by Dr. Munch this summer of the Bach "St. Matthew Passion," and Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ," it is difficult to understand his reading Sunday.

Rec
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,159

AUG 16 1957

Beethoven's 9th Ends Berkshire Festival

Superb Performance Closes Tanglewood Season

A perfect summer day and the attraction of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony brought out a record crowd for the final concert in the Berkshire Festival series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Sunday afternoon, with the Music Shed filled, and the lawns solidly populated with rapt listeners on blankets and in deck chairs.

The concert opened with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," for trumpet, English horn and strings. The trumpet was played by Roger Voisin and the horn by Louis Speyer. The piece was composed as incidental music for Irwin Shaw's play of the same name in 1940, and first performed at Town Hall, New York City, in 1941, by the Saidenburg Little Symphony, conducted by Daniel Saidenburg.

According to the composer's note on the piece, the play was a "realistic fantasy concerning the night-thoughts of many different kinds of people in a great city. It called for music evocative of the nostalgia and inner distress of a society profoundly aware of its own insecurity." As such, the composer has eminently succeeded, for the music is poignant and nostalgic, but so quiet and unobtrusive that listeners on the lawn could scarcely hear some of the softer passages. It seemed to us not too happy a choice for an outdoor concert such as the Tanglewood series.

The Ninth, of course, is a different story. Its vastness, powerful crescendos, mysterious opening passages, triumphant finale soared out of the Music Shed and seemed to reverberate throughout the Berkshires. As always, the Boston Symphony, under the masterful direction of Charles Munch, gave a superb performance, and as on every final day of the series, outdid all preceding performances of the summer, ending the season in a burst of glory. The audience, unable to restrain its enthusiasm, applauded after each movement, a practice usually frowned upon at Tanglewood, and at the close, called back conductor and soloists for a tumultuous accolade.

The choral and final movement of the symphony was sung by the Berkshire Festival chorus, with Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass, as soloists. This magnificent organization, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, was as rewarding in the Beethoven opus as it had been the week before in Berlioz's "L'Enfance du Christe." Under the sensitive and inspired conducting of Dr Munch, all of the nobility, mysticism and exaltation of the score comes abundantly to life.

The soloists were uniformly fine, with Adele Addison, the lovely-looking and sounding Negro soprano, a joy both to hear and to behold. It seemed to us that in the opening recitative, the basso, Donald Gramm, was a trifle flat, but this was soon rectified, and it would be unconscious to cavil at so minor a fault in a performance, otherwise not only flawless, but thrilling.

We have never been to Salzburg for its famous music festival, but we have heard recordings of concerts from there and we find it hard to believe that anything in Europe or elsewhere could surpass the general excellence and excitement of the Berkshire Festival in Massachusetts. For as little as $2.00 and a drive through the beautiful Berkshires rewarding in itself, music lovers can enjoy a truly unique and soul-satisfying experience.

M.B.P.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 12 1957

MUNCH EXCELS AS TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL ENDS

Beethoven's Ninth Leaves Audience Looking forward to Next Year

By WILLARD M. CLARK

Lenox-Tanglewood, Aug. 11—The Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded one of finest Berkshire Music Festivals in several years this afternoon, sending 15,300 persons away from Tanglewood with the music of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in their ears and the "Ode to Joy" etched on their hearts. They had heard a tremendous performance under the direction of Charles Munch.

Fitting Finale

It was a fitting finale to a festival which has been notable for consistently fine performances from opening to close. We were told that the audiences for the week-end concerts, chamber music concerts, public rehearsals and Tanglewood on Parade amounted to 152,936 persons. Comparative figures were not available.

The week-end concerts in the shed drew 129,549 persons. 7025 persons attended the chamber music concerts, while 13,869 persons attended the public rehearsals. Tanglewood on Parade drew 12,493 devotees.

Mr. Munch chose to close the festival with two performances, Beethoven's "Chorale" Symphony and Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," thus paying proper tribute to the past and the present.

The "Quiet City" was given a smooth and polished performance, and its frankly nostalgic concept was clearly revealed. One heard expressive playing from both Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, the English horn virtuoso. The high standards of the festival were upheld to the end.

Tremendous Music

Even without its fourth movement, "Chorale," the Ninth Symphony is a tremendous piece of music. It moves majestically from height to height with ever increasing audience impact until the final movement becomes almost unbearable in its intensity. The Festival Chorus, admirably trained by Hugh Ross, sang the almost unsingable music with a freshness of tone and enthusiasm and, although numerically smaller than many choruses which sing this work, the splendid acoustics of the music shed permitted their voices to be heard, in spite of those moments when Mr. Munch demanded excessive tone from the orchestra.

The soloists, all of whom appeared earlier in the season in a performance of "The Passion According to St. Matthew" by Bach, were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Seated in back of the orchestra, their voices could be heard clearly. The demanding and taxing music was wonderfully enunciated, the high tessitura having apparently no terrors for them.

Mr. Munch Energetic

For the most part, Mr. Munch provided a broad and spacious reading, finely detailed and rich in contrasts. He used a lot of personal energy in his direction. The orchestral response was magnificent, the playing eloquent, communicative and luminous.

The audience bade the orchestra and Mr. Munch a tumultuous farewell. It applauded for minutes on end, calling back the soloists and conductor many times and as the thousands poured out of the shed and joined the other thousands on the grounds, one heard expressions of admiration on every side. It's been a great festival and already we are looking forward to next season.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 97,224

AUG 10 1957

Beethoven Played At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 9 — With the music of Beethoven as the main attraction, the twentieth season of the Berkshire Music Festival came to its final weekend here tonight.

Performance - wise, it did not get off to the best of starts. The "Leonore" No. 3 Overture was the opening work, but Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who must have played it endless times together, gave an uncertain account of it. Mr. Munch gave extreme contrast to the various sections of the score, so that the musical and dramatic ideas did not seem clearly related. And the orchestra found it hard to get together or stay together through pretty much the whole piece.

Offbeat Offering

Arthur Honegger's Third Symphony, called "Liturgique" by the composer, was the offbeat offering of the evening. Written right after the end of World War II, one can see that perhaps it seemed something urgent to get down on paper, following all the horror and all the lessons imparted by the conflict and the conditions out of which it arose.

Probably the music itself also seemed eloquntly new. It sounds like more than tedious now, However. For its philosophical scenario is really commonplace and its emotional and musical means are obvious, detached from the setting that gave them birth. War and tyrany are no less fearful and threatening. Mr. Hongger's score is not so convincingly their embodiment or moral. The "Liturgique" Symphony, we can see now, is unfortunately another piece of spook music, a field in which composers have been notoriously banal, whether at the Halloween level of the Dans Macabre, or the high - blown level of apocalyptic vision.

Nevertheless, Mr. Munch and the Boston Symphony bent their most zealous endeavor to preforming Mr. Honegger's score. They brought out all its rage, however unconvincing, and all its hope, however sentimental on the flutes. It is a large undertaking, technically, and they at least gave it the sound of importance. That is about all that can be done with the composition.

Thoroughly Compensated

Whatever the shortcomings of the first part of the evening, the were thoroughly compensated for in the performance of the Beethoven Violin Concerto by Isaac Stern. Few American violinists match him for the purity of his style, the refinement of his taste, and his nice stand between the romantic and classic tempers. Sentimentality is not not in Mr. Stern's musical vocabulary, yet neither is he cold or stiff.

There is a lot one can do to put a sticky surface on the Beethoven Concerto. Mr. Stern did none of it. He did not miss the heart of the music, but he kept the score and the performance lucid and elegan all the way across. He did not let technique snow the music under, but at the points where virtuousiy counts, he achieved it shimingly. It was a very satisfactory account of a choice violin masterpiece by a master artist. The audience did not let him forget it either.

Nor Mr. Munch and the orchestra for their handsome cooperation.

—T.H.P.

TIGHT BINDING

Tanglewood Sets Record On Week End

(Special to The American)

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12—The 20th season of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival which came to an end yesterday after a brilliant performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 in D minor, with final chorus on Schiller's "Ode to Joy" before an audience of 15,300 broke all records for attendance by piling up a grand total for the six week ends and concerts just short of 130,000.

Attendance for the three concerts the past week end devoted largely to the music of Beethoven totaled 35,100, more than 10,000 more than the previousweek. When the figures for the chamber music concerts at the beginning of the season those of the public rehearsals 13,900 paid admissions for the benefit of the orchestra pension and 12,500 for Tanglewood-on-Parade of the last week are added the total is a staggering 163,-

It was a brilliant week end of music at Tanglewood under the baton of Charles Munch Friday evening and yesterday afternoon with the visiting conductor, Mr. Schuricht, Saturday evening. Friday's attendance of 11,700 was the largest Saturday attendance of the summer. There was no question but that Beethoven's ninth is still the best drawing attraction at Tanglewood.

Munch Conductor

There was an electric feeling in the air at Tanglewood even before Munch took up his baton. The entire audience had come to hear Beethoven and the Festival Chorus of 300 voices with four soloists in what was to be the climax of the season. No one was disappointed in the brillian performance.

There was such haunting beauty in the music and its performance, such reverence, especially in the adagio movement, that it was easy to understand why the young woman sitting at across from us on the lawn had tears as big as pearls rolling down her face.

The chorus and soloists sang the inspired affirmation of faith in the final movement, one realized once more that he was witnessing men and women together with a great conductor participating in that glorious act of creation which alone distinguishes man from the other creatures on the earth. The audience with its ovation refusal to budge as it applauded again and again left no doubt in anyone's mind that it had found what it had come for and in full measure.

As the season came to this glorious close plans were under way already for next season's festival. But one thing must be considered seriously by those planning for another year. Something must be done to relieve the congestion of the thousands of cars going to and from the concerts. There must be new and wider roads and improved handling of traffic. So slowly did cars move getting away from the concert that hundreds of drivers were forced to pull overheated cars to the side of the roads and wait for water or until traffic had thinned.

Several busses of Waterbury music lovers, including one of 35 young people from Beth El Synagog, were in attendance.

S.M.

The navy's 14 and 16-inch guns throw shells 20 miles.

Waterbury American, Monday, August 12, 1957—25

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 12 1957

Tanglewood Closes Out Its 20th Season With Tremendous Turnout

A brilliant close-to-the-20th-season of the Berkshire Music Festival was sounded this weekend at Tanglewood as the Boston Symphony orchestra scored triumphs in the Friday and Saturday night concerts and the Sunday afternoon concert. Musically, this year's festival was a triumph in itself.

A total of 35,108 persons traveled to Tanglewood this weekend to hear the three final concerts, each with a heavy accent on Beethoven. Charles Munch, conductor of the orchestra directed the Friday night event attended by 1840 persons and the Sunday afternoon concert attended by 15,300 persons. Guest conductor Carl Schuricht led the orchestra in the Saturday night concert with 11,668 persons attending.

This year's six-week season attracted a total of 162,936 persons to the weekend concerts, chamber music concerts, public rehearsals, and Tanglewood on Parade. Broken down, the figures are as follows: weekend concerts in the shed, 129549 persons; chamber music concerts, 7025 persons; public rehearsals, 13,869 persons; and Tanglewood on Parade, 12,493 persons.

Honnegger on Friday

The season was an especially rich one with presentation of some infrequently heard works. One of them was Honegger's Third Symphony, the "Liturgique," which was given a stirring performance at Friday night's concert. Honegger who died in 1955 was a close friend of Mr. Munch's. The conductor drew from the orchestra the spirit of the work, full of fury and angrily accented.

In the same concert, Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as violin soloist was heard along with Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3. The violinist, noted for the purity of his tones and exactness of pitch. delivered an inspiring performance, while the orchestra combined for another effective performance.

Magnificent Saturday Night

Magnificent playing was heard in the Saturday night concert under the direction of 77-year-old Mr. Schuricht, a slight man who drew magical sounds from the orchestra for the last evening event of the season. A bright moon, some stars, and a cool nip in the air made it a perfect Tanglewood night.

The piece de resistance of the evening was Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, "Eroica," Op. 55, which surges with emotion from the depths of despair to triumph and liberation. The conflict, the compassion and tenderness of the work were brought out by Mr. Schuricht who was given along and sounding ovation following its presentation.

Dazzling

The theme of the work was brilliantly introduced in the first movement which voiced conflict and restlessness. The sweep of the violins was especially rich in this movement, achieving an organ-like effect.

Conflicting impulses continue in the second movement which is laden with sorrow brought out in the elegiac melody stated simply and effectively. The lively rhythms of the scherzo and the strength of the final were both dazzling.

"Unfinished" Symphony

A spell-binding performance of Schubert's Symphony in B Minor, "Unfinished," was lyrical and inspired. The entire orchestra collaborated to weave together melodies with perfect phrasing. The violins were finely shaded.

Opening the concert was Kontertante Musik Fur Orchester by Boris Blacher who dedicated the work to Mr. Schuricht. Starting it in a quiet tenor colored by dissonances, the various themes were introduced, expanded upon, and brought to full orchestra in gay manner. The presentation was very bright.

Sunday Afternoon

The closing event of the festival on Sunday afternoon featured two works, Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," for Trumpet, English horn, and Strings and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 in D Minor, with final Chorus on Schiller's "Ode to Joy," Op. 125. Soloists for the Beethoven work were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

An eloquent performance of the Beethoven work with the Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson ended with an ovation of many minutes from the audience. Soloists for the Copland were Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, who also delivered polished performances.

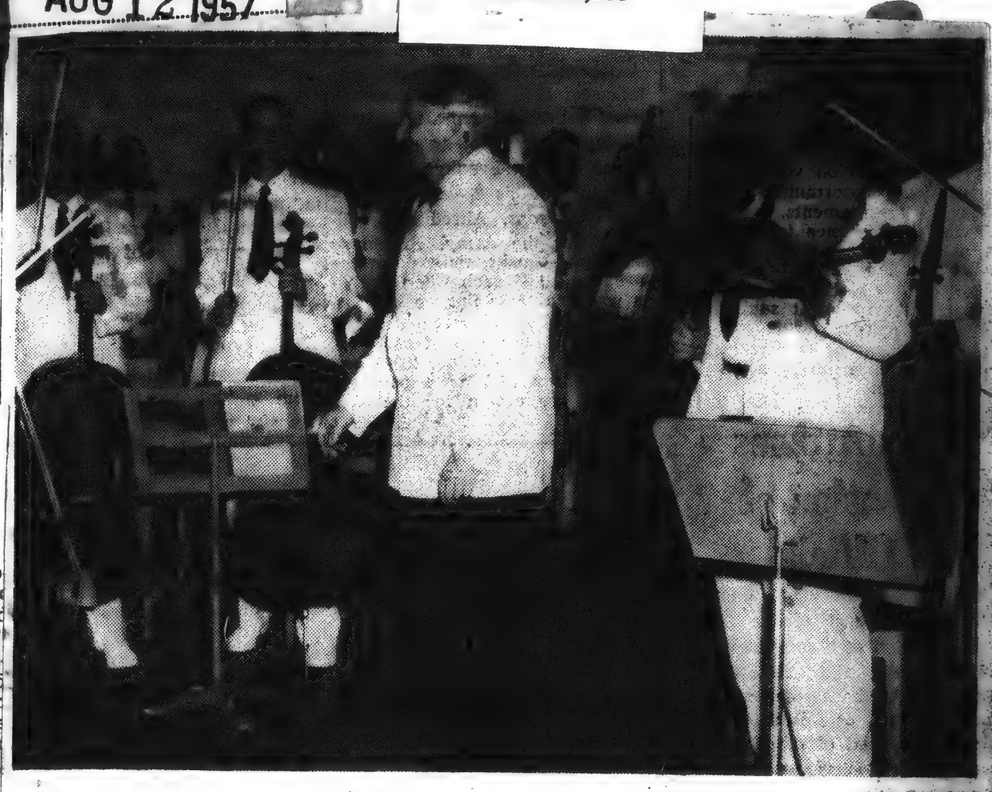
Tanglewood enthusiasts will be awaiting another such season next summer.

I.F.M.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 12 1957

[265]



Mitchell

BEAMING toward members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the festival chorus after performing Beethoven's Ninth Symphony yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch displays his pleasure over the result, while making one of his several recalls to the stage to accept the audience's ovation at the close of the 1957 festival season which broke all records.

Music Review

Finale at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE CURTAIN CALLS following the close of the final concert of the Berkshire Festival yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood were both thrilling and moving.

Charles Munch achieved a personal triumph conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and the applause surging from the record audience of the season, a total surpassed only once in Tanglewood history, seemed to increase as each recall found the audience pressing forward to be nearer the stage.

It was moving, too, when Munch brought from the ranks the two musicians who are retiring from the orchestra with this concert: Assistant-solo bass Gaston Dufresne and second trumpet Marcel La Fosse.

* * *

IN THIS TRIO of concerts of the Festival Beethoven had been the honored composer. Munch had saved the monumental Ninth for the close of his concert and of the season. On the preceding evening Carl Schuricht, in the second of his two appearances as guest conductor, chose the Eroica as his main offering.

It would be difficult to choose two men whose approach to music is more opposed and contrary than Munch and Schuricht. Munch is a relentless stimulator, always asking for a greater intensity; Schuricht is a calm and leisurely pedestrian, lingering when he finds a particularly fragrant flower, longer to dwell on its beauty and savor its aroma. Both viewpoints are valid and have their supporters. It is entirely possible and plausible for the same music lover to admire both.

* * *

MUNCH BEGAN his program with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," a work the director of the Berkshire Music Center wrote almost 20 years ago, at almost the same time as the contemporary work Schuricht chose for his program, Blacher's "Konzertante Musik."

Copland's score is dated "Sept. 1940, Lenox, Mass." and he is quoted as saying that he derived it from some incidental music of his own written for a play by Irwin Shaw. He worked on it, he said, "as soon as my duties at the Berkshire Music Center were finished" and the locale was "in a barn-studio two miles down the road from Tangelwood."

* * *

IT IS a short, quiet, atmospheric piece for strings with only an English horn and a trumpet. Munch called Louis Speyer and Roger Voisin respectively to acknowledge the recognition of their outstandingly artistic playing. It is written in the most thrifty manner possible, identifiable at once in Copland's characterstic harmonic idom.

The orginal play was a fantasy of the night thoughts of people in a great city. Copland's music is sedentary and sultry, aimless yet reflecting the innermost churning of a man's mind in solitude. The composer was in the audience and Munch beckoned him to the front of the Shed to take the expression of definite approval the music provoked.

* * *

THE SOLOISTS in the Ninth symphony were Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Gramm proclaimed his "O Freunde" with dramatic eloquence and tonal splendor. The quartet were effective and positive and sang with sonorous power.

Munch was in confident command of the entire large band of participants. The chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, produced an exceptional volume of tone. Munch gave the symphony spacious dimensions and brought the afternoon and the whole great Festival to a glorious close.

* * *

BORIS BLACHER'S "Konzertante Musik" for orchestra is dedicated to Schuricht and dates from 1937. Blacher was invited to serve on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1955 as a colleague of Copland. Saturday night's example of his work differs from the music whose acquaintance we made while he was here at Tanglewood. This is a straightforward, pleasant, short, 11-minute movement which is unharassed by any world problems and is just good transparent action.

Under Schuricht's fluoroscopic baton, the vertebrate structure of the composition was easily discernible. Blacher begins with a short simple symmetrical song in the horns over a Latin-American dance-like [illegible] the bassoons. He [illegible] almost immediately to the main allegro in which the dance theme predominates. Within a regular and reiterated constant rhythm he displaces accents with it might seem, the intentions of a prestidigitateur. Suffice to say that neither in Schuricht's hands nor those of the Symphony players did any such suspicion become noticeable.

* * *

THE SECOND half gives way to the pleasant song of the introduction which is developed while the violas still continue the dance syncopation and the violins resume the first theme but in a mirrored upside-down version. The ending expands into broad majestic steps but hardly builds up to awesome stature.

Schuricht gave the Schubert "Unfinished" a comfortable, soothing reading. The orchestra flourishes under this sunny, tempered approach. Every detail is clearly heard and the beauty of the parts is never obscured by the effect of the whole.

The "Unfinished" is of the same narrow stretch of time as the Beethoven "Choral" symphony. As different as they are, they are still classic temples with which time has dealt even more kindly than with the structures of ancient Greece. They have the same architectural traits and at this moment, at least, are as permanent objects of admiration as it is permitted sublunar matter to be.

* * *

THE "EROICA" was already concerned with world affairs and the individuals who make them click. Beethoven was motivated to some degree by a worship of Napoleon which soon turned half-circle to disgust and disfavor. Copland was moved, he states, to write "music evocative of the inner distress of a society aware of its own insecurity." Honegger in his "Liturgique" symphony, played Friday evening, went to the scriptures for aid in expressing the inward revolt he was feeling to the last war's destructive influences. Beethoven in the Ninth, turned to Schiller's epic poem, the "Ode to Joy." Strangely enough, only the Germans as represented by Schuricht's exhibits of his fellow countrymen's current output, are free of mental burdens and tormenting agony. Egk, whom Schuricht played earlier in the Festival, and Blacher, heard Saturday night, here would appear to be as free of thoughts and consideration for the woes of the world as a babe-in-arms.

* * *

IN QUICK retrospect this has been a highly [illegible] Festival. The [illegible] figures are important but are not the true measure of the venture. The programs and the thought entailed in their devising and preparation have been completely worthy of commendation. It is impossible to build 18 programs to the satisfaction of everyone, but the seasoning of a major portion of the concerts with new works has given everyone food for their special predilections. There have been some fine performances and a few with which one might cavil, but those whose responsibility it was to organize and execute this Tanglewood year have reason to feel gratified and content.

Town Times
AKVILLE, Conn.
dy Independent
Circ. 2,140

UG 15 1957

e Performances Final Week Of rkshire Festival

e of the best concert weeks of the season, with the high- a performance of the Beeth- ninth Choral Symphony, eard at the Berkshire Music ival, Tanglewood, Lenox, Saturday and Sunday. The was also the final concert six week season.

Saturday, guest conductor Schuricht led the Boston hony Orchestra in perfor- s of the Blacher "Konzer- Musik" Op. 10, the Schubert hony in B Minor the "Un- ed" symphony, and the im- Beethoven Symphony No. flat major.

Schuricht's conducting is d by a continuous, unre- g guiding hand on the or- , there was no "coasting" time, and the large audi- oundly applauded the guest tor and the orchestra for presentation of the works, ularly the "Eroica."

day brought fine weather huge crowd to hear Charles conduct the orchestra concert of the current eth season.

pre-intermission offering e program was a perform- of Copland's "Quiet City," utilizes only the string sec- ns a trumpet and an Eng- lish horn soloist. Roger Voisin did an impeccable job of the trumpet solo parts and Louis Speyer gave a sensitive reading of the English horn. Both men received the enthusiastic plaudits of the audience.

The afternoon's and the season's final work was the famed Beethoven ninth, with Charles Munch conducting the orchestra and chorus, in a splendid performance of this overwhelming work. The chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson presented a brilliant performance marked by precision, verve and emotion, with the orchestra supplying a superb counter to the excellently trained choral unit.

Donald Gramm as bass soloist and John McCollum, tenor, were impressive in their presentation of the work, set to Schiller's "An Die Freude." Adele Addison's lovely soprano voice and Florence Kopleff's beautiful contralto were also heard.

Munch conducted the huge aggregation with great concentration and control, and a roar of applause at the end of the performance was acknowledged a number of times by orchestra, chorus, soloists and conductor. A fine ending to an enjoyable season of music on the spacious lawns and gardens of Tanglewood.

— L. F. M.

TIGHT BINDING

[265]

Tanglewood ets Record n Week End

(Special to The American)

enox, Mass., Aug. 12—The 20th son of the Berkshire Symphonic tival which came to an end yes- day after a brilliant perform- e of Beethoven's Symphony No. D minor, with final chorus on iller's "Ode to Joy" before an ence of 15,300 broke all records attendance by piling up a d total for the six week ends oncerts just short of 130,000. tendance for the three concerts e past week end devoted large- the music of Beethoven to- 35,100, more than 10,000 more the previousweek. When the es for the chamber music con- at the beginning of the sea- those of the public rehearsals 13,900 paid admissions for the t of the orchestra pension and 12,500 for Tanglewood-on- de of the last week are add- e total is a staggering 163,- was a brilliant week end of at Tanglewood under the of Charles Munch Friday ng and yesterday afternoon with the visiting conductor, Schuricht, Saturday evening. day's attendance of 11,700 he largest Saturday attend- f the summer. There was no n but that Beethoven's nu- still the best drawing attrac- Tanglewood.

Munch Conductor

e was an electric feeling in at Tanglewood even before nch took up his baton. The udience had come to hear ton and the Festival Chorus voices with four soloists what was to be the climax eason. No one was disap- in the brillian perform-was such haunting beauty usic and its performance, verence, especially in the ovement, that it was easy rstand why the young wom- sat across from us on the d tears as big as pearls down her face.

e chorus and soloists sang rted affirmation of faith the final movement, one ce more that he was wit- men and women together great conductor participat- hat glorious act of creation lone distinguishes man he other creatures on the he audience with its ova- refusal to budge as it ap- again and again left no anyone's mind that it had found what it had come for and in full measure.

As the season came to this glorious close plans were under way already for next season's festival. But one thing must be considered seriously by those planning for another year. Something must be done to relieve the congestion of the thousands of cars going to and from the concerts. There must be new and wider roads and improved handling of traffic. So slowly did cars move getting away from the concert that hundreds of drivers were forced to pull overheated cars to the side of the roads and wait for water or until traffic had thinned.

Several busses of Waterbury music lovers, including one of 35 young people from Beth El Synagog, were in attendance.

S.M.

The navy's 14 and 16-inch guns throw shells 20 miles.

Waterbury American, Monday, August 12, 1957—25

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 12 1957

Tanglewood Closes Out Its 20th Season With Tremendous Turnout

A brilliant close-to-the-20th-season of the Berkshire Music Festival was sounded this weekend at Tanglewood as the Boston Symphony orchestra scored triumphs in the Friday and Saturday night concerts and the Sunday afternoon concert. Musically, this year's festival was a triumph in itself.

A total of 35,100 persons traveled to Tanglewood this weekend to hear the three final concerts, each with a heavy accent on Beethoven. Charles Munch, conductor of the orchestra directed the Friday night event attended by 1840 persons and the Sunday afternoon concert attended by 15,300 persons. Guest conductor Carl Schuricht led the orchestra in the Saturday night concert with 11,668 persons attending.

This year's six-week season attracted a total of 162,936 persons to the weekend concerts, chamber music concerts, public rehearsals, and Tanglewood on Parade. Broken down, the figures are as follows: weekend concerts in the shed, 129549 persons; chamber music concerts, 7025 persons; public rehearsals, 13,869 persons; and Tanglewood on Parade, 12,493 persons.

Honnegger on Friday

The season was an especially rich one with presentation of some infrequently heard works. One of them was Honegger's Third Symphony, the "Liturgique," which was given a stirring performance at Friday night's concert. Honegger who died in 1955 was a close friend of Mr. Munch's. The conductor drew from the orchestra the spirit of the work, full of fury and angrily accented.

In the same concert, Beethoven's Violin Concerto with Isaac Stern as violin soloist was heard along with Beethoven's "Lenore" Overture No. 3. The violinist, noted for the purity of his tones and exactness of pitch. delivered an inspiring performance, while the orchestra combined for another effective performance.

Magnificent Saturday Night

Magnificent playing was heard in the Saturday night concert under the direction of 77-year-old Mr. Schuricht, a slight man who drew magical sounds from the orchestra for the last evening event of the season. A bright moon, some stars, and a cool nip in the air made it a perfect Tanglewood night.

The piece de resistance of the evening was Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E Flat, "Eroica," Op. 55, which surges with emotion from the depths of despair to triumph and liberation. The conflict, the compassion and tenderness of the work were brought out by Mr. Schuricht who was given along and sounding ovation following its presentation.

Dazzling

The theme of the work was brilliantly introduced in the first movement which voiced conflict and restlessness. The sweep of the violins was especially rich in this movement, achieving an organ-like effect.

Conflicting impulses continue in the second movement which is laden with sorrow brought out in the elegiac melody stated simply and effectively. The lively rhythms of the scherzo and the strength of the final were both dazzling.

"Unfinished" Symphony

A spell-binding performance of Schubert's Symphony in B Minor, "Unfinished," was lyrical and inspired. The entire orchestra collaborated to weave together melodies with perfect phrasing. The violins were finely shaded.

Opening the concert was Konzertante Musik Fur Orchester by Boris Blacher who dedicated the work to Mr. Schuricht. Starting out in a quiet tenor colored by dissonances, the various themes are introduced, expanded upon, and brought to full orchestra in a gay manner. The presentation was very bright.

Sunday Afternoon

The closing event of the festival on Sunday afternoon featured two works, Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," for Trumpet, English Horn, and Strings and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 in D Minor, with Final Chorus on Schiller's "Ode to Joy," Op. 125. Soloists for the Beethoven work were Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, bass.

An eloquent performance of the Beethoven work with the Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson ended with an ovation of many minutes from the audience. Soloists for the Copland were Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, who also delivered polished performances.

Tanglewood enthusiasts will be awaiting another such season next summer.

I. F. M.

Town Times
KVILLE, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 2,140

UG 15 1957

e Performances Final Week Of rkshire Festival

e of the best concert week- of the season, with the high- a performance of the Beeth- ninth Choral Symphony, eard at the Berkshire Music val, Tanglewood, Lenox, Saturday and Sunday. The was also the final concert six week season.

Saturday, guest conductor Schuricht led the Boston hony Orchestra in perfor- s of the Blacher "Konzer- Musik" Op. 10, the Schubert hony in B Minor the "Un- ed" symphony, and the im- Beethoven Symphony No. flat major.

Schuricht's conducting is ed by a continuous, unre- guiding hand on the or- there was no "coasting" time, and the large audi- roundly applauded the guest ctor and the orchestra for presentation of the works, ularly the "Eroica."

day brought fine weather huge crowd to hear Charles conduct the orchestra in t concert of the current eth season.

pre-intermission offering e program was a perform- of Copland's "Quiet City," utilizes only the string sec- ns a trumpet and an Eng- lish horn soloist. Roger Voi did an impeccable job of trumpet solo parts and Lo Speyer gave a sensitive reading the English horn. Both men ceived the enthusiastic plaudits the audience.

The afternoon's and the se son's final work was the fam Beethoven ninth, with Char Munch conducting the orches and chorus, in a splendid perfor ance of this overwhelming wo The chorus, prepared by Hu Ross and Alfred Nash Patters presented a brilliant performan marked by precision, verve a emotion, with the orchestra su plying a superb counter to the e cellently trained choral unit.

Donald Gramm as bass soloi and John McCollum, tenor, we impressive in their presentation the work, set to Schiller's "An D Freude." Adele Addison's love soprano voice and Florence Kop leff's beautiful contralto were als heard.

Munch conducted the huge ag gregation with great concentra tion and control, and a roar applause at the end of the per formance was acknowledged numbers of times by orchestra chorus, soloists and conductor. fine ending to an enjoyable season of music on the spacious lawn and gardens of Tanglewood.

— L. F. M.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 12 1957

Mitchell

BEAMING toward members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the festival chorus after performing Beethoven's Ninth Symphony yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch displays his pleasure over the result, while making one of his several recalls to the stage to accept the audience's ovation at the close of the 1957 festival season which broke all records.

Music Review

Finale at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE CURTAIN CALLS following the close of the final concert of the Berkshire Festival yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood were both thrilling and moving.

Charles Munch achieved a personal triumph conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and the applause surging from the record audience of the season, a total surpassed only once in Tanglewood history, seemed to increase as each recall found the audience pressing forward to be nearer the stage.

It was moving, too, when Munch brought from the ranks the two musicians who are retiring from the orchestra with this concert: Assistant-solo bass Gaston Dufresne and second trumpet Marcel La Fosse.

* * *

IN THIS TRIO of concerts of the Festival Beethoven had been the honored composer. Munch had saved the monumental Ninth for the close of his concert and of the season. On the preceding evening Carl Schuricht, in the second of his two appearances as guest conductor, chose the Eroica as his main offering.

It would be difficult to choose two men whose approach to music is more opposed and contrary than Munch and Schuricht. Munch is a relentless stimulator, always asking for a greater intensity; Schuricht is a calm and leisurely pedestrian, lingering when he finds a particularly fragrant flower, longer to dwell on its beauty and savor its aroma. Both viewpoints are valid and have their supporters. It is entirely possible and plausible for the same music lover to admire both.

* * *

MUNCH BEGAN his program with Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," a work the director of the Berkshire Music Center wrote almost 20 years ago, at almost the same time as the contemporary work Schuricht chose for his program, Blacher's "Konzertante Musik."

Copland's score is dated "Sept. 1940, Lenox, Mass." and he is quoted as saying that he derived it from some incidental music of his own written for a play by Irwin Shaw. He worked on it, he said, "as soon as my duties at the Berkshire Music Center were finished" and the locale was "in a barn-studio two miles down the road from Tangelwood."

* * *

IT IS a short, quiet, atmospheric piece for strings with only an English horn and a trumpet. Munch called Louis Speyer and Roger Voisin respectively to acknowledge the recognition of their outstandingly artistic playing. It is written in the most thrifty manner possible, identifiable at once in Copland's characterstic harmonic idom.

The orginal play was a fantasy of the night thoughts of people in a great city. Copland's music is sedentary and sultry, aimless yet reflecting the innermost churning of a man's mind in solitude. The composer was in the audience and Munch beckoned him to the front of the Shed to take the expression of definite approval the music provoked.

* * *

THE SOLOISTS in the Ninth symphony were Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kopleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, bass. Gramm proclaimed his "O Freunde" with dramatic eloquence and tonal splendor. The quartet were effective and positive and sang with sonorous power.

Munch was in confident command of the entire large band of participants. The chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson, produced an exceptional volume of tone. Munch gave the symphony spacious dimensions and brought the afternoon and the whole great Festival to a glorious close.

* * *

BORIS BLACHER'S "Konzertante Musik" for orchestra is dedicated to Schuricht and dates from 1937. Blacher was invited to serve on the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center in 1955 as a colleague of Copland. Saturday night's example of his work differs from the music whose acquaintance we made while he was here at Tanglewood. This is a straightforward, pleasant, short, 11-minute movement which is unharassed by any world problems and is just good transparent action.

Under Schuricht's fluoroscopic baton, the vertebrate structure of the composition was clearly discernible. Blacher starts with a short simple symmetrical song in the horns over a Latin-American dance-like [illegible] the bassoons. [illegible] almost immediately [illegible] main allegro in which the dance theme predominates. Within a regular and reiterated constant rhythm, he displaces accents with, it might seem, the intention of [illegible]teur. Suffice to say that neither in Schuricht's hands nor those of the Symphony players did any such suspicion become noticeable.

* * *

THE SECOND half gives way to the pleasant song of the introduction which is developed while the violas still continue the dance syncopation and the violins resume the first theme but in a mirrored upside-down version. The ending expands into broad majestic steps but hardly builds up to awesome stature.

Schuricht gave the Schubert "Unfinished" a comfortable, soothing reading. The orchestra flourishes under this sunny, tempered approach. Every detail is clearly heard and the beauty of the parts is never obscured by the effect of the whole.

The "Unfinished" is of the same narrow stretch of time as the Beethoven "Choral" symphony. As different as they are, they are still classic temples with which time has dealt even more kindly than with the structures of ancient Greece. They have the same architectural traits and at this moment, at least, are as permanent objects of admiration as it is permitted sublunar matter to be.

* * *

THE "EROICA" was already concerned with world affairs and the individuals who make them click. Beethoven was motivated to some degree by a worship of Napoleon which soon turned half-circle to disgust and disfavor. Copland was moved, he states, to write "music evocative of the inner distress of a society aware of its own insecurity." Honegger in his "Liturgique" symphony, played Friday evening, went to the scriptures for aid in expressing the inward revolt he was feeling to the last war's destructive influences. Beethoven in the Ninth, turned to Schiller's epic poem, the "Ode to Joy." Strangely enough, only the Germans as represented by Schuricht's exhibits of his fellow countrymen's current output, are free of mental burdens and tormenting agony. Egk, whom Schuricht played earlier in the Festival, and Blacher, heard Saturday night, here would appear to be free of thoughts and consideration for the woes of the world as a babe-in-arms.

* * *

IN QUICK retrospect this has been a highly praiseworthy Festival. The attendance figures are important but are not the true measure of the venture. The programs and the thought entailed in their planning and preparation have been completely worthy of commendation. It is impossible to build 18 programs to the satisfaction of everyone, but the seasoning of a major portion of the concerts with new works has given everyone food for their special predilections. There have been some fine performances and a few with which one might cavil, but those whose responsibility it was to organize and execute this Tanglewood year have reason to feel gratified and content.

[2067]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 12 1957

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

By PAUL HENRY LANG

TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Carl Schuricht, guest conductor, Saturday Night. The program:

Konzertante Musik.....Blacher
Unfinished Symphony.....Schubert
Symphony No. 3 ("Eroica").....Beethoven

Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, Sunday afternoon. The program:

Quiet City.....Copland
Symphony No. 9 in D minor.....Beethoven
(With Berkshire Festival Chorus; soloists, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass).

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—In my review of Friday's concert at Tanglewood I mentioned the hazards a composer faces by being bracketed with Beethoven at an orchestral concert. Aaron Copland's beautifully sculptured score "Quiet City"—for trumpet, English horn, and strings—prefaced nothing less than the Ninth Symphony, yet came off not only unscathed but proudly asserting that a good and original composition is immune to invidious comparisons and can take its place in any company.

One of the attractive features of "Quiet City" is the very skillful blending of two dissimilar instruments, the solo use of which in many other works does not often recall happy memories. The English horn was nostalgic without being maudlin in the capable hands of Louis Speyer, and the trumpet, while of course true to its virile character, was equally poetic. Roger Voisin played it superbly. Mr. Munch paced the piece felicitously and the public gave Mr. Copland a genuine ovation.

• • •

In a way, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony represents the end of the classical symphony as a genre. Its tone, proportions, architecture and weight carry symphonic thought to its limits, and that these limits were apparent to Beethoven himself is obvious in his attempt to call on the human voice for reinforcement. Though ostensibly still within the boundaries of the late classic orchestra, the score cannot be fully realized by faithfully hewing to its original specifications. The wind section must be helped by judicious doublings.

Also, by the time of the composition of this work, Beethoven was out of touch with the realities of the world, and though his ideas are palpably bursting the limits of the Eighteenth Century orchestra he inherited, there are many instances where he tried to conform to the boundaries of string and wind writing as he knew them when he was still an active executant musician. Various hands have tried to remedy these awkward spots.

Sunday afternoon's concert offered a good version, and except for a few perhaps inevitable passages everything was clear and well proportioned. Everything, that is, except the general tone which was that of breathlessness. It was not so much the fast tempos Mr. Munch insisted upon, rather the occasional lack of flexibility and pliability.

The stark rhythmic vigor of the first movement was most welcome, but it was offset by the inability of the strings to cope with the fast runs in a manner that would make them believable. The scherzo was properly swift and sweeping, the woodwinds miraculously delivering their needle-prick staccatos though the tempo was fierce, and the sprawling slow movement was well kept together. Portions of this movement fared well with Mr. Munch's tempos and the broad cantilena of the strings was nicely balanced by the wind solos, but a little more freedom would have made it even more shapely.

In the last movement Mr. Munch saw to it that the orchestra realizes its dual role. The accompaniments were well adjusted, on the other hand when the sopranos are cruelly stranded on a precipice holding an "A" for eternity as if they had bellows for lungs, the orchestra was there to support them. But in this movement, too, the pace was a bit over-generous. The instrumental variation that follows the tenor solo was near bedlam and the fugal writing could not be followed.

Of the solo quartet, the starter and anchor man, Adele Addison and Donald Gramm, had a few shaky moments, but eventually they joined Florence Kopleff and John McCollum in a steady ensemble. The chorus was excellent and its sound ample.

Saturday night's concert was rather trying. In the first place, because of severe traffic difficulties, unavoidable when 12,000 patrons show up, I unfortunately missed the Blacher piece.

Mr. Schuricht surprised me, he did not seem the same man who so ably led the Vienna Philharmonic during their winter visit to New York. Schubert's Unfinished Symphony was unconscionably slow, sentimental, and lacking in force. Neither was Beethoven's "Eroica" of one piece, except for the finale, which was given a rousing performance; the rest was uneven. Here and there were nicely turned passages, but the tempo fluctuated, the scherzo was slow, and Mr. Schuricht used italics in profusion.

His remarkable technical ability was in evidence every moment, but the graphic illustration of the goings-on was often exaggerated, though the large public evidently enjoyed the virtuoso air carving and applauded the visiting maestro very cordially.

Charles Munch

NEW YORK TIMES
MONDAY, AUGUST 12, 1957.

Music: Festival Finale

Tanglewood Concerts Present Contrasting Conductors, Munch and Schuricht

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11—The Berkshire Music Festival came to an end this afternoon with the thundering fortissimos of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. An audience of 15,300—300 under the record established in 1955—was on hand to throng the Tanglewood grounds and bask in a hot afternoon sun.

Charles Munch was the conductor this afternoon. Carl Schuricht conducted last night's concert, which consisted of Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Schubert's "Unfinished" and Beethoven's "Eroica" and was played before an audience of 11,668.

•

Two more dissimilar conductors would be hard to find. Mr. Schuricht is in no particular rush to get anywhere, while Mr. Munch gives the impression of a man pressed for time. Mr. Schuricht genially leans over his melodies in a leisurely manner, in the best German sentimental tradition. Mr. Munch, on the other hand, wastes little time with an emphasis of the melodic elements and his approach is much more objective.

In the Ninth Symphony, which was preceded by Aaron Copland's "Quiet City," Mr. Munch employed the Festivalt Chorus, Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Donald Gramm, bass. This was a very fast reading, not even lasting an hour, and it even omitted all the repeats in the second movement.

With this inexorable kind of pressing-on tactics, it was little wonder that the symphony sounded artificial. The long lines of the slow movement did not have much opportunity to breathe, and even the last movement, taken at a more considerate tempo, lacked the intensity it should have.

But the last movement, if nothing else, was loud. The clear-voiced young singers of the Festival Chorus piled into the writing with enormous confidence and vocal security. Beethoven's hard-driven writing "in alt" held little terrors for them. The vocal quartet, too, was competent, and dealt handily with some of the most ungrateful writing in the history of vocal music.

The performance of the Copland work was distinguished by the beautiful solo playing of two Boston Symphony veterans—Roger Voisin, trumpeter, and Louis Speyer, Englishhorn player. Mr. Speyer's concluding, long-held pianissimo was wind playing at its finest.

•

Mr. Schuricht's conducting, on Saturday evening, offered somewhat of a study in contrasts, what with one of the slowest "unfinished" symphonies on record, followed by an "Eroica" that was much more direct and logical. One was puzzled at certain details in the Schumert work. Why the revised percussion part, with the tympanist stroking away at intervals not indicated in the score? Why the lingering over the second subject? Why the not very subtle ritard at the end of the slow movement?

Yet Mr. Schuricht does get a marvelously mellow tone from the Boston Symphony, and his is a first-rate ear. No matter what one thought of the interpretive idiosyncracies, the various choirs of the orchestra were kept in beautiful balance, and the texture throughout was as clearly etched as the veins on one of the leaves of the oaks bounding Tanglewood.

And the "Eroica" pursued a forthright course. The tempos were deliberate, but they were not broken up. By taking the Scherzo at his curiously slow tempo, the difficult horn trio for the first time in this listener's experience sounded positively golden.

And what horns the Boston Symphony has!

•

Mr. Schuricht is, in short, a conductor with very personal and very romantic ideas. He gives himself considerable leeway. Some may like it, and some may not, but he does represent a certain tradition, and it was interesting to make further acquaintance with his work. Conductors with such strong personalities do not appear too often.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,991 - S. 855,847

AUG 12 1957

AT TANGLEWOOD:

Beethoven Draws Whopping 35,108

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 12 — Beethoven's Ninth Symphony drew the second largest crowd in the 20-year history of the Berkshire Festival yesterday afternoon. With 15,300 people present for the performance and 35,108 for the weekend, Beethoven reigned unrivaled in popularity — as usual. The performance by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony undoubtedly had its drawing power, though it proved less memorable than anticipated.

What it had was momentum. An inexorable drive dominated everything but the slow movement. That the final measures could be dispatched at incredible speed may be attributed to the high calibre of virtuosity the orchestra possesses. Seldom has a performance ended joyously so overwhelmingly. It caused a tremendous outburst of applause from an almost breathless audience.

Finale Brilliant

The finale justified the acclaim. Soloists and chorus were keyed to brilliance. They were swept along in the surge of joy that the movement imparts. They, too, must have been somewhat breathless, for all did not come clear. Donald Gramm led off impressively with the baritone recitative.

Adele Addison, soprano, Florence Kipleff, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and Gramm made a well-balanced quartet, though Miss Addison strained a bit in the cruelest passages of her part. The festival chorus, admirably prepared by Hugh Ross and [illegible], sang with the [illegible] and brilliance.

Nonetheless, the performance raised questions. Where was, for instance, the mystery of the opening measures as well as the tone of the whole first movement? Why did the scherzo have to be paced so fast? Why did not Munch probe more deeply into the adagio as he has on other occasions? These questions could not however dim the glory of the work, and Beethoven was well served.

Superbly Played

The program began with Copland's [illegible] superbly played by Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn. Voisin, especially, achieved some haunting pianissimos that served to accentuate the nature of the piece. As one of Copland's finest creations, it created its spell enduringly in this performance.

Another towering masterpiece, the Eroica Symphony, became the only Beethoven entry in the Saturday night program. Blachers Konzertante music and Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony completed the program. Carl Schuricht conducted. The audience totaled 11,668. The dampness lay heavily over Tanglewood, and somewhat on the performances.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 57,006

AUG 12 1957

Beethoven Still Top Draw

15,300 Attend Lenox Concert

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — This summer's record-breaking audience of 15,300 attended the first Berkshire Music Festival concert by the Boston Symphony, under Charles Munch, yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood.

The grand total for weekend concerts, chamber music, public rehearsals and Tanglewood on Parade was 132,936. This is the largest number to attend a summer of Tanglewood concerts since their inception 20 years ago.

Weak Opening

Yesterday's program opened with a weak aperitif, executed by Aaron Copland, titled "Quiet City." The important business of the afternoon was Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. It's significant that of all composers, Beethoven has always been and still is the biggest box-office draw.

The major task of the entire festival was the Beethoven Ninth. It might be in order to scan briefly the rehearsal on Saturday morning that contributed to the superperformance it received at the formal concert yesterday. The rehearsal, by the way, was open to the public. The proceeds from these Saturday morning rehearsals benefit the Boston Symphony's pension fund.

Most of these rehearsals are more or less routine. No such matter - of - factness applied to the Ninth Symphony. Phrase after phrase was repeated in Munch's search for exactly the right nuances and rhythmic exactitudes. Several attempts were necessary before the festival chorus of 150 (students from the Berkshire Music Center) managed to rise as a unit exactly two measures before a certain point in the score. At yesterday's performance they weren't a split-second late.

Much Fuss

There was much fuss over the precise beginning of quartet and chorus in "Joy, Thou Spark From Heav'n Immortal."

Viewing the finished product as a continuous experience, one was deeply moved by its omnipotence. The choral finale, of course, has its very real challenges. It must sound almost fiercely elated, which can be projected only with the kind of virile tempos used at this performance.

The merciless score in high female voices (notably the soprano soloist) and mutitudinous tones on complex patterns can easily digress into tonal chaos. They didn't.

Telling Transition

Even more telling was the transition from martial activity in the finale to the mood of mystic devotion which Beethoven interjected in "Kneel Before Him, All You Millions."

In brief, top order resources were applied with interpretive acumen, and both were obviously blanketed in inspiration.

The orchestra was at its best in the first, second, and fourth movements. Mysterious murmurings of the opening movement were suspenseful and purely intoned. It was marvelous interpretation from the analytical standpoint. Boundaries of the development sections were as if chiselled in rock. The coda was made to spend its enthusiasm and majesty freely.

No Monotony

A different kind of adventure was experienced in the scherzo. Here was a dance movement on a monumental scale. The unfeigned repetition of themes was divest of monotony through tonal purity and clarity of counterpoint.

The slow third movement was less securely tied together. It encountered a few static moments during which the concentration was on individual solos and phrases rather than on integrated values.

The chorus had been expertly prepared by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson. Only a few were professional singers.

One slight flaw in the choral performance was sometimes ambiguous pronunciation of the Germans. Some of this may have been inevitable, which gives cause to wonder whether Beethoven's zeal to glorify Schiller's "Ode to Joy" was exceeded by his decision to use voices as word-pronouncing instruments.

This performance certainly did prove that it does not require a legion of singers to expose the heroism of the Beethoven Ninth. Phrases opened and closed with absolute punctuality. The body of tone was balanced and powerful, and a very real sense of dramatic import was encircled in every choral line.

Donald Gramm rightfully placed emphasis on the oratorical style of the bass score. He made a potent declamation of the opening statement, "Joy, thou spark, etc." He tended to force his tone to achieve a lofty impression, but it was engaging singing notwithstanding.

Soprano Superb

Adele Addison was superb in the pitiless soprano score which settles for nothing short of tonal fortitude in high, penetrating tones. Her voice blended well with Florence Kopleffs' contralto. Beethoven wasn't as generous to her, but she made an excellent impression.

John McCollum sang the tenor part with good volume and a penchant toward operatic objectives.

Now we come to Copland's "Quiet City." It works hard at setting a pastoral, nostalgic mood—and succeeds. That's about as far as it gets. The recitative solos in trumpet by Roger Voisin were well-phrased with few tonal blemishes.

Louis Speyer's English horn solos were richly intoned and fluidly phrased.

The work wanders on and on in this quietly-rhapsodic vein, causing you to wonder where it started, where it's going—and why. It has its rises and falls of interest in contrasts of volume. The orchestra played it as well as possible, with commensurate results.

For this, Copland was present to take a bow.

C2673

NEWBURGH, N. Y. NEWS

AUG 17 1957

Beethoven's 9th Run-of-Mill At Tanglewood Presentation

By BERNARD LOTH

The Boston Symphony Orchestra closed the season of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood last Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony before an audience estimated at between 15,000 and 20,000 persons. The "Shed" was filled to its 6,000 seat capactiy, and the acres of lawns surrouning the Shed were just a sea of humanity.

Beethoven's Ninth or Choral Symphony has been performed at Tanglewood on many occasions, this listener having been present at one of the previous presentations a year or two ago. The contrast between the two interpretations was most striking, particularly because both were conducted by Charles Munch, who received such universal critical acclaim for his conducting of the Brahms Second Piano Concerto last week earlier.

When Mr. Munch conducted the Ninth a year or two ago, he seemed to be so immersed in the French Impressionist style of music that he appeared to be trying to add a Debussy flavor to Beethoven with a strangely free and unrhythmic interpretation of the necessarily rhythmic Beevthoven music. In his conducting of the same work last Sunday he turned his back on his previous interpretation so firmly that he went to the other extreme with almost as unsatisfactory results. Mr. Munch pressed the orchestra to paly the faster sections of the symphony at such a speed that, at times, some members of the orchestra were under considerable strain trying to keep up with to play the faster sections of the the orchestra sounded ragged in places, and the great, majestic dignity usually associated with the major Beethoven works was lost in the scramble.

Perhaps the perfection of the previous Sunday's concert led this listener to expect another unusually inspiring afternoon of music, thereby sharpening the disappointment when the presentation turned out to be a run-of-the-mill product.

It is well known that just as any human can do some things better than others, some conductors have their favorite composers in whose music they may find greater rapport. It is possible that Mr. Munch also has his favorites.

There was no question, however, as to the identity of the favorite of the huge audience. The applause continued for close to 10 minutes with numerous curtain-calls by the soloists: Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Donald Gramm, bass; and Alfred Nash Paterson, one of the conductors who prepared the 120-voice chorus. When Mr. Munch took his solo bows, however, chorus, orchestra and audience joined in a great tribute to the beloved conductor.

The local music-lover may well find it more convenient next summer to attend a music-festival. The rumors of the possible moving of the Empire State Festival will, if true, bring that festival to a lovely and conveninet location nearer Newburgh than Ellenville is. There is also a good possibility of a new festival of major proportions locating within 50 miles of Newburgh. The organizers of the new festival were asked to consider Newburgh for their site, but the suggestion was turned down because of airplane interference and lack of sufficient summer population.

[268]

Mitchell

GRASSHOPPERS had difficulty finding many open spaces on the lawns of Tanglewood for the performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony yesterday afternoon by Dr. Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival chorus. The concert drew 15,300 music lovers, swelling the attendance for the 1957 season to 162,936 for a new record. On Friday night, 8,140 attended and Saturday night's concert with Carl Schuricht conducting, drew 11,668.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 12 1957

Final Tanglewood Weekend Helps To Break All Records

TANGLEWOOD—The 1957 Berkshire Festival went into the record book today as the most successful ever held in the 20 years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been giving concerts in the Music Shed.

Yesterday afternoon's crowd of 15,300 was not the highest for a single concert at Tanglewood, but it helped to boost the total paid attendance for this season to 162,936, an all-time high. Ticket sales totaled $366,122 to establish another record for receipts.

Last year, when 140,985 persons attended the concerts, ticket sales amounted to $297,956, and in 1955, the 151,659 persons attending the festival events paid out a total of $329,383.

Single High in 1951

In 1951, the year Dr. Charles Munch made his debut at Tanglewood, following the death of Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, a crowd of 15,800 poured onto the grounds and into the Music Shed for the Aug. 11 concert. Two years ago when Rudolf Serkin appeared as piano soloist with the BSO, 15,624 attended.

The 41 student events and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center this season drew approximately 21,000 persons. Total attendance at the Bach-Mozart portion of the 1957 festival season was 22,052, compared with 17,697 last season. The total ticket sales for the six concerts amounted to $52,662, about $11,963 more than in 1956.

Last Is Biggest

The [illegible] weekend concerts in the Music Shed, devoted each week this summer to the works of a special composer — Tchaikovsky, Berlioz, Brahms and Beethoven—drew a total of 107,497, compared to 94,252 last season. This weekend was the biggest of the season. A total of 35,108 attended the three weekend performances.

Attendance at the six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings was lower than last season, but the Saturday morning rehearsals of the BSO attracted 13,869, about 3,400 more than last year. The chamber music concerts drew 7,025, compared to 10,272 in 1956.

Parade Sets Record

A new record for attendance at Tanglewood on Parade was set this season with a total of 12,493. The gross income was $32,414.

Immediately following yesterday afternoon's concert, Dr. Munch drove to Boston where he boarded a plane for his home in Paris. He will rest for a few days in France before leaving for Lebanon, Beirut, where he will appear as a guest conductor next Monday evening. After that he will conduct in Athens, Greece.

This was Dr. Munch's most active season at Tanglewood since he took over as musical director of the BSO. His decision this year to feature the works of four great composers on each of the four weekends in the Shed was an innovation for Tanglewood. The appearances of soloists, Isaac Stern, violinist, and Rudolf Serkin, pianist, helped to draw huge crowds whenever they performed. But yesterday's performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, with four soloists and the full festival chorus of more than 200 voices, was the real high light of the season.

330 Students

The Berkshire Music Center, the BSO's summer school, had an enrollment of 330 students this summer.

A total of 4,832 persons became members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, contributing a total of $20,285.75, which helps to support the school. Added to this total are scholarship grants amounting to $6,853, and a sum from ticket resale of $282, making a total for the season of $27,138.75. Through the terms of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, about $12,000 of this amount is matched by the Foundation for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

New Opera Program

Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department at the Music Center, introduced a new program at the school this season. In addition to the presentation of the world premiere of Mark Bucci's one-act opera, "A Tale for a Dear Fair," Goldovsky and his staff carried on a program of training for stage directors and conductors. The program was conducted under the joint auspices of the Berkshire Music Center and the leader-training program of the New England Opera Theater. Opera scenes on Monday nights demonstrated these techniques and also showed some of the experimental scenic materials of fiberglas, plastic and aluminum with which the department had been working under Mr. Goldovsky's direction.

Perry Comments

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, today expressed his appreciation "to the many people whose generous cooperation helped to make the summer a successful one."

He mentioned especially the "intelligent and patient handling of traffic and parking by the state police and police officers of Lenox and Stockbridge," the cooperation of the Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield Chamber of Commerce, local press, the information centers at Lee, Lenox and Great Barrington, telephone company employes in Lenox and the Post Office staff.

BLANK PAGE

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,443
AUG 15 1957

[270]

New 20-Year Records Are Established as 1957 Berkshire Music Festival Closes

By George E. Membrino

The Boston Symphony Orchestra reached great heights Friday evening before a large audience in the superb reading of Honegger's "Symphony No. 3" Liturgique. Mr. Munch, a master at conducting contemporary works, used his entire self in expressing Honegger's programatic reflection of the immediate postwar period to World War II.

The composition, with its complex harmonies and rhythms, is one that deserves more frequent hearings. The first movement, Allegro marcato, is entitled Dies irae. This first movement reminds us of time of war and revolution. The Adagio espressivo movement is called "De profundis clamavi, to remind us that purity and trust can still be found in Man. The final Andante poi moto movement, Dona nobis pacem, is to depict Man's rise above the world's stupidity, nationalism, customs, barriers, taxes, wars, and the like, which Man has invented to persecute Man.

Isaac Stern appeared as soloist in the presentation of Beethoven's "Violin Concerto in D major, op. 61." His warm personality and unsurpassed musical sense endeared both himself and the music to the entire audience. The solo cadenza in the first Allegro movement was worthy of special mention.

Guest Conductor Carl Schuricht was the person selected to lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music including two of the most well-known and loved symphonies. Expressed feeling and love was evident in the rendition of Schubert's "Symphony in B minor," better known as the "Unfinished Symphony." Beethoven's "Symphony No. 3, in E flat major, Eroica," concluded the evening's program in fine order. Particularly beautiful was the second movement, Marcia funebre, with its strong melodic line and ever so slow rhythm.

To bring the curtain down on the 1957 Tanglewood season, Mr. Munch, the orchestra and the Festival Chorus combined forces to present Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9, in D minor." The effect was one that leaves one wanting more. The audience numbered over 15,000, and its prolonged applause was a true indication of the extraordinary performance afforded this symphony. Adele Addison, soprano, and Donald Gramm, bass, were the outstanding soloists in Beethoven's colossal choral symphony

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox concluded Sunday with the most successful summer in the 20-year history of the organization. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was a record $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these week-ends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach week-end, and 11,327 for the Mozart week-end, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. The 1956 total was $39,699.

Four week-ends of concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky-Stravinsky week-end; 19,307 for the Berlioz week-end; 25,592 for the Brahms week-end, which included a rainy Sunday; and 35,108 for the final Beethoven week-end. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six chamber music concerts or Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

Among awards presented on Saturday by Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, was the Albert Spalding prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body. New this year, the award consists of the income from a fund established by Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington in memory of the eminent violinist. The award went to Morey Ritz of Hempstead, N. Y., a graduate of Queens College, who is studying at the Mannes College of Music. She appeared as soloist with the student orchestra in a performance of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor on August 8.

The figures released by the Berkshire Festival, showing that more people than ever attended this season's concerts at Tanglewood, reflect the influence of the new Massachusetts Turnpike on the whole Berkshire resort area. The Turnpike has just about halved the travel time between Boston and the Lee-Lenox-Stockbridge region. Although small businesses dependent upon transient trade along the old Jacob's Ladder Route are undoubtedly suffering now that traffic by-passes them, the Berkshire Festival, the summer theatres, dance groups and other musical groups, summer camps, and hotels of the Berkshire vacationland have already tasted a new boom brought on by the Turnpike. The problem is now how to accomodate this increase and still keep the Berkshires pretty and countrified, which is the basis of the area's appeal.

Cape Cod Standard Times (e)
HYANNIS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 16,916
SEP 18 1957

Music Festival

Attendance figures from the Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra provide some food for local thought.

The figures show that a great number of persons, 162,936 to be exact, spent $366,122 to hear fine music in the rustic atmosphere of the rolling hills of Western Massachusetts.

All phases of the festival fared well, the figures indicate—in fact, the best in history.

In reading the report, a person might wonder if perhaps there isn't some similar affair that could be performed on Cape Cod during the Summer.

With the Cape Cod Conservatory of Music and Arts completing its first Summer of existence, and reporting a goodly response to its offerings, it would appear that as the conservatory grew, it might well consider a Cape Cod Festival, with concerts, dances and other programs by leading artists.

Indications are that conservatory officials have given this some thought, too, having looked into the possibility of acquiring a large estate in the town of Barnstable that could be used for such festival purposes.

It would appear that such a program could be of economic as well as cultural benefit to the Cape.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
AUG 14 1957

Tanglewood Attendance Record Set

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1957 Berkshire Festival, which closed last Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., outdrew the 1955 and 1956 series, according to attendance figures announced yesterday. This summer's total was 162,936, as compared with 140,985 last summer and 151,659 in 1955.

The six concerts of Bach and Mozart work played by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players during the festival's first two week ends attracted 22,052 listeners, 4,355 more than the corresponding 1956 figure. The twelve concerts played by the full ocrhestra during the last four week ends drew 107,497 persons, compared with 94,252 in 1956. The attendance for the six Wednesday night chamber music concerts fell off, from last summer's 10,272 to 7,025. The attendance for the orchestra's six open Saturday morning rehearsals was 13,860; last summer's four rehearsals were heard by 10,490.

The annual "Tanglewood on Parade" benefit for the Berkshire Music Center last Thursday scored a record 12,493; its previous high mark, 10,050, was made in 1954. The forty-one concerts given by the Center during the Tanglewood season had approximately 21,000 listeners.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496
AUG 15 1957

The Oracle

THE ASSUMPTION OF THE BLESSED VIRGIN MARY AUGUST FIFTEENTH
"ASSUMPTA EST MARIA"

She who had been a living heaven
For God of old,
Came, on a day, to death's dark portal
As sunset's gold

Glinted on cornfields white to harvest,
(Ah! fact sublime!)
Fields that the Mind of God had thought of,
Ere dawn of time.

Saw she, in dream, her dear Son, walking
Through yellow wheat?
Fain would I think she caught His footfall
And accents sweet:

"Leave all things else, and come, My Mother,
Possess your Son!
Death has no sting, the grave no terrors,
My stainless one!"

Clothed with the sun, the moon beneath her,
Halts she a pace;
Gazing at earth with wistful pity,
Till Christ's fair face

Shines through the mists that hid Him from her
These many years!
Roses and lilies breathe their fragrance
Through drenching tears!

MABEL TOTTIE, r. c.
Selected from "Fulfillment"
A Book of Verse by Religious of the Cenacle

☼ ☼

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 12 1957

Tanglewood Season Ends; Total Attendance 162,936

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood wound up over the weekend, with almost 27,000 persons attending concerts in the big shed Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The crowds, the largest of the season, swelled the attendance for the six-week festival to 162,936.

Concluding Concerts

Carl Schuricht conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra Saturday night in a program which included Boris Blacher's "Konzertanta Musik," Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9." Mr. Blacher, who was at Tanglewood two years ago as a member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition and theory faculty, dedicated his work to the European conductor.

The final concert Saturday afternoon, attended by some 15,000 persons, was conducted by Charles Munich, the Boston Symphony's Music director. The opening selection was Aaron Copland's "Quiet City." The second half of the program was devoted to Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9," in which the orchestra was joined by the Festival Chorus and vocal soloists Florence Kopleff, Adele Addison, John McCollum and Donald Gramm.

Attendance Breakdown

The breakdown on the attendance figures this year was as follows: musical concerts, 129,549; weekly chamber music concerts, 7,025; public rehearsals of the orchestra, 13,869, and the Tanglewood on Parade program, 12,493.

Union Leader (m) & (e)
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 46,517
AUG 12 1957

SEASON ENDS

LENOX, Mass. — (UPI) — The Boston Symphony orchestra has concluded its Berkshire Music Festival season at Tanglewood.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Independent Democrat
Circ. 116,012
AUG 17 1957

Tanglewood Draws 162,936 to Events

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. drew 162,936 visitors during the 20th season just ended.

In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955, 151,649.

An additional 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to friends of the music center this season. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's festival was $366,122 as compared to $297,956 last year, and $329,383 in 1955.

FORT WAYNE, IND.
NEWS SENTINEL
Circ. D. 76,286
SEP 13 1957

162,936 Attend Berkshire Events

LENOX, Mass. — The total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival here at Tanglewood, during the 20th season was 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.) An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.
NEW YORKER
Circ. D. 27,390 - S. 27,892
AUG 14 1957

Berkshire Festival Largely Attended

Berkshire Festival concerts for the 1957 season, by the Boston Symphony orchestra, conducted on Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events in this 20th season was approximately 162,936. In 1956 140,985 persons attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955, 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 persons attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Music Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music cener, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9,787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 42,936
AUG 13 1957

MUSIC FESTIVAL ENDS

LENOX. — (UP) — The Boston Symphony orchestra has concluded its Berkshire Music Festival season at Tanglewood. Some 15,000 persons heard the symphony end the the season yesterday with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch. Audiences for the weekend concerts, chamber music concerts, public rehearsals and Tanglewood on Parade performances totaled 129,549 persons this year.

The Lakeville Journal

162,936 VISITORS ATTENDED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL THIS SUMMER

Public response to the Berkshire Festival has a direct economic impact on the business health of Northwest Connecticut, quite separate from the Festival's mammoth contribution to the cultural assets in the area. As attendance at Tanglewood goes, so go the resort, entertainment and vacation-service businesses in our Connecticut towns. For this reason, the following terminal report of the Tanglewood season should be of local interest.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season which closed last Sunday, August 11, was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.) An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,[illegible] for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with [illegible] in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699.)

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of [illegible],497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky/Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is anticipated for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110 with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9,787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

(Continued on Page 12)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
AUG 18 1957

Tanglewood Attendance, Receipts Break Record

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival set a record this season at Tanglewood with a total attendance of 162,936 as compared with the previous record season of 1955, which drew 151,659. Ticket receipts were $366,122, outstripping the figure of two years ago by $36,739. The 1956 figures were 140,985 and $297,956. Both the twelve concerts by the full orchestra and the six of the Bach-Mozart chamber orchestra series gained over the last two years. The Wednesday night chamber music concerts, however, drew approximately 3,000 fewer than last summer's corresponding series.

Beethoven was apparently the greatest drawing card in the four week ends of the chamber music series. The last three concerts (Aug. 9, 10 and 11), mainly devoted to his music, drew 35,108 persons. The Tchaikovsky - Stravinsky week end (July 19, 20 and 21) was heard by 27,490, and 25,592 listened to the programs of Aug. 2, 3 and 4, devoted mainly to Brahms. The programs featuring Berlioz' music (July 26, 27 and 28) fared somewhat less well, with an attendance of 19,307. Brahms, however, was handicapped, since it rained during much of the Saturday night concert, and before and during the first half of the Sunday program.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 13 1957

'57 Music Festival Attendance, Sales Up From Last Year

Both attendance and ticket sale at the 1957 Berkshire Music Festival soared far above the level of a year ago, according to a summary report on the Tanglewood season issued today.

The total number of visitors to festival events during the season ended Sunday was 162,936. That compared with 140,985 a year ago and 151,649 in 1955. The total of ticket sales this year was $366,122, compared with $297,956 last year and $329,383 in 1955.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend. The total of 22,052 was up from 17,697 a year ago. The four weekends of concerts in the big music shed were presented for a total audience of 107,497. That compared with 94,252 last year.

The attendance at the six weekly chamber music concerts fell off this year from 10,272 to 7,025.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony were again open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Those six events were attended by 13,869, who paid $12,110.

The Tanglewood-on-Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's music school, drew a record 12,493 persons, who paid $12,414.

DAVENPORT IA.
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
AUG 25 1957

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
"When words have failed us 'neath the weight of care,
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"!
—Anonymous

THE 1957 SEASON OF the Berkshire Festival concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass. has ended and has furnished some interesting statistics. The total number of visitors during the season, its 20th, totaled 162,936 as compared with 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955. An additional 21,000 people attended the 41 student and others concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total ticket sale amounted to $366,122 in 1957; $297,956 in 1956 and $329,383 in 1955. The Bach concerts drew audiences of 10,725 and the Mozart series, 11,327. The Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Orchestra's summer school of music at Tanglewood had a total enrollment of 330 students.

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,274
AUG 12 1957

New England Briefs

15,000 AT CONCERT

LENOX, Mass. (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded its 1957 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which attracted 15,000 persons.

An orchestra spokesman said a total of 129,549 persons attended the various concerts of the 1957 Tanglewood season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 17 1957

Tourism Triumphant

ALTHOUGH GE was still in the economic doldrums this week, the next biggest industry in the Berkshires was enjoying a sellers' market. By all available indices, the county's tourist business seems almost certain to break all records by the time the season draws to its official close on Labor Day.

The most striking evidence of all came from Tanglewood, which closed its season in a blaze of greenbacks Sunday as a near-record crowd of 15,300 paying customers overflowed the giant Shed and converted the grounds outside to a land-locked replica of Jones Beach on a hot day. The turnout swelled the Music Festival's total attendance for the season to 162,936 against a previous (1955) record of 151,659. The 1957 take at the box office was $366,122, another all-time record.

But Tanglewood's was not the only success story. At the Music Barn in Lenox, jazz and folk music was drawing record crowds; at Stockbridge, the Playhouse was staging repeated sellouts; up north, the Williamstown Summer Theater was running better than 30 per cent over its 1956 figures. The major inns, not to mention the spate of newer motels, were turning weekenders away for want of space; and most gratifying of all, the boom seemed to be stretching all the way up to the Northern Berkshire establishments that had been singing the blues earlier this summer in anticipation of disastrous competition from towns closer to the new Massachusetts Turnpike.

Although much of the good business was doubtless attributable to good weather and to the promotional efforts of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the Turnpike loomed as a large if hard-to-measure factor in the picture, bringing in a flow of extra business from easterly areas that had provided few tourists in past years. Best of all, there seemed every reason to suppose that the flow would increase to a flood in the future when construction now under way has hooked up the Pike with the New York Thruway system to the west.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
AUG 16 1957

TALKING IT OVER

American Chamber Orchestra Will Play in South America

By Emma Van Wormer

The first American Chamber Orchestra to visit South America is the Zimbler Sinfonietta, to leave Sunday by air for a tour to include appearances in 24 cities in 15 countries.

The tour is sponsored by the U. S. State Department in association with President Eisenhower's Special International Program. Accompanying the Sinfonietta will be James Pappoutsis, flute; Roger Voisin, trumpet; John Holmes, oboe and English horn; Menahem Pressler, piano.

Josef Zimbler, music director, is assisted by Rosario Mazzeo, manager; Miss Rina Ro[illegible], South American representative, and Ralph Pottle, librarian. Five concerts each week will feature programs drawn from a repertoire of works ranging from Bach to Tschaikowsky and Shostakovitch. Each weeek a work by an American composer will be performed. Represented in this group: Barber, Copland, Porter and Piston. The Zimbler Sinfonietta played in the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood in the season just closed.

During the "Tanglewood" 1957 season, concluding with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth by the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible] Dr. Charles Munch conducting, approximately 16[illegible] attended Festival concerts by the Symphony. An additional [illegible] attended student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. "Tanglewood on Parade," annual benefit for the Music Center, set a new attendance record this season with 12,493 present.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,950
AUG 14 1957

Tanglewood Reports Audience Increase

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concluded Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,963. (In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 155,659.) An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,000
SEP 12 1957

162,936 At TANGLEWOOD

A total of 162,936 persons attended Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood this season. This compared with 140,985 last year and 151,659 in 1955

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,362
AUG 16 1957

Music festival at Tanglewood ended Sunday

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood concluded last Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.)

An additional 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 and in it was $329,383.

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,725
SEP 12 1957

162,936 At TANGLEWOOD

A total of 162,936 persons attended Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood this season. This compared with 140,985 last year and 151,659 in 1955.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,786
AUG 15 1957

Berkshire Festival Concerts Conclude

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, concluded Aug. 11 with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $279,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

[2717]

The Lakeville Journal

162,936 VISITORS ATTENDED CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD FESTIVAL THIS SUMMER

Public response to the Berkshire Festival has a direct economic impact on the business health of Northwest Connecticut, quite separate from the Festival's mammoth contribution to the cultural assets in the area. As attendance at Tanglewood goes, so go the resort, entertainment and vacation-service businesses in our Connecticut towns. For this reason, the following terminal report of the Tanglewood season should be of local interest.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season which closed last Sunday, August 11, was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.) An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales of this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1956 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,862. (The 1956 total was $39,699.)

Four weekends of concerts in the 5,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky/Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9,787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

(Continued on Page 12)

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
AUG 18 1957

Tanglewood Attendance, Receipts Break Record

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival set a record this season at Tanglewood with a total attendance of 162,936 as compared with the previous record season of 1955, which drew 151,659. Ticket receipts were $366,122, outstripping the figure of two years ago by $36,739. The 1956 figures were 140,985 and $297,956. Both the twelve concerts by the full orchestra and the six of the Bach-Mozart chamber orchestra series gained over the last two years. The Wednesday night chamber music concerts, however, drew approximately 3,000 fewer than last summer's corresponding series.

Beethoven was apparently the greatest drawing card in the four week ends of the chamber music series. The last three concerts (Aug. 9, 10 and 11), mainly devoted to his music, drew 35,108 persons. The Tchaikovsky - Stravinsky week end (July 19, 20 and 21) was heard by 27,490, and 25,592 listened to the programs of Aug. 2, 3 and 4, devoted mainly to Brahms. The programs featuring Berlioz' music (July 26, 27 and 28) fared somewhat less well, with an attendance of 19,307. Brahms, however, was handicapped, since it rained during much of the Saturday night concert, and before and during the first half of the Sunday program.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,541
AUG 13 1957

'57 Music Festival Attendance, Sales Up From Last Year

Both attendance and ticket sale at the 1957 Berkshire Music Festival soared far above the levels of a year ago, according to a summary report on the Tanglewood season issued today.

The total number of visitors to festival events during the season ended Sunday was 162,936. That compared with 140,985 a year ago and 151,649 in 1955. The total of ticket sales this year was $366,122, compared with $297,956 last year and $329,383 in 1955.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1,200-seat theater-concert hall. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend. The total of 22,052 was up from 17,697 a year ago. The four weekends of concerts in the big music shed were presented for a total audience of 107,497. That compared with 94,252 last year.

The attendance at the six weekly chamber music concerts fell off this year from 10,272 to 7,025.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony were again open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. Those six events were attended by 13,869, who paid $12,110.

The Tanglewood-on-Parade benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the orchestra's music school, drew a record 12,493 persons, who paid $32,414.

News
WEST HARTFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,000
SEP 12 1957

162,936 At TANGLEWOO

A total of 162,936 person tended Berkshire Festival ev at Tanglewood this season. This compared with 140,985 last year and 151,659 in 1955

DAVENPORT IA.
DEMOCRAT & TIMES
AUG 25 1957

Catching The Beat In The Music World

BY INA WICKHAM

"How many of us ever stop to think
Of music as a wondrous magic link
"With God, taking sometimes the place of prayer—
"When words have failed us within the twilight of care.
"Music, that knows no country race or creed,
"But gives to each, according to his need"?
—Anonymous

THE 1957 SEASON OF the Berkshire Festival concerts given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass. has ended and has furnished some interesting statistics. The total number of visitors during the season, its 20th, totaled 162,936 as compared with 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955. An addiional 21,000 people attended the 41 student and others concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total ticket sale amounted to $366,122 in 1957; $297,956 in 1956 and $329,383 in 1955. The Bach concerts drew audiences of 10,- and the Mozart series, 11,- Berkshire Music Cen- Orchestra's of music at Tan- total enrollment udents.

Italian News
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 13,362
AUG 16 1957

Music festival at Tanglewood ended Sunday

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood concluded last Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.)

An additional 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 and in 1955 it was $329,383.

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,274
AUG 12 1957

New England Briefs

15,000 AT CONCERT

LENOX, Mass. (UP) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded its 1957 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which attracted 15,000 persons.

An orchestra spokesman said a total of 129,549 persons attended the various concerts of the 1957 Tanglewood season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 17 1957

Tourism Triumphant

ALTHOUGH GE was still in the economic doldrums this week, the next biggest industry in the Berkshires was enjoying a sellers' market. By all available indices, the county tourist business seems almost certain to break all records by the time the season draws to its official close on Labor Day.

The most striking evidence of all came from Tanglewood which closed its season in a blaze of greenbacks Sunday as a near-record crowd of 15,300 paying customers overflowed the giant Shed and converted the grounds outside to a land-locked replica of Jones Beach on a hot day. The turnout swelled the Music Festival's total attendance for the season to 162,936 against a previous (1955) record of 151,659. The 1957 take at the box office was $366,122, another all-time record.

But Tanglewood's was not the only success story. At the Music Barn in Lenox, jazz and folk music was drawing record crowds; at tockbridge, the Playhouse was taging repeated sellouts; up orth, the Williamstown Summer heater was running better than 0 per cent over its 1956 figures. he major inns, not to mention the pate of newer motels, were turning weekenders away for want of pace; and most gratifying of all, he boom seemed to be stretching ll the way up to the Northern Berkshire establishments that had een singing the blues earlier this ummer in anticipation of disasrous competition from towns loser to the new Massachusetts urnpike.

Although much of the good busiess was doubtless attributable to ood weather and to the promoional efforts of the Berkshire Hills Conference, the Turnpike loomed s a large if hard-to-measure facor in the picture, bringing in a low of extra business from eastery areas that had provided few ourists in past years. Best of all, here seemed every reason to supose that the flow would increase o a flood in the future when conruction now under way has ooked up the Pike with the New ork Thruway system to the west.

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 4,725
SEP 12 1957

162,936 At TANGLEWOOD

A total of 162,936 persons at tended Berkshire Festival events at Tanglewood this season. This compared with 140,985 last year and 151,659 in 1955.

Times
EW MILFORD, Conn.
eekly Independent
Circ. 2,786
AUG 15 1957

Berkshire Festival Concerts Conclude

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, concluded Aug. 11 with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $279,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
AUG 16 1957

TALKING IT OVER

American Chamber Orchestra Will Play in South America

By Emma Van Wormer

The first American Chamber Orchestra to visit South America is the Zimbler Sinfonietta, to leave Sunday by air for a tour to include appearances in 24 cities in 15 countries.

The tour is sponsored by the S. State Department in association with President Eisenower's Special International gram. Accompanying the Sinietta will be James Pappoutis, flute; Roger Voisin, trum- John Holmes; oboe and Eng- horn; Menahem Pressler, o.

sef Zimbler, music director, ssisted by Rosario Mazzeo manager; Miss Rina Ro , South American represen and Ralph Pottle, libra Five concerts each week feature programs drawn a repertoire of works rang om Bach to Tschaikowsky ostakovitch. Each weeek oy an American composer e performed. Represented group: Barber, Copland and Piston. The Zimbler etta played in the Berk- Festival in Tanglewood in the season just closed.

During the "Tanglewood" 195 season, concluding with a per formance of Beethoven's Ninth by the Boston Symphony Orches tra and soloists, Dr. Charles Munch conducting, approximately 16 attended Festival con- Symphony. An ad- attended student certs open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. "Tanglewood on Parade," annual benefit for the Music Center, set a new attendance record this season with 12,493 present.

CATSKILL, N. Y.
MAIL
Circ. D. 3,950
AUG 14 1957

Tanglewood Reports Audience Increase

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., concluded Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director, Charles Munch.

The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,963. (In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 155,659.) An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

[2482]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 13 1957

Berkshire Festival Has Fine Season

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, concluded Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659). An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 ,and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699).

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky/Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday), and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 15 1957

Tanglewood Summary

There is satisfaction in the report on the Tanglewood season from Lenox for those who are inclined to measure the value of a project by its outward signs of success, as well as for those whose symbol of success is the project's intrinsic merit. The 20th season of the Berkshire Festival ended Sunday with a record overall attendance of 162,936 and a record ticket sale amounting to $366,122.

The festival long since emerged from the experimental stage and has become a shining fixture on the nation's calendar of major musical events. The response to its attractions, as evidenced in the record for this season, is a valid measure of its worth. It proves, for one thing, the increasing appeal of good music to more and more people. Popularity is by no means a liability to Bach, Brahms and Beethoven, as it is not to Berlin, Kern and Porter, though some people, perhaps, tend to interpret its onset as a drawback to true appreciation.

The music at Tanglewood always has been excellent. It is encouraging to learn that it also is doing well by the practical yardstick of the box office.

Advocate
ARLINGTON, Mass
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,191

AUG 15 1957

Attendance records at the Boston Symphony Orchestra 1957 Festival at Tanglewood were broken as the season closed Sunday. Total this year was 162,936 compared to 140,985 last year.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 13 1957

Tanglewood Attendance, Income Rose This Summer

A total of $366,122 in ticket sales was netted at the 1957 season of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, compared to 1956 sales of $297,956 and 1955 sales of $329,383.

The total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival events for this 20th season was approximately 162,936 compared to 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955.

Attendance at the four weekend concerts totaled 107,497 this season, compared to 94,242 in 1956, and netted $310,579. Individual weekend attendance was as follows: 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky - Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend; and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend.

A new record for attendance at Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, was set this season with 12,493 persons attending and gross ticket sale of $32,414. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended, while attendance in 1956 was 9,787.

Two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the Theater Concert Hall opened the season with the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. A total of 22,052 persons attended, 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend compared to 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662 compared to $39,699 in 1956. Six Chamber Music concerts on Wednesday evenings attracted 7,025 persons, somewhat less than last season's 10,272, and netted $11,019 in ticket sales.

Six open Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony this season, instead of four, had an attendance of 13,869, compared to last year's 10,490.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 14 1957

169,936 Attend, Income $366,122 at Tanglewood

Lenox, Aug. 13—The 20th season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood concluded Sunday with a record attendance of 162,936, Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the orchestra, announced today.

In 1956 there were 140,985 who attended Festival concerts and in 1955 the number was 151,659. An additional 21,000 attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

22,052 at Chamber Concerts

The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two week ends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theater Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these week ends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach week end and 11,327 for the Mozart week end, making a total of 22,052, as compared with

169,936 ATTEND, Page Six

[illegible] was $4,252.

Six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra again were open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Parade Attendance High

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

A total of 41 concerts were offered in 1957 by the summer music school to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school. A total of 4832 persons became members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center this summer and contributed a total of $20,285.75.

Added to this total are scholarship grants in the amount of $6853, and a sum from ticket resale of $282, making a total for the summer season of $27,138.75. Through the terms of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, approximately $12,000 of this amount is matched by the Foundation for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553

AUG 18 1957

MUSIC

Some American Composers Have Obtained Recognition

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

TANGLEWOOD HAD GREAT SEASON

Figures just released from Tanglewood indicate that the Berkshire Music Festival had one of its most successful seasons in recent years. Some 162,936 persons were in attendance this summer at the various festival concerts, an increase of nearly 22,000 over last year's figures. In 1955, over-all attendance was 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 music lovers attended the 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center which had an enrollment of 330 students this summer. The final group of three concerts, which featured the music of Beethoven, drew the largest attendance of the season's main series by the full Boston Symphony—35,108!

The writer had the pleasure of attending last Sunday's final Festival concert when Charles Munch conducted Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethhoven's Ninth Symphony. I would venture to say that the audience, which filled the Music Shed and spread all over the lawn as far as the eye could see, was the largest at any of this season's concerts. It was a beautiful day and, of course, the ideal weather as well as the program itself was responsible for the largest crowd that I have ever seen at the Festival.

The Boston strings furnished a luscious and masterfully balanced background for the soloists—Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, in the Copland performance. Despite some rough spots in the Beethoven Ninth, this was one of the most inspired performances that I have ever heard. The assisting Festival Chorus of some 250 singers gave evidence of fine coaching by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson and the soloists—Adele Addison, Florence Koploff, John McCellum, and Donald Cramm, all performed in knowing fashion if not always with the most persuasive tones. Cramm, the principal offender, attempted to project the opening bass passages in a grandiose fashion, giving a strained quality to his singing here. However, it is almost a sacrilege to mention the few shortcomings of a brilliant performance which at once reaffirmed the greatness of Beethoven and the Boston Symphony. The listeners went into ecstasies over the performance.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,859

AUG 15 1957

Berkshire Festival Concerts Set New Attendance Marks

LENOX, Mass.—The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, concluded Saturday night with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.)

An additional number of approximately 21,000 persons attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956. and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theater Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699).

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

At Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493.

MUSICAL LEADER SEPTEMBER 1957

Outstanding students were honored at the Berkshire Music Center when Aaron Copland presented scholarship awards at the close of the session. The Albert Spalding prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body was given to Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N. Y. Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, captured the coveted Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for a conducting student. Conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, received the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship. The Koussevitzky Composition Prize went to David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La., and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio. Many other awards were made.

Final Concerts at Tanglewood

The final concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival were on Aug. 9, 10 and 11. Charles Munch conducted the Friday evening concert, which included works by Beethoven and Honegger. Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique" was given in a subdued performance. Isaac Stern gave a brilliant reading of Beethoven's Violin Concerto. On Saturday evening a more measured reading of Beethoven's "Eroica" was given by Carl Schuricht, Schubert's B minor Symphony and Blacher's Konzertante Musik rounded out the program. Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra in Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethoven's 9th Symphony. Adele Addison, soprano, John McCullom, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass, participated. While the performance gave evidence of careful preparation, the gigantic Festival Chorus seemed unwieldy.

[2472]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 13 1957

Berkshire Festival Has Fine Season

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, concluded Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659). An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 ,and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Mu Shed. Attendance was 10,72 the Bach weekend and 11 the Mozart weekend, total of 22,052, as cor 17,697 in 1956. Tot for the six conce (The 1956 total Four weekends the 6,000-seat Mus presented with a tota of 107,497. This figu 27,490 for the Tchaikov vinsky weekend; 19,307 Berlioz weekend; 25,592 fo Brahms weekend (which incl a rainy Sunday), and 35,108 the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,366

AUG 15 1957

Tanglewood Summary

There is satisfaction in the report on the Tanglewood season from Lenox for those who are inclined to measure the value of a project by its outward signs of success, as well as for those whose symbol of success is the project's intrinsic merit. The 20th season of the Berkshire Festival ended Sunday with a record overall attendance of 162,936 and a record ticket sale amounting to $366,122.

The festival long since emerged from the experimental stage and has become a shining fixture on the nation's calendar of major musical events. The response to its attractions, as evidenced in the record for this season, is a valid measure of its worth. It proves, for one thing, the increasing appeal of good music to more and more people. Popularity is by no means a liability to Bach, Brahms and Beethoven, as it is not to Berlin, Kern and Porter, though some people, perhaps, tend to interpret its onset as a drawback to true appreciation.

The music at Tanglewood always has been excellent. It is encouraging to learn that it also is doing well by the practical yardstick of the box office.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,496

AUG 13 1957

Tanglewood Attendance, Income Rose This Summer

A total of $366,122 in ticket sales was netted at the 1957 season of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, compared to 1956 sales of $297,956 and 1955 sales of $329,383.

The total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival events for this 20th season was approximately 162,936 compared to 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955.

Attendance ... week-end concert... 07,497 this seaso... ,242 in 195... 79. Indi... w...

Holding his Street-Street-Lenox-Pittsfield-Lenox-Stockbridge-Lenox-Tanglewood-Lenox-Pittsfield-Lenox-Street-Street Berkshire Festival schedule is Rev. David C. Nozkins, Standing and Doris Holloway, Stamford, Conn., who drove 300 miles to attend the Saturday concert. The picture was taken by a Transcript-Telegram photographer.

09,936 Attend

Continued From Page 1

17... in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. The 1956 total was $39,699.

Four week ends of concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky-Stravinsky week end; 19,307 for the Berlioz week end; 25,592 for the Brahms week end (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra again were open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Parade Attendance High

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

A total of 41 concerts were offered in 1957 by the summer music school to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school. A total of 4832 persons became members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center this summer and contributed a total of $20,285.75.

Added to this total are scholarship grants in the amount of $6853, and a sum from ticket resale of $282, making a total for the summer season of $27,138.75. Through the terms of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, approximately $12,000 of this amount is matched by the Foundation for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

Advocate
ARLINGTON, Mass
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,191

AUG 15 1957

Attendance records at the Boston Symphony Orchestra 1957 Festival at Tanglewood were broken as the season closed Sunday. Total this year was 162,936 compared to 140,985 last year.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553

AUG 18 1957

MUSIC

Some American Composers Have Obtained Recognition

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

TANGLEWOOD HAD GREAT SEASON

Figures just released from Tanglewood indicate that the Berkshire Music Festival had one of its most successful seasons in recent years. Some 162,936 persons were in attendance this summer at the various festival concerts, an increase of nearly 22,000 over last year's figures. In 1955, over-all attendance was 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 music lovers attended the 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center which had an enrollment of 330 students this summer. The final group of three concerts, which featured the music of Beethoven, drew the largest attendance of the season's main series by the full Boston Symphony—35,108!

The writer had the pleasure of attending last Sunday's final Festival concert when Charles Munch conducted Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethhoven's Ninth Symphony. I would venture to say that the audience, which filled the Music Shed and spread all over the lawn as far as the eye could see, was the largest at any of this season's concerts. It was a beautiful day and, of course, the ideal weather as well as the program itself was responsible for the largest crowd that I have ever seen at the Festival.

The Boston strings furnished a luscious and masterfully balanced background for the soloists—Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, in the Copland performance. Despite some rough spots in the Beethoven Ninth, this was one of the most inspired performances that I have ever heard. The assisting Festival Chorus of some 250 singers gave evidence of fine coaching by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson and the soloists—Adele Addison, Florence Koploff, John McCollum, and Donald Cramm, all performed in knowing fashion if not always with the most persuasive tones. Cramm, the principal offender, attempted to project the opening bass passages in a grandiose fashion, giving a strained quality to his singing here. However, it is almost a sacrilege to mention the few shortcomings of a brilliant performance which at once reaffirmed the greatness of Beethoven and the Boston Symphony. The listeners went into ecstasies over the performance.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,859

AUG 15 1957

Berkshire Festival Concerts Set New Attendance Marks

LENOX, Mass.—The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, concluded Saturday night with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.)

An additional number of approximately 21,000 persons attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theater Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699).

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,869. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493.

MUSICAL LEADER SEPTEMBER 1957

Outstanding students were honored at the Berkshire Music Center when Aaron Copland presented scholarship awards at the close of the session. The Albert Spalding prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body was given to Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N. Y. Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, captured the coveted Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for a conducting student. Conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, received the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship. The Koussevitzky Composition Prize went to David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La., and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio. Many other awards were made.

Final Concerts at Tanglewood

The final concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival were on Aug. 9, 10 and 11. Charles Munch conducted the Friday evening concert, which included works by Beethoven and Honegger. Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique" was given in a subdued performance. Isaac Stern gave a brilliant reading of Beethoven's Violin Concerto. On Saturday evening a more measured reading of Beethoven's "Eroica" was given by Carl Schuricht, Schubert's B minor Symphony and Blacher's Konzertante Musik rounded out the program. Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra in Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethoven's 9th Symphony. Adele Addison, soprano, John McCullom, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass, participated. While the performance gave evidence of careful preparation, the gigantic Festival Chorus seemed unwieldy.

[278]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,052

AUG 13 1957

Berkshire Festival Has Fine Season

The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, concluded Sunday with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the Orchestra's Music Director Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956, 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659). An additional number of approximately 21,000 people attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956 ,and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theatre Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699).

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky/Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday), and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,866

AUG 15 1957

Tanglewood Summary

There is satisfaction in the report on the Tanglewood season from Lenox for those who are inclined to measure the value of a project by its outward signs of success, as well as for those whose symbol of success is the project's intrinsic merit. The 20th season of the Berkshire Festival ended Sunday with a record overall attendance of 162,936 and a record ticket sale amounting to $366,122.

The festival long since emerged from the experimental stage and has become a shining feature on the nation's calendar of major musical events. The response to its attractions, as evidenced in the record for this season, is a valid measure of its worth. It proves, for one thing, the increasing appeal of good music to more and more people. Popularity is by no means a liability to Bach, Brahms and Beethoven, as it is not to Berlin, Kern and Porter, though some people, perhaps, tend to interpret its onset as a setback to true appreciation.

The music at Tanglewood always has been excellent. It is encouraging to learn that it also is doing well by the practical yardstick of the box office.

Advocate
ARLINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,191

AUG 15 1957

Attendance records at the Boston Symphony Orchestra 1957 Festival at Tanglewood [illegible] season closed Sunday. Total this year was 162,936 compared to 140,985 last year.

Independent American
Circ. 26,456

AUG 13 1957

Tanglewood Attendance, Income Rose This Summer

A total of $366,122 in ticket sales was netted at the 1957 season of the Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, compared to 1956 sales of $297,956 and 1955 sales of $329,383.

The total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival events for this 20th season was approximately 162,936 compared to 140,985 in 1956 and 151,659 in 1955.

Attendance [illegible] week-end [illegible] 07,497 this se[illegible] 242 in 19[illegible] 79. Indi[illegible] w[illegible]

[illegible] evenings attracted 7,025 per somewhat less than las[illegible] 10,272, and netted $11[illegible] ticket sales.

[illegible]n Saturday morning of the Boston Sym[illegible]eason, instead of [illegible]ttendance of 13,[illegible] to last year's

[illegible]9,936 Attend

Continued From Page 1

[illegible] in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. The 1956 total was $39,699.

Four week ends of concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky-Stravinsky week end; 19,307 for the Berlioz week end; 25,592 for the Brahms week end (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven week-end. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

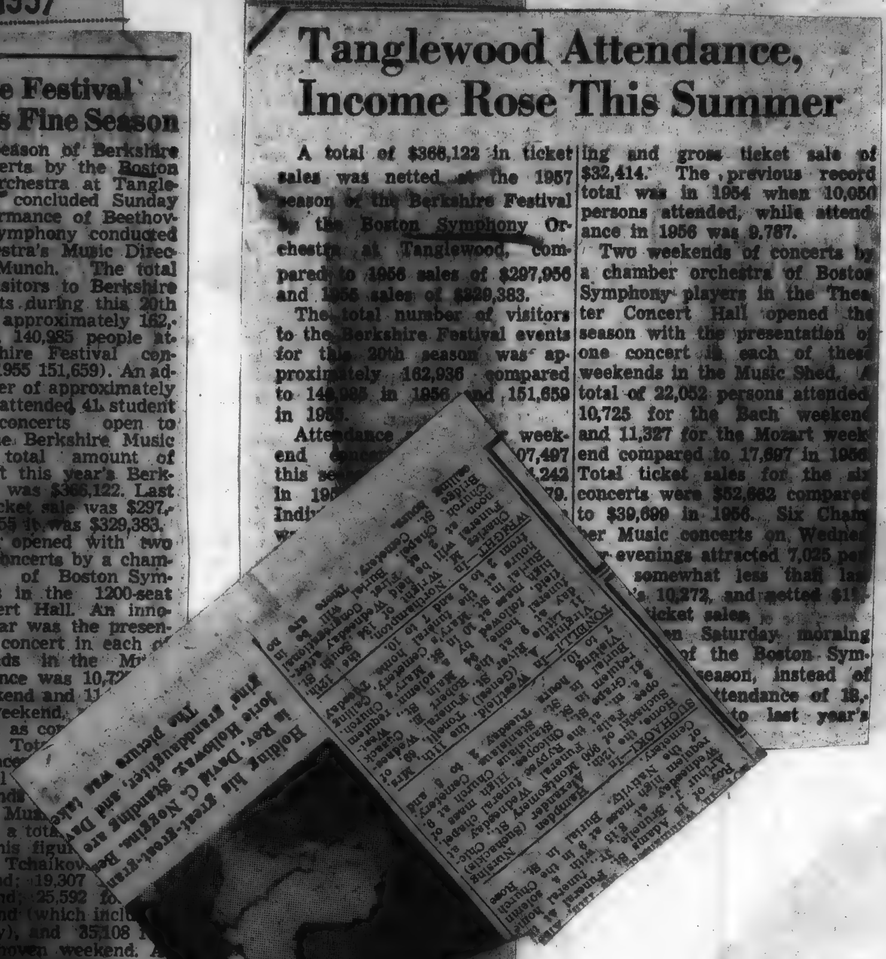
Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra again were open to the public for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,666. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Parade Attendance High

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493. The previous record total was in 1954 when 10,050 persons attended. Attendance in 1956 was 9787. The gross ticket sale for 1957 was $32,414.

A total of 41 concerts were offered in 1957 by the summer music school to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, whose contributions help to support the school. A total of 4832 persons became members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center this summer and contributed a total of $20,285.75.

Added to this total are scholarship grants in the amount of $5853, and a sum from ticket resale of $282, making a total for the summer season of $27,138.75. Through the terms of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, approximately [illegible] of this amount is matched by the Foundation for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.



MUSICAL LEADER SEPTEMBER 1957

Outstanding students were honored at the Berkshire Music Center when Aaron Copland presented scholarship awards at the close of the session. The Albert Spalding prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body was given to Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N. Y. Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, captured the coveted Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship for a conducting student. Conductor Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, received the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship. The Koussevitzky Composition Prize went to David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La., and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio. Many other awards were made.

Final Concerts at Tanglewood

The final concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival were on Aug. 9, 10 and 11. Charles Munch conducted the Friday evening concert, which included works by Beethoven and Honegger. Honegger's Symphony No. 3, "Liturgique" was given in a subdued performance. Isaac Stern gave a brilliant reading of Beethoven's Violin Concerto. On Saturday evening a more measured reading of Beethoven's "Eroica" was given by Carl Schuricht, Schubert's B minor Symphony and Blacher's Konzertante Musik rounded out the program. Sunday afternoon Dr. Munch conducted the orchestra in Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethoven's 9th Symphony. Adele Addison, soprano, John McCullom, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, and Donald Gramm, bass, participated. While the performance gave evidence of careful preparation, the gigantic Festival Chorus seemed unwieldy.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 101,553

AUG 18 1957

MUSIC

Some American Composers Have Obtained Recognition

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

TANGLEWOOD HAD GREAT SEASON

Figures just released from Tanglewood [illegible] that the Berkshire Music Festival had one of its most successful seasons in recent years. Some 162,936 persons were in attendance this summer at the various festival concerts, an increase of nearly 22,000 over last year's figures. In 1955, over-all attendance was 151,659. An additional number of approximately 21,000 music lovers attended the 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center which had an enrollment of 330 students this summer. The final group of three concerts, which featured the music of Beethoven, drew the largest attendance of the season's main series by the full Boston Symphony—35,108!

The writer had the pleasure of attending last Sunday's final Festival concert when Charles Munch conducted Copland's "Quiet City" and Beethhoven's Ninth Symphony. I would venture to say that the audience, which filled the Music Shed and spread all over the lawn as far as the eye could see, was the largest at any of this season's concerts. It was a beautiful day and, of course, the ideal weather as well as the program itself was responsible for the largest crowd that I have ever seen at the Festival.

The Boston strings furnished a luscious and masterfully balanced background for the soloists—Roger Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyer, English horn, in the Copland performance. Despite some rough spots in the Beethoven Ninth, this was one of the most inspired performances that I have ever heard. The assisting Festival Chorus of some 250 singers gave evidence of fine coaching by Hugh Ross and Alfred Nash Patterson and the soloists—Adele Addison, Florence Kopoff, John McCollum, and Donald Cramm, all performed in knowing fashion if not always with the most persuasive tones. Cramm, the principal offender, attempted to project the opening bass passages in a grandiose fashion, giving a strained quality to his singing here. However, it is almost a sacrilege to mention the few shortcomings of a brilliant performance which at once reaffirmed the greatness of Beethoven and the Boston Symphony. The listeners went into ecstasies over the performance.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 4,859

AUG 15 1957

Berkshire Festival Concerts Set New Attendance Marks

LENOX, Mass.—The 1957 season of Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts, concluded Saturday night with a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by the orchestra's music director, Charles Munch. The total number of visitors to Berkshire Festival events during this 20th season was approximately 162,936. (In 1956 140,985 people attended Berkshire Festival concerts, and in 1955 151,659.)

An additional number of approximately 21,000 persons attended 41 student and other concerts open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. The total amount of ticket sales at this year's Berkshire Festival was $366,122. Last year's total ticket sale was $297,956, and in 1955 it was $329,383.

The season opened with two weekends of concerts by a chamber orchestra of Boston Symphony players in the 1200-seat Theater Concert Hall. An innovation this year was the presentation of one concert in each of these weekends in the Music Shed. Attendance was 10,725 for the Bach weekend and 11,327 for the Mozart weekend, making a total of 22,052, as compared with 17,697 in 1956. Total ticket sales for the six concerts were $52,662. (The 1956 total was $39,699).

Four weekends of concerts in the 6,000-seat Music Shed were presented with a total attendance of 107,497. This figure includes 27,490 for the Tchaikovsky/Stravinsky weekend; 19,307 for the Berlioz weekend; 25,592 for the Brahms weekend (which included a rainy Sunday); and 35,108 for the final Beethoven weekend. A total ticket sale of $310,579 is announced for these 12 concerts. Total attendance for these concerts in 1956 was 94,252.

Six Chamber Music Concerts on Wednesday evenings were presented again this season with a total attendance of 7,025, somewhat less than last season's total of 10,272. Gross income from tickets was $11,019.

Saturday morning rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra were again open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund which, with six open rehearsals this season instead of four, grossed $12,110, with a total attendance of 13,666. Last year's total attendance was 10,490.

Tanglewood on Parade, the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, set a new record for attendance this season with a total of 12,493.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
AUG 18 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

High Standards Upheld In Tanglewood Concerts

'Consistently Admirable Performances' Again Mark 1957 Berkshire Festival; Several High Lights Recalled; Student Orchestra Praised

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The 1957 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood closed its doors Sunday after the 15,300 people who had come to hear Charles Munch conduct a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony had left the grounds. The concert was a fitting climax to a season which had been notable for the consistently admirable performances given.

Programs have been well varied, with enough contemporary music included to add spice to the standard repertoire which is the backbone of the festival season. For this writer, the greatest interest lies in the weekly chamber music recitals. Interest in these programs has grown and we note that the six programs were attended by 7025 persons. The artists give their services for the benefit of the scholarship fund.

Youngsters Attend

The public rehearsals, each Saturday morning drew many to Tanglewood, particularly an elderly group for whom evening concerts were out of the question. On the opposite end were literally hundreds of youngsters from the nearby summer camps. They may not have liked having culture thrust upon them, but it is to their credit that most of them listened attentively. The six rehearsals were responsible for a total audience of 13,869.

The 18 week-end concerts, which were more or less devoted to the music of Tchaikowsky, Brahms and Beethoven, respectively, were the ones which really got out the audiences. The 18 concerts were played to a total audience of 129,549, and dreadful were the traffic snarls they encountered. There seems to be no question that the publicity office issued no comparative figures this season.

We remember some outstanding performances, several of them by the student orchestra under student conductors and Messers Carvalho and Lipkin who directed the activities of the orchestra. The student orchestra concerts drew a total audience of several thousand, but the figures are not included in the grand total of 162,936. Tanglewood-on-Parade drew an audience of 12,493.

Some Highlights

Some of the concert highlights we will remember include the beautiful performance of 'L'Enfance du Christ" by Berlioz; Part 2 of the "St. Matthew Passion" which brought us the admirable quartet made up of Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm; the "Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky, which Pierre Monteux read with such eloquence; Rudolf Serkin's magnificent performance of Brahms' second piano concerto and of Tchaikovsky, Brahms and Beethoven.

Among the nine contemporary works played, those of Aaron Copland stamped him as one of the best, perhaps the best American composer. His "Quiet City" which was bracketed with Beethoven's ninth symphony last Sunday, held its own. A set of three Bavarian Peasant Dances by the German composer Werner Egk were offered by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The eminent Schuricht at 77 years of age provided some sensitive and musical readings and a virtuoso command of the baton.

Mr. Munch during a splendid reading of Honegger's third symphony, increased our respect for it. In fact we found it absorbing. Interesting also was the "Konzertante Musik" of Boris Blacher. The distinguished German composer was in residence at Tanglewood during the 1955 season. A personal friend of conductor Schuricht, the work was dedicated to him.

It was a fine festival and Tanglewood still remains the place where one may hear the best of the orchestral repertory superbly played by an orchestra which, at its best, has no peers. That is what Tanglewood means to the thousands who visit it each summer. The traditions set by Serge Koussevitzky are carried on. May they continue.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,791 S. 855,847
AUG 25 1957

Berkshire Festival Needs Focal Point

By MILES KASTENDIECK

ABOUT 22,000 more people attended the Berkshire Festival concerts this year than last. Whether this increase may be attributed to a clearly defined program policy cannot be determined.

The fact remains that such an announcement as a series of Great Composers, one for each weekend, helped to give people a clear choice of their preferences.

A year ago no such announcement was made. When the programs were finally set up, their appeared a vague unifying influence in the accent on contemporary music.

Two years ago when the emphasis of the whole Festival was on Beethoven, the attendance showed considerable increase. It would appear, then, that a focal point for the Festival programs is desirable.

The new record for attendance at Tanglewood on Parade should probably be credited to the continued appearance of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra. Of the almost 12,500 people who came, undoubtedly some were lured by Ogden Nash.

Audience Response Varied

Though the program had its more serious side with Munch and Copland conducting, the popular aspect exerted a strong influence. This is as it should be for this annual Berkshire Music Center benefit.

Strongly convinced that the old and the new in music must be blended on concert programs, Munch included contemporary works on all the programs given in the Music Shed. Audience response proved variable, but on the whole it indicated more than polite acceptance.

Whether people fully appreciated the dire need to get better acquainted with this music, at least they heard it most judiciously balanced by familiar works.

So much for statistical commentary. That Tanglewood is an ideal place for Summer musical activity, that the Music Shed is a unique solution for giving Summer concerts where weather conditions are subject to change with little notice, that the Boston Symphony is worth hearing no matter what it plays; all this and much more has been confirmed in this 20th anniversary year of the Berkshire Festival.

Some day the Stockbridge police will solve the traffic problem which they have not yet faced realistically. Increased attendance augurs much for the future when the Festival "comes of age" next year.

MUSICAL COURIER
SEPTEMBER, 1957

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

■ Excellent performances, interesting programs, and near-perfect weather marked the events presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

The sensible program idea of Charles Munch was to group each week end of three concerts around a central figure. The first two week ends (reported in last month's issue) were devoted wholly to music by Bach and Mozart. Featured composers for the next four weeks were Tchaikovsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven. Although these masters accounted for the bulk of the program time, 20th-century works were by no means neglected. Stravinsky shared honors with Tchaikovsky. for the opening week end of Shed concerts, with the contemporary composer being represented by three works, one for each of the programs. While the two composers might seem to be strange companions, the contrast between emotion and cerebration was unique and satisfying.

There simply wasn't much time to include other composers when Munch conducted one of his pet enthusiasms —Berlioz, but Pierre Monteux, as guest conductor, devoted half of his program to two works by Hindemith. Egk, Barber, and Piston all were sandwiched in between opening and closing Brahms works for the third Shed series, and the final Beethoven week end included Honegger, Blacher, and Copland, with Carl Schuricht also sneaking in Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony for his guest conducting assignment.

It is difficult to give more than test samplings for something as gigantic and diversified as the Berkshire Festival and its surrounding events. In addition to the 18 Friday-Saturday-Sunday concerts, six Wednesday programs of chamber music are part of the regular Festival. This season there were also six open rehearsals, "Tanglewood on Parade" with several events for that benefit day, two Fromm Fellowship chamber music concerts, various opera programs under Boris Goldovsky, six concerts by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra, two concerts by the Tanglewood choir, and five Composers' Forums. In all, the music school was responsible for 41 concerts. Including student events, which attracted 21,000 persons, the total Tanglewood attendance this summer was 184,000.

Charles Munch, in rare form all summer, conducted with his characteristic enthusiasm and vigor. His handling of the Tchaikovsky "Pathetique" and the "Romeo and Juliet" was superb, as was his Berlioz. Joseph di Pasquale was outstanding in the viola sections of "Harold in Italy," and Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valetti, Donald Gramm, Gerard Souzay, and the Festival Chorus all achieved fine vocal results in "L'Enfance du Christ." Munch's Brahms and Beethoven achieved equally splendid results.

As for the guest conductors, Pierre Monteux was his imperturbable self in his two concerts. Carl Schuricht impressed with his poise and control. Although he appears over-deliberate at times, he can rise to a tremendous climax when it seems necessary to him. He stresses inner voices for novel effects, sometimes neglecting the main melodic material in favor of surrounding textures. But he is a knowing and splendid conductor, and he scored a huge success, particularly with the "Eroica" in the final Beethoven week end.

Isaac Stern had three opportunities to show his masterly violinism in the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven Concertos. Rudolf Serkin was soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, and the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, was much applauded for his beautiful playing in the first American performance of the newly-found original score of the Tchaikovsky Rococo Variations.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Non-partisan
Circ. 161,566
AUG 24 1957

[273]

The Changing Scene at Tanglewood

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

While no new attendance records were established this summer at the six-week Berkshire Festival, the final totals were impressive none the less. More than 180,000 persons came to Tanglewood near Lenox, Mass., to hear concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as well as student programs given under the auspices of the Berkshire Music Center.

In the 20 years of its existence, the festival has come to take a leading place among the world's annual musical events. First started by a group of local and summer residents, the Festival received point, direction, idea, and purpose when Serge Koussevitzky was invited to become music director.

Not content merely with the presentation of concerts, the former Boston Symphony conductor also founded the Berkshire Music Center to serve as a focal point for the encouragement of young creative and performing talent. With members of the orchestra serving as faculty, and with distinguished composers invited to teach each summer, the Center quickly became a Mecca for American and foreign students.

Idealistic Planning

One is far from wishing to establish a personality cult, but there is no doubt that Koussevitzky's idealism and constructive planning set the tone both for the concerts and the school. Visitors during these years were conscious of the devotion and sincerity which fired all activity and which could be felt almost with physical impact.

One would not minimize Tanglewood's present standards and achievements. The concerts are magnificent, and student activity is meaningful and significant in all the varied fields sponsored by the Center—orchestra, chorus, opera, composition, chamber music. But the former flame of purpose has become diminished. There is now no central figure to personify, gather, and direct all activity.

Charles Munch, the present conductor at the Boston Symphony, is a devoted and enthusiastic musician, but he is chiefly concerned with the actual performance of each week's program, rather than with any long-range purpose or ideal. Nor have the present directors of the Center been able to transmit intact Koussevitzky's original sense of direction.

Above all, Koussevitzky believed in his goals with an impassioned intensity. To the extent that Tanglewood recaptures the spirit which first illuminated it, to that extent will it be saved from becoming just another good series of concerts and just another good school.

A simple but effective programing plan, formulated by the conductor for the festival, proved to be interesting and stimulating. Each of the Friday-Saturday-Sunday series was devoted in whole or largely to works by a single composer. Bach and Mozart made up the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, with Tchaikovsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven featured successively for the weekends involving the entire orchestra in the Shed.

Each of the last four series also included 20th-century music. Stravinsky was represented by three works, but the first performance by the orchestra of his "Canticum Sacrum" was by no means a success. This is an experimental work in which some bizarre instrumental effects are used in a not thoroughly assimilated adaptation of the 12-tone technique. The choral sections sounded best in this curious, almost eccentric work.

Hindemith Overture

New to most in the audience was Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, a well constructed and clever work ideally suited as an introduction to the ironic treatment of some dubious journalistic practice, which forms the theme for his neglected opera. Works by Egk, Barber, and Piston were included in the three Brahms programs; and works by Honegger, Blacher, and Copland shared honors for the Beethoven week.

The Blacher item was his early "Konzertante Musik" built in long melodic lines supported by repeated ostinato rhythms and melodic figures. It deepened the excellent impression made here previously by some of his stage works.

Guest conductors were Pierre Monteux, whose imperturbable platform manner has become very familiar to patrons of the orchestra, and Carl Schuricht, whose controlled and poised interpretations made his two Tanglewood appearances a decided success.

Among the soloists, Isaac Stern gave masterly performances in the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven Violin Concertos, and Rudolf Serkin was heard in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Wholly admirable work was displayed by the orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, in "Harold in Italy" during the Berlioz week; and Samuel Mayes, the orchestra's principal cellist, scored a well deserved success in the first American performance of the newly discovered original version of Tchaikovsky's "Rococo" Variations.

Among the newer works, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" will not go down as one of the master's best works. It is experimental in technique and texture. Some of the instrumental effects are bizarre and occasionally offensive. Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, new to this reviewer, is clever and well-constructed, not geared for popular acceptance but stimulating for the experienced music listener. Boris Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," an earlier work, confirmed the fine impression made here previously by some of his stage works. The "Konzertante" is built largely with flowing melodic lines supported by rhythmic and melodic ostinatos. The effect is very original but offers no difficulty for acceptance on first hearing. Schuricht's knowing leadership in this work was one of the best events of an enjoyable and stimulating Festival, the dates of which, for the record, were July 3 to Aug. 11. JULES WOLFFERS

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 111,788
AUG 18 1957

Second Thoughts On Music

High Standards Upheld In Tanglewood Concerts

'Consistently Admirable Performances' Again Mark 1957 Berkshire Festival; Several High Lights Recalled; Student Orchestra Praised

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The 1957 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at "Tanglewood closed its doors Sunday after the 15,300 people who had come to hear Charles Munch conduct a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony had left the grounds. The concert was a fitting climax to a season which had been notable for the consistently admirable performances given.

Programs have been well varied, with enough contemporary music included to add spice to the standard repertoire which is the backbone of the festival season. For this writer, the greatest interest lies in the weekly chamber music recitals. Interest in these programs has grown and we note that the six programs were attended by 7025 persons. The artists give their services for the benefit of the scholarship fund.

Youngsters Attend

The public rehearsals, each Saturday morning drew many to Tanglewood, particularly an elderly group for whom evening concerts were out of the question. On the opposite end were literally hundreds of youngsters from the nearby summer camps. They may not have liked having culture thrust upon them, but it is to their credit that most of them listened attentively. The six rehearsals were responsible for a total audience of 13,869.

The 18 week-end concerts, which were more or less devoted to the music of Tchaikowsky, Brahms and Beethoven, respectively, were the ones which really got out the audiences. The 18 concerts were played to a total audience of 129,549, and dreadful were the traffic snarls they encountered. There seems to be no question that the publicity office issued no comparative figures this season.

We remember some outstanding performances, several of them by the student orchestra under student conductors and Messers Carvalho and Lipkin who directed the activities of the orchestra. The student orchestra concerts drew a total audience of several thousand, but the figures are not included in the grand total of 162,936. Tanglewood-on-Parade drew an audience of 12,493.

Some Highlights

Some of the concert highlights we will remember include the beautiful performance of 'L'Enfance du Christ" by Berlioz; Part 2 of the "St. Matthew Passion" which brought us the admirable quartet made up of Adele Addison, Florence Kopleff, John McCollum and Donald Gramm; the "Sacre du Printemps" by Stravinsky, which Pierre Monteux read with such eloquence; Rudolf Serkin's magnificent performance of Brahms' second piano concerto and of Tchaikovsky, Brahms and Beethoven.

Among the fine contemporary works played, those of Aaron Copland stamped him as one of the best, perhaps the best American composer. His "Quiet City" which was bracketed with Beethoven's ninth symphony last Sunday, held its own. A set of three Bavarian Peasant Dances by the German composer Werner Egk were offered by guest conductor Carl Schuricht. The eminent Schuricht at 77 years of age provided some sensitive and musical readings and a virtuoso command of the baton.

Mr. Munch during a splendid reading of Honegger's third symphony, increased our respect for it. In fact we found it absorbing. Interesting also was the "Konzertante Musik" of Boris Blacher. The distinguished German composer was in residence at Tanglewood during the 1955 season. A personal friend of conductor Schuricht, the work was dedicated to him.

It was a fine festival and Tanglewood still remains the place where one may hear the best of the orchestral repertory superbly played by an orchestra which, at its [illegible] has no peers. That is what Tanglewood means to the thousands who visit it each summer. The traditions set by Serge Koussavitzky are carried on. May they continue.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.
JOURNAL AMERICAN
Circ. D. 653,[illegible] S. 855,847
AUG 25 1957

Berkshire Festival Needs Focal Point

By MILES KASTENDIECK

ABOUT 22,000 more people attended the Berkshire Festival concerts this year than last. Whether this increase may be attributed to a clearly defined program policy cannot be determined.

The fact remains that such an announcement as a series of Great Composers, one for each weekend, helped to give people a clear choice of their preferences.

A year ago no such announcement was made. When the programs were finally set up, their appeared a vague unifying influence in the accent on contemporary music.

Two years ago when the emphasis of the whole Festival was on Beethoven, the attendance showed considerable increase. It would appear, then, that a focal point for the Festival programs is desirable.

The new record for attendance at Tanglewood on Parade should probably be credited to the continued appearance of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" Orchestra. Of the almost 12,500 people who came, undoubtedly some were lured by Ogden Nash.

Audience Response Varied

Though the program had its more serious side with Munch and Copland conducting, the popular aspect exerted a strong influence. This is as it should be for this annual Berkshire Music Center benefit.

Strongly convinced that the old and the new in music must be blended on concert programs, Munch included contemporary works on all the programs given in the Music Shed. Audience response proved variable, but on the whole it indicated more than polite acceptance.

Whether people fully appreciated the dire need to get better acquainted with this music, at least they heard it most judiciously balanced by familiar works.

So much for statistical commentary. That Tanglewood is an ideal place for Summer musical activity, that the Music Shed is a unique solution for giving Summer concerts where weather conditions are subject to change with little notice, that the Boston Symphony is worth hearing no matter what it plays, all this and much more has been confirmed in this 20th anniversary year of the Berkshire Festival.

Some day the Stockbridge police will solve the traffic problem which they have not yet faced realistically. Increased attendance augurs much for the future when the Festival "comes of age" next year.

Republican
Newspaper
Circ. 161,566
AUG 24 1957

The Changing Scene at Tanglewood

By Jules Wolffers
Lenox, Mass.

While no new attendance records were established this summer at the six-week Berkshire Festival, the final totals were impressive none the less. More than 160,000 persons came to Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., to hear concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, as well as student programs given under the auspices of the Berkshire Music Center.

In the 20 years of its existence, the festival has come to take a leading place among the world's annual musical events. First started by a group of local and summer residents, the Festival received point, direction, idea, and purpose when Serge Koussevitzky was invited to become music director.

Not content merely with the presentation of concerts, the former Boston Symphony conductor also founded the Berkshire Music Center to serve as a focal point for the encouragement of young creative and performing talent. With members of the orchestra serving as faculty, and with distinguished composers invited to teach each summer, the Center quickly became a Mecca for American and foreign students.

Idealistic Planning

One is far from wishing to establish a personality cult, but there is no doubt that Koussevitzky's idealism and constructive planning set the tone both for the concerts and the school. Visitors during these years were conscious of the devotion and sincerity which fired all activity and which could be felt almost with physical impact.

One would not minimize Tanglewood's present standards and achievements. The concerts are magnificent, and student activity is meaningful and significant in all the varied fields sponsored by the Center—orchestra, chorus, opera, composition, chamber music. But the former flame of purpose has become diminished. There is now no central figure to personify, gather, and direct all activity.

Charles Munch, the present conductor at the Boston Symphony, is a devoted and enthusiastic musician, but he is chiefly concerned with the actual performance of each week's program, rather than with any long-range purpose or ideal. Nor have the present directors of the Center been able to transmit intact Koussevitzky's original sense of direction.

Above all, Koussevitzky believed in his goals with an impassioned intensity. To the extent that Tanglewood recaptures the spirit which first illuminated it, to that extent will it be saved from becoming just another good series of concerts and just another good school.

A simple but effective programing plan, formulated by the conductor for the festival, proved to be interesting and stimulating. Each of the Friday-Saturday-Sunday series was devoted in whole or largely to works by a single composer. Bach and Mozart made up the first two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts, with Tchaikovsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven featured successively for the weekends involving the entire orchestra in the Shed.

Each of the last four series also included 20th-century music. Stravinsky was represented by three works, but the first performance by the orchestra of his "Canticum Sacrum" was by no means a success. This is an experimental work in which some bizarre instrumental effects are used in a not thoroughly assimilated adaptation of the 12-tone technique. The choral sections sounded best in this curious, almost eccentric work.

Hindemith Overture

New to most in the audience was Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, a well constructed and clever work ideally suited as an introduction to the ironic treatment of some dubious journalistic practice, which forms the theme for his neglected opera. Works by Egk, Barber, and Piston were included in the three Brahms programs; and works by Honegger, Blacher, and Copland shared honors for the Beethoven week.

The Blacher item was his early "Konzertante Musik" built in long melodic lines supported by repeated ostinato rhythms and melodic figures. It deepened the excellent impression made here previously by some of his stage works.

Guest conductors were Pierre Monteux, whose imperturbable platform manner has become very familiar to patrons of the orchestra, and Carl Schuricht, whose controlled and poised interpretations made his two Tanglewood appearances a decided success.

Among the soloists, Isaac Stern gave masterly performances in the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven Violin Concertos, and Rudolf Serkin was heard in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Wholly admirable work was displayed by the orchestra's first violist, Joseph de Pasquale, in "Harold in Italy" during the Berlioz week; and Samuel Mayes, the orchestra's principal cellist, scored a well deserved success in the first American performance of the newly discovered original version of Tchaikovsky's "Rococo" Variations.

works for the third Shed series, and the final Beethoven week end included Honegger, Blacher, and Copland, with Carl Schuricht also speaking in Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony for his guest conducting assignment.

It is difficult to give more than fleet samplings for something as gigantic and diversified as the Berkshire Festival and its surrounding events. In addition to the 18 Friday-Saturday-Sunday concerts, six Wednesday programs of chamber music are part of the regular Festival. This season there were also six open rehearsals, "Tanglewood on Parade" with several events for that benefit day, two Fromm Fellowship chamber music concerts, various opera programs under Boris Goldovsky, six concerts by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra, two concerts by the Tanglewood choir, and five Composers' Forums. In all, the music school was responsible for 41 concerts. Including student events, which attracted 21,000 persons, the total Tanglewood attendance this summer was 184,000.

Charles Munch, in rare form all summer, conducted with his characteristic enthusiasm and vigor. His handling of the Tchaikovsky "Pathetique" and the "Romeo and Juliet" was superb, as was his Berlioz. Joseph de Pasquale was outstanding in the viola sections of "Harold in Italy," and Florence Kopleff, Cesare Valetti, Donald Gramm, Gerard Souzay, and the Festival Chorus all achieved fine vocal results in "L'Enfance du Christ." Munch's Brahms and Beethoven achieved equally splendid results.

As for the guest conductors, Pierre Monteux was his imperturbable self in his two concerts. Carl Schuricht impressed with his poise and control. Although he appears over-deliberate at times, he can rise to a tremendous climax when it seems necessary to him. He stresses inner voices for novel effects, sometimes neglecting the main melodic material in favor of surrounding textures. But he is a knowing and splendid conductor, and he scored a huge success, particularly with the "Eroica" in the final Beethoven week end.

Isaac Stern had three opportunities to show his masterly violinism in the Tchaikovsky, Brahms, and Beethoven Concertos. Rudolf Serkin was soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, and the orchestra's first cellist, Samuel Mayes, was much applauded for his beautiful playing in the first American performance of the newly-found original score of the Tchaikovsky Rococo Variations.

Among the newer works, Stravinsky's "Canticum Sacrum" will not go down as one of the master's best works. It is experimental in technique and texture. Some of the instrumental effects are bizarre and occasionally offensive. Hindemith's "News of the Day" Overture, new to this reviewer, is clever and well-constructed, not geared for popular acceptance but stimulating for the experienced music listener. Boris Blacher's "Konzertante Musik," an earlier work, confirmed the fine impression made here previously by some of his stage works. The "Konzertante" is built largely with flowing melodic lines supported by rhythmic and melodic ostinatos. The effect is very original but offers no difficulty for acceptance on first hearing. Schuricht's assuring leadership in this work was one of the best events of an enjoyable and stimulating Festival, the dates of which, for the record, were July 3 to Aug. 18.

JULES WOLFFERS

BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL

■ Excellent performances, interesting programs, and near-perfect weather marked the events presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra for this summer's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

The sensible program idea of Charles Munch was to group each week end of three concerts around a central figure. The first two week ends (reported in last month's issue) were devoted wholly to music by Bach and Mozart. Featured composers for the next four weeks were Tchaikovsky, Berlioz, Brahms, and Beethoven. Although these masters accounted for the bulk of the program time, 20th-century works were by no means neglected. Stravinsky shared honors with Tchaikovsky for the opening week end of Shed concerts, with the contemporary composer being represented by three works, one for each of the programs. While the two composers might seem to be strange companions, the contrast between emotion and cerebration was unique and satisfying.

There simply wasn't much time to include other composers when Munch conducted one of his pet enthusiasms—Berlioz, but Pierre Monteux, as guest conductor, devoted half of his program to two works by Hindemith, Egk, Barber, and Piston all were interwoven in between opening and closing [illegible]

MUSICAL COURIER
SEPTEMBER, 1957

[274]

MUSICAL LEADER | AUGUST, 1957

Tanglewood—1957

This year — the 19th year — the Berkshire Music Centre at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again opened its doors for creative summer activities. Over 300 students flocked to the various study departments — composition, orchestra, chorus, opera or general study group — to submerge themselves in six weeks of intensive musical life.

Many students find themselves in an atmosphere still alien to them — that of ensemble work, and they prosper by the opportunities available to them here. One group, the composers, gain to an even greater measure by the activities at the Music Centre. Under the leadership of Aaron Copland, they compose under the guidance of Copland, Irving Fine or Milton Babbitt. They discuss their compositions, write a composition for selected instruments, and investigate the many roads to perfection.

Exciting is the cooperation of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. This foundation has granted a number of fellowships to the Centre for gifted musicians. These players aid composers by giving concerts of the new compositions, readings of new works, sight readings and generally assist the composers in development of their understanding of music demands and possibilities. Mr. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Centre, expressed delight at this new formation of Fromm Fellowship Players.

We met with several composers. 17 are attending the 6 week session (15 are on scholarship). They come from many parts of the United States as well as Norway and Uruguay. Jose Serebier comes from Montevideo, Uruguay, and is remaining here on a Fulbright Fellowship and a Guggenheim Scholarship. Several of his works have been published.

To us the most interesting composer at the Berkshire Music Centre is 29-year-old Harold Farberman, timpanist of the Boston Symphony.

The Concerts

The first weekend (July 5, 6, 7) was devoted to orchestral and choral works by Bach under the baton of Charles Munch. The following week we heard much delightful music making. On July 13 Dr. Munch conducted the Symphony in E flat major (39), Symphony in G minor (40) and the Symphony in C major (41) by Mozart with verve. The orchestra sounded full and exciting. The next afternoon the program included other choice Mozart morsels, including the B flat major Bassoon Concerto played by Sherman Walt, the E flat major Horn Concerto played by James Stagliano, and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, played by Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt. It was a fine concert, full of agility and fun. A large audience attended.

Tschaikowsky was the bill of fare the following week (July 19, 20, 21). Sprinkled with monumental Stravinsky works, the series of three concerts attracted capacity crowds. On Friday evening, Dr. Munch conducted Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes", Tschaikowsky's variation of a rococo theme for Violoncello played by Samuel Mayes. The work was performed in the United States for the first time in its original version, a fact that did not impress us very much. A terrible performance of the "Pathetique" concluded the evening. Unbalanced and unimaginative. Equally disappointing was the Fifth Symphony performed under Pierre Monteux' baton. A definite feeling of unrehearsed quality seemed evident. This all was dispelled however, when Monteux raised his baton to conduct Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". The excitement generated by the 83-year-old maestro in the score was breathtaking. The pictures of pagan Russia, which this work is, came to life and stayed with every listener. On Sunday afternoon we attended round three of the Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis. We heard the work earlier in the week at Ellenville under Stokowski, but now heard a different conductor (Munch), different chorus (Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross) and two different soloists (John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The difference was startling. Munch took the work at a much more rapid pace, but subdued it much more. Both soloists were superior interpreters of the work, but the Festival Chorus proved to be an unmanageable instrument that did not respond to the fine chant lines. In the large Tanglewood shed, the delicate work became too diffuse and was not absorbed by many listeners as fully as in Ellenville. And yet, we feel that Charles Munch captured more of the religious fervor of the work and distilled it to a fine tribute. Isaac Stern concluded the afternoon with an authorized reading of the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Here was smooth perfection, and unique rapprochement between conductor and soloist.

On Friday evening Munch devoted his energies to Berlioz' Corsair Overture, Harold in Italy, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. It was surely one of the great thrills to see the conductor give readings that ranged from the bombastic to the very sensitive. All was given true color and true majesty. The Sacred Trilogy, "L'-Enfance du Christ" was given the following night. Here was a different Berlioz. Subdued, devout, reverend. The work separates into three sections, Herod's Dream, the Flight into Egypt and the Arrival at Sais. It was sung with devotion by Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Sousay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus, much smoother by now, was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

On July 28 "Papa" Monteux again mounted the podium to devote himself to excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, and the overture to the opera "News of the Day" by Hindemith, as well as the latter's "Mathis der Maler." This was another memorable performance.

Brahms and Beethoven Series Mark Tanglewood Finale

Lenox, Mass.—With the total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival calculated to be 162,936, its 20th season enjoyed excellent box office. That the Brahms and Beethoven week-ends, which completed the six-week series, drew heavily presented an almost inevitable reaction on the part of concertgoers. The final concert featuring Beethoven's Ninth Symphony attracted the second largest crowd in the history of the festival—15,300 people—while "Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, had a crowd of 12,493.

Schuricht Takes Baton

The advent of Carl Schuricht highlighted these week-ends. He conducted the first concert of the Brahms week-end, which included the "Tragic Overture" and the First Symphony. Mr. Schuricht's authoritative command of both music and orchestra imparted a sense of grandeur to both these works. Through a special kind of homogeneous sound he made the listener feel that his interpretations went to the roots of German tradition. The program also included Werner Egk's "Georgica", Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra. With the composer in a Puckish mood, all three pieces suggested a German band in holiday spirits. This antithesis to Brahms proved almost too much for some of the audience, but fascinated others for its orchestral frivolity and its bucolic flavor.

During the Beethoven week-end he offered a program consisting of Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Op. 10, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Beethoven's "Eroica". The general dampness of the evening exerted a strong influence on the performances. Mr. Schuricht was in a deliberative mood.

Charles Munch conducted the other concerts of both week-ends. Isaac Stern played the Violin Concerto and Rudolf Serkin the B flat Piano Concerto in the Brahms programs. Mr. Munch also included the works of two American composers to vary the program routines: Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" on one; Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony on the other.

Isaac Stern gave one of his finest performances of the Beethoven Violin Concerto at the opening concert of the Beethoven week-end, which opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3. The program also included Honegger's Third Symphony in a performance those present will not soon forget. As a post-war reflection this symphony now presents one man's thoughts and feelings much more vividly. Its philosophical progress from the catastrophic aspect of man's spiritual bankruptcy to the beatific vision of what he might be exerts considerable impact.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony

The Ninth Symphony culminated brilliantly in the final movement though the performance of the whole work suffered from fast tempos. The Festival Chorus excelled in its singing, while the solo quartet (Adele Addison, soprano; Florence Kopleff, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Donald Gramm, baritone) surmounted its difficult passages well. The concert opened with Copland's "Quiet City", played superbly by Mauri[illegible] Voisin, trumpet, and Louis Speyrer, English horn. Its beauty was dimmed by the towering [illegible] followed. Again it should be [illegible] that the Boston Symphony [illegible] top form throughout these concerts.

At "Tanglewood-on-Parade", Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops were the featured attraction in a typical program. This included Saint-Saëns "Carnival of Animals" with Ogden Nash reading his original verses, and selections from "My Fair Lady". Mr. Munch conducted the regular orchestra in Schumann's Fourth Symphony and Aaron Copland conducted his Suite "Our Town" and excerpts from "Tender Land". The round of simultaneous concerts by the different departments of the Berkshire Music Center took place as usual.

Fromm Fellowship Players

Eleven young professional musicians, known as Fromm Fellowship Players, spent six weeks at Tanglewood this summer working in contemporary music under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation. They performed two special concerts of modern chamber music, played illustrations in a series of lectures on contemporary music, and played works by student composers of the Berkshire Music Center, weekly at composers' forums and in reading sessions during classes of the composition department. Their concert program included works by Stravinsky, Schoenberg, Hindemith, Webern, Ravel, Foss, Sollberger, Riegger, Bartok, Milhaud, Thomson, Ives, Revueltas, Villa-Lobos, Mel Powell, Lester Trimble, Varèse, Ruggles, Piston, Copland, Kirchner, Carter, Karl Kohn, William Smith, Roussel, and William Denny.

A seminar in contemporary music provided a series of illustrated lectures twice weekly. Lecturers were composers of the Berkshire Music Festival faculty, including Aaron Copland, Harold Farberman, Milton Babbitt, Arthur Fine, Karl Kohn. Illustrations were performed by Fromm Fellows, and the lectures, which were open to Friends of the Center, were attended by capacity audiences.

The foundation also sponsored two public concerts of modern chamber music in the Theatre-Concert Hall performed by members of the Boston Symphony and visiting artists. First performances of the String Quartet No. 1 by Easly Blackwood, and "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking" by Robert Palmer for solo voices and small instrumental ensemble, were presented. The programs also included works by Bartok, Fine, Ravel, Villa-Lobos, Roy Harris, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Piston, Krenek and Stravinsky.

All this activity represented the most comprehensive attention ever paid to contemporary music in the history of the Berkshire Music Center.

—Miles Kastendieck

September, 1957

TORSDAG DEN 22. AUGUST 1957

ESTABLISHED 1891
America's Leading Norwegian Newspaper
NORDISK TIDENDE

Bil- og [illegible]-turlandeveisopplevelser

Jeg kroppet innom Tanglewood forrige søndag, denne musikk-kolonien i Berkshire-åsene i Massachussetts. Det var sesongens avsluttende symfonikonsert den ettermiddagen med Boston Symphony Orchestra og Charles Munch og to så vidt forskjellige verker som Copelands "Quiet City" og Beethovens 9de Symfoni.

Disse Berkshire Music Festivals er et fabelaktig fenomen i amerikansk musikk-kultur. De samler tusener i sommermånedene, de fleste for å lytte, men også noen for å studere med de mestre som i den sesongen har Tanglewood som sitt hovedkvarter.

Denne avskjedskonserten hadde samlet ca. seksten tusen mennesker, og det var et hav av parkerte biler på de omliggende sletter. Selve konsertsalen i Tanglewood kalles for "the shell" og er en eiendommelig moderne bygning, utsprunget av den finsk-ættede arkitekt Saarinens hjerne. Innvendig er der ca. 6,000 sitteplasser, som denne søndagen alle var utsolgt. Men "the shell" lar tonene slippe utover en stor og herlig slette med skyggefulle trær og der ser man resten av de tusener av lyttere — liggende i gresset, sittende i medbrakte stoler, i en kombinert nytelse av konsert og landlig piknik.

Tanglewood hadde i alt i denne sesongen trukket 162,936 mennesker til musikkfestene, en betydelig økning over fjorårets 151,659.

Når man opplever Beethovens 9de på dette viset kommer en til å tenke på det merkverdige liv et musikkverk kan ha.

Da denne Beethovens siste store komposisjon hadde sin førsteoppførelse i Wien den 7. mai 1824, var mesteren stokkdøv; han hørte ikke med sine dødelige øren noengang den musikk han hadde skrevet. Han hørte ikke med disse jordiske ører det betagende innslaget av koret med Schillers "Ode til Gleden", "Seid umschlungen millionen", som utvikler seg til en veldig dobbeltfuge.

"Men merkjet det stenn um mannen han stuper" — og Beethovens hymne til livet og livsgleden og livskraften som en seirende triumf over verdens sorger og jammer, som også han hadde hatt rikelig av, har lydt ned gjennom slektene, og denne dagen lød den i den nye verden mellom Berkshire-åsene som en sterk og manende stemme om at det er stjerner over tilværelsen.

*

Selve denne Tanglewood-formen for en musikkfest er et interessant fenomen i vår tid, hvor bil og vei spiller en slik stor rolle. Der var biler fra alle de nærmeste omliggende og også fra mange fjerntliggende stater. Sivilisasjonen følger med bilen og landeveiene. Musikklivet flytter på landet i sommersesongen. Kinoen er forlengst flyttet ut. Teatrene dukker opp nesten bak høysåtene.

[2747]

MUSICAL LEADER AUGUST, 1957

Tanglewood—1957

This year — the 19th year — the Berkshire Music Centre at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., again opened its doors for creative summer activities. Over 300 students flocked to the various study departments — composition, orchestra, chorus, opera or general study group — to submerge themselves in six weeks of intensive musical life.

Many students find themselves in an atmosphere still alien to them — that of ensemble work, and they prosper by the opportunities available to them here. One group, the composers, gain to an even greater measure by the activities at the Music Centre. Under the leadership of Aaron Copland, they compose under the guidance of Copland, Irving Fine or Milton Babbitt. They discuss their compositions, write a composition for selected instruments, and investigate the many roads to perfection.

Exciting is the cooperation of the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago. This foundation has granted a number of fellowships to the Centre for gifted musicians. These players aid composers by giving concerts of the new compositions, readings of new works, sight readings and generally assist the composers in development of their understanding of music demands and possibilities. Mr. Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Centre, expressed delight at this new formation of Fromm Fellowship Players.

We met with several composers. 17 are attending the 6 week session (15 are on scholarship). They come from many parts of the United States as well as Norway and Uruguay. Jose Serebier comes from Montevideo, Uruguay, and is remaining here on a Fulbright Fellowship and a Guggenheim Scholarship. Several of his works have been published.

To us the most interesting composer at the Berkshire Music Centre is 29-year-old Harold Farberman, timpanist of the Boston Symphony.

The Concerts

The first weekend (July 5, 6, 7) was devoted to orchestral and choral works by Bach under the baton of Charles Munch. The following week we heard much delightful music making. On July 13 Dr. Munch conducted the Symphony in E flat major (39), Symphony in G minor (40) and the Symphony in C major (41) by Mozart with verve. The orchestra sounded full and exciting. The next afternoon the program included other choice Mozart morsels, including the B flat major Bassoon Concerto played by Sherman Walt, the E flat major Horn Concerto played by James Stagliano, and the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, played by Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Stagliano and Walt. It was a fine concert, full of agility and fun. A large audience attended.

Tschaikowsky was the bill of fare the following week (July 19, 20, 21). Sprinkled with monumental Stravinsky works, the series of three concerts attracted capacity crowds. On Friday evening, Dr. Munch conducted Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes", Tschaikowsky's variation of a rococo theme for Violoncello played by Samuel Mayes. The work was performed in the United States for the first time in its original version, a fact that did not impress us very much. A terrible performance of the "Pathetique" concluded the evening. Unbalanced and unimaginative. Equally disappointing was the Fifth Symphony performed under Pierre Monteux' baton. A definite feeling of unrehearsed quality seemed evident. This all was dispelled however, when Monteux raised his baton to conduct Stravinsky's "Sacre du Printemps". The excitement generated by the 83-year-old maestro in the score was breathtaking. The pictures of pagan Russia, which this work is, came to life and stayed with every listener. On Sunday afternoon we attended round three of the Canticum Sacrum ad Honorem Sancti Marci Nominis. We heard the work earlier in the week at Ellenville under Stokowski, but now heard a different conductor (Munch), different chorus (Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross) and two different soloists (John McCollum, tenor and Donald Gramm, baritone) with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The difference was startling. Munch took the work at a much more rapid pace, but subdued it much more. Both soloists were superior interpreters of the work, but the Festival Chorus proved to be an unmanageable instrument that did not respond to the fine chant lines. In the large Tanglewood shed, the delicate work became too diffuse and was not absorbed by many listeners as fully as in Ellenville. And yet, we feel that Charles Munch captured more of the religious fervor of the work and distilled it to a fine tribute. Isaac Stern concluded the afternoon with an authorized reading of the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto. Here was smooth perfection and unique rapprochement between conductor and soloist.

On Friday evening Munch devoted his energies to Berlioz' Corsair Overture, Harold in Italy, with Joseph de Pasquale, viola soloist, and the Fantastic Symphony. It was surely one of the great thrills to see the conductor give readings that ranged from the bombastic to the very sensitive. All was given true color and true majesty. The Sacred Trilogy, "L'-Enfance du Christ" was given the following night. Here was a different Berlioz. Subdued, devout, reverend. The work separates into three sections, Herod's Dream, the Flight into Egypt and the Arrival at Sais. It was sung with devotion by Cesare Valletti, tenor, Florence Kopleff, contralto, Gerard Sousay, baritone, and Donald Gramm, bass. The festival chorus, much smoother by now, was prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

On July 28 "Papa" Monteux again mounted the podium to devote himself to excerpts from "Romeo and Juliet" by Berlioz, and the overture to the opera "News of the Day" by Hindemith, as well as the latter's "Mathis der Maler." This was another memorable performance.

MUSICAL AMERICA

Brahms and Beethoven Series Mark Tanglewood F[illegible]

Lenox, Mass.—With the total number of visitors to the Berkshire Festival calculated to be 162,936, its 20th season enjoyed excellent box office. That the Brahms and Beethoven week-ends, which completed the six-week series, drew heavily presented an almost inevitable reaction on the part of concertgoers. The final concert featuring Beethoven's Ninth Symphony attracted the second largest crowd in the history of the festival—15,300 people—while "Tanglewood-on-Parade", the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, had a crowd of 12,493.

Schuricht Takes Baton

The advent of Carl Schuricht highlighted these week-ends. He conducted the first concert of the Brahms week-end, which included the "Tragic Overture" and the First Symphony. Mr. Schuricht's authoritative command of both music and orchestra imparted a sense of grandeur to both these works. Through a special kind of homogeneous sound he made the listener feel that his interpretations went to the roots of German tradition. The program also included Werner Egk's "Georgica", Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra. With the composer in a Puckish mood, all three pieces suggested a German band in holiday spirits. This antithesis to Brahms proved almost too much for some of the audience, but fascinated others for its orchestral frivolity and its bucolic flavor.

During the Beethoven week-end he offered a program consisting of Blacher's Konzertante Musik, Op. 10, Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony, and Beethoven's "Eroica". The general dampness of the evening exerted a strong influence on the performances. Mr. Schuricht was in a deliberative mood.

Charles Munch conducted the other concerts of both week-ends. Isaac Stern played the Violin Concerto and Rudolf Serkin the B flat Piano Concerto in the Brahms programs. Mr. Munch also included the works of two American composers to vary the program routines: Samuel Barber's "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance" on one, Walter Piston's Fifth Symphony on the other.

Isaac Stern gave one of his finest performances of the Beethoven Violin Concerto at the opening concert of the Beethoven week-end, which opened with Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 3. The program also included Honegger's Third Symphony in a performance those present will not soon forget. [illegible] selection this symphony [illegible] presents one man's thoughts and [illegible] much more vividly. Its philosophical progress from the catastrophic aspect of man's spiritual bankruptcy to the beatific vision of what he might be exerts considerable impact.

[illegible] Symphony

The Ninth Symphony culminated [illegible] the final movement [illegible] the performance of the whole work suffered from fast tempos. The Festival Chorus excelled in its singing, while the [illegible]et (Adele Addison, [illegible] Kopleff, contralto; [illegible] tenor; and Donald [illegible] surmounted its difficulties. The concert [illegible] Beethoven's "Quiet

Karl Kohn, William Smith, Roussel, and William Denny.

A seminar in contemporary music provided a series of illustrated lectures [illegible] lecturers were [illegible] the Berkshire Music [illegible] including Aaron Copland, Milton Babbitt, [illegible] Illustrations were [illegible] Fromm Fellows, and [illegible] which were open to [illegible] of the Center, were attended by [illegible] audiences.

[illegible] foundation also sponsored two public concerts of modern chamber music in [illegible] Theatre-Concert Hall performed by members of the Boston [illegible] and visiting artists. First performances of the String Quartet No. 1 by Easly Blackwood, and "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking" by Robert Palmer for solo voices and small instrumental ensemble, were presented. The programs also included works by Bartok, Fine, Ravel, Villa-Lobos, Roy Harris, Milton Babbitt, Carlos Chavez, Piston, Krenek and Stravinsky.

All this activity represented the most comprehensive attention ever paid to contemporary music in the history of the Berkshire Music Center.

—Miles Kastendieck

September, 1957

TORSDAG DEN 22. AUGUST 1957

ESTABLISHED 1891

[illegible]

Jeg [illegible] innom Tanglewood forrige [illegible], [illegible] musikk-kolonien i Berkshire-åsene i Massachussetts. Det var sesongens avsluttende symfonikonsert den ettermiddagen med Boston Symphony Orchestra og Charles Munch og to så vidt forskjellige verker som Copelands "Quiet City" og Beethovens 9de Symfoni.

Disse Berkshire Music Festivals er et fabelaktig fenomen i amerikansk musikk-kultur. De samler tusener i sommermånedene, de fleste for å lytte, men også noen for å studere med de mestre som i den sesongen har Tanglewood som sitt hovedkvarter.

Denne avskjedskonserten hadde samlet ca. seksten tusen mennesker, og det var et hav av parkerte biler på de omliggende sletter. Selve konsertsalen i Tanglewood kalles for "the shell" og er en eiendommelig moderne bygning, utsprunget av den finsk-ættede arkitekt Saarinens hjerne. Innvendig er der ca. 6,000 sitteplasser, som denne søndagen alle var utsolgt. Men "the shell" lar tonene slippe utover en stor og herlig slette med skyggefulle trær og der ser man resten av de tusener av lyttere — liggende i gresset, sittende i medbrakte stoler, i en kombinert nytelse av konsert og landlig piknik.

Tanglewood hadde i alt i denne sesongen trukket 162,936 mennesker til musikkfestene, en betydelig økning over fjorårets 151,659.

Når man opplever Beethovens 9de på dette viset kommer en til å tenke på det merkverdige liv et musikkverk kan ha.

Da denne Beethovens siste store komposisjon hadde sin førsteoppførelse i Wien den 7. mai 1824, var mesteren stokkdøv; han hørte ikke med sine dødelige ører noengang den musikk han hadde skrevet. Han hørte ikke med disse jordiske ører det betagende innslaget av koret med Schillers "Ode til Gleden", "Seid umschlungen millionen", som utvikler seg til en veldig dobbeltfuge.

"Men merkjet det stenn um mannen han stuper" — og Beethovens hymne til livet og livsgleden og livskraften som en seirende triumf over verdens sorger og jammer, som også han hadde hatt rikelig av, har lydt ned gjennom slektene, og denne dagen lød den i den nye verden mellom Berkshire-åsene som en sterk og mønende stemme om at det er stjerner over tilværelsen.

Selve denne Tanglewood-formen for en musikkfest er et interessant fenomen i vår tid, hvor bil og vei spiller en slik stor rolle. Der var biler fra alle de nærmeste omliggende og også fra mange fjerntliggende stater. Sivilisasjonen følger med bilen og landeveiene. Musikklivet flytter på landet i sommersesongen. Kinoen er forlengst flyttet ut. Teatrene dukker opp hesten bak høvåtene.

C275

C2757

MUSIC CLUBS MAGAZINE

The Federation Carries out the Largest Summer Scholarship Program in History

Forty-one Young Musicians in Camps from Coast Enjoyed Scholarships in 1957

On the rocky coast of Maine, on the slopes of the Rockies or the shores of tree-bordered lakes in the north, south, east, middle west, and west, summer scholarship winners, this season's proteges of the National Federation of Music Clubs, have been helping to make musical history on the student level.

Some have coaxed harmonies from piano or organ; others have drawn bows across a variety of stringed instruments, have evoked relatively gentle tones from flutes and woodwinds, more resounding ones from brass or percussion. Others, seeking a shady nook, have set down their ideas on music paper with future symphonies or operas in mind, and still others, in opera workshops, have practiced arias indefatigably, or under skilled direction have begun to master the intricacies of stage direction.

There were 41 scholarship winners in all: 12 string players, three flutists, an oboist, a clarinetist, an organist, a pianist, five brass ensemble players, two composers, a future opera coach, and 14 singers, 12 of whom are definitely interested in an opera career. They represented 22 states and the widest geographical distribution that has ever characterized the Federation's summer scholarships. Several were at camps where Federation Week-ends are customarily held, and when it was feasible for them to do so, they performed for the Week-End guests.

NINE SCHOLARSHIPS AT CHAUTAUQUA

The largest number of scholarships went to the Chautauqua Institution, where the 13th annual Chautauqua Week-End was held this summer. Four were in the Federation's traditional Chautauqua categories: organ, piano, voice and strings. The remaining five were partial scholarships, given to players of brass instruments to assist Chautauqua in developing the new brass ensemble which has been established this year.

Sylvia Friederich, soprano, the Chautauqua voice winner, although only 18 years old, can already boast of substantial musical attainments. She is an undergraduate of the Eastman School of Music, is both a church and a synagogue singer, has appeared on radio and television, and as soloist with the Rochester Pops Orchestra and the Bach Chorus of the Rochester Oratorio Society. At Chautauqua she has sung in opera and as soloist with the Chautauqua Chorus in Verdi's Requiem. This summer she has been studying with Julius Huehn.

Kenneth Goldsmith of Greenville, Pa., the violin winner, is a graduate of the Federation's Junior Festivals, where he won high rating. During his senior year in high school he held first chair in the violin section of the Pennsylvania All-State Orchestra. He studies violin at Wayne University with Mischa Mischakoff, who was also his teacher at Chautauqua.

Robert Plimpton, organist, also comes from Pennsylvania. Although still in the teen-age bracket, he has made quite a reputation in his home city, Titusville, and glowing reports come of his progress at Chautauqua, where he has been a pupil of Robert Woodside.

As for Robert Spillman of Berea, Kentucky, the pianist, he has made himself useful this summer by accompanying for Julius Huehn, head of the Chautauqua Opera Department, when he was not pursuing his piano studies with James Friskin. He holds a Bachelor of Music degree from the Eastman School and is returning this fall to do post-graduate work.

The brass ensemble players who received partial scholarships, and who are said to have made excellent use of their time, were Betty Breeland of McCook, Nebraska; John Charles Duffy of Akron, Ohio; Joy Durschnitt of Bexley, Ohio; Larry Sutherland of Abilene, Texas, and Jack McKie of Lincoln, Nebraska.

AT THE BERKSHIRE MUSIC CENTER

Perhaps the best evidence the Federation has as to how its scholarship students reacted to the privilege which came to them at the Berkshire Music Center is contained in the description written by the editor of Music Clubs Magazine, Edith Behrens, who on a visit to the Center, located at Lenox, Mass., had an opportunity to visit the seven quartered there.

We quote from her: There were seven of these who had the opportunity to work under such great conductors as Leonard Bernstein, Richard Burgin and Pierre Monteux. We saw them all, and even watched several of them at rehearsal. Of each one, we asked the same question: "What was the high point of your six weeks at Tanglewood?" Their answers give a little idea of what such musical contacts mean to sensitive young musicians like these.

Said Phil Feinsilver, violinist, of Larchmont, N. Y.: "I played with the best orchestra I've ever played with. It's given me a new point of view, and a new set of musical standards. I'm anxious to start working at my instrument again, because now I've a new appreciation of proper performance."

Larry Hurst, double bass player, of Norfolk, Virginia, played with the bass section of the student orchestra, and felt that a performance of the Beethoven Sixth Symphony under Seymour Lipkin was a high point. "But the thing I will remember most," he said, "was watching Richard Burgin in a Bach discussion with Isaac Stern. Stern played the Bach Chaconne for us, and Burgin was a sort of moderator of the discussion about it. I think Stern learned a lot from the discussion, too."

Chester Wood, cellist, of Seattle, Washington, echoed the veneration for Burgin. "Burgin inspired me more than any person I've ever been around," he commented. "He makes you come alive in his class. No one has given me such a spark as he."

Playing a Brahms symphony under Pierre Monteaux was the high point for Phil Koonce, an oboist of Little Rock, Arkansas. "I have no way to tell you," he smiled. "I can only say that he is the conductor for me."

John Perras, flutist, of New York City, and Elinor Preble, flutist, of Denver, Colorado, both worked with the Boston Symphony's talented solo flutist, Mrs. Doriot Anthony Dwyer, and said they had become better Bach players as the result of just listening to her. "After this, I went home and practiced five hours a day," said Miss Preble. "The great pleasure of this place is that you can always find someone willing to play with you. They never get tired of reading, and I never get tired of trying out new works. I hope you'll thank whoever is responsible for my scholarship here—it's been wonderful."

Homer Lee, 19-year-old clarinetist, of San Francisco, a winter student at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, says "It's a great musical environment. I've never lived music 24 hours a day before."

It's a happy thought that when they get to middle age and old age, these young people will still remember vividly this "great musical environment." This is something that is with them for life. And so is their gratitude to the Federation.

"Land Portage," submitted by the Berkshire Music School, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Leica, Plus X., 1/250th, f. 5. 6.

Six of the seven National Scholarship winners at Berkshire Music Center: l. to r., standing, Lawrence Hurst, Norfolk, Va.; Philip Feinsilver, Larchmont, N. Y.; Philip Koonce, Little Rock, Arkansas; Chester Wood, Port Orchard, Washington. Seated, l., John Perras, New York City; r., Elinor Preble, Denver. Homer Lee, clarinetist, is missing from the picture.

BLANK PAGE

[278]

OUR ENGLISH SECT

Tanglewood Midway 1957: A New Freedom

By Marlene A. Burns

At the mature age of twenty, Tanglewood is a dynamically productive and magnetically beautiful creation. Growing pains are in the past, and the machinery — physical plant and administration — functions with apparent lack of effort. This mechanical ease is hardly accidental; it results from flexible coordination among the ceaselessly working box office, publicity and maintenance departments. Without such reliable viscera, the Berkshire Festival never would have attained its 1957 peak of artistic triumph.

Anniversary celebration has not been a conscious activity, but the serene aplomb in maintaining and polishing Tanglewood traditions and the vibrant excitement of innovation have made the season thus far vividly memorable. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Dr. Charles Munch and guest conductors and soloists, has performed with a consistent vigour and radiant technical rapport representing a superimposition of past highlights onto momentary brilliance. With operational mechanics well in hand and traditions of performance quality solidly established, the BSO has begun its adult life at Tanglewood by using new musical media — more modern works, less familiar works of masters — to express the Berkshire identity it has developed since 1937. The recent performances of Stravinsky's new "Canticum Sacrum" (1955) and the rarely heard Berlioz "L'Enfance du Christ" symbolize the debut of a poised and mature Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center is also expanding. Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department, is devoting this entire session to a special study of operatic staging. This special stress assumes technical control and artistic expresiveness in the student singer. Until now, the total emphasis had been on ensemble work without conducting cues. Other aspects of opera were overshadowed, until Goldovsky decided that it was time to take the next logical step of testing the strength of ensemble work by considering it a basic part, not the whole. The challenge of an extra dimension has added calibre to the vocal and theatrical performance of opera at Tanglewood. There is now room for creativity as well as study.

Thus far, attendance has not been an indication of the exceptional freshness in this Tanglewood season. The total figure for July was 68,849, which means that each trio of concerts attracted around 16,500. The weekend which drew largest audiences was that of July 19-21. This was to be expected, since the third weekend marked the beginning of shed concerts. In addition, the program for the weekend was a drawing-card. Both Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux conducted programs ranging from standard and modern warhorses (Tchaikovsky's "Pathetique" and Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring") to the seldom heard Tchaikovsky "Rococo Variations for Cello and Orchestra" and the recent Stravinsky work "Canticum Sacrum". The Canticum gained extra attention because it was being given a simultaneous American premiere: Stokowski conducted it on the same weekend at Ellenville. Due to the growth of other festivals such as Ellenville, attendance is slightly below average in comparison to past seasons.

Figures are lifeless. The heart of Tanglewood is the people who created it, who maintain it, who perform and study there, and who come to hear music. Over the years, the BSO has established a Tanglewood audience. This group is made up of three types. The oldest have watched the twenty-year growth. Until recently, this conservative section had dictated much of the programming and total audience reaction. Tchaikovsky's "Pathetique" still suits the "backbone" group ideally. In the past few years, the tastes of this core have either changed or been disregarded in favour of the ever-growing younger audience. The resurrection of the unexpurgated Tchaikovsky Rococo Variations and their performance by a young BSO musician, Samuel Mayes, seems to indicate either the expanding influence of the Tanglewood school or a fin-de-siècle type of restlessness in the conservative core for something slightly different yet within the established framework. If you are in the company of Milton Babbitt, composer and faculty member at Princeton and Tanglewood, you probably believe the new life in the festival proper is due to the influencing growth in study scope and creative experiment at the Berkshire Music Center. If you are in the company of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, a leading force in the creation of the festival, you probably believe the new lease on vitality part of the contraction-expansion cycle associated with any living creature and unchanged by the passage of Time. Whichever pole you may incline to in search of a specific cause for the expanded scope of traditional programming, this much remains essentially the truth: tradition at Tanglewood has not meant a death-grip on the past. Dr. Munch was cautious in his first few seasons, after the death of Koussevitzky, but fully aware that despite the lingering stature of his predecessor, he must assert his own individuality. Still cautious, he has slowly begun augmenting the core program of the BSO.

Virgin vitality in Tanglewood audiences comes essentially from the newer faces — the younger and less familiar. The musically untutored can have few preconceived prejudices and usually respond with immediate honesty to a conductor and work. Witness the reaction to Hindemith's "Mathis der Maler", conducted with vigour and control by Monteux. The composition is a warm musical evocation of the religious spirit in the paintings of Grunewald. As emotional food, Mathis is a feast. As music, it is too derivative to stand out with individuality. Chords were repeatedly reminiscent of Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben" and of Hindemith himself in "Four Temperaments". Hindemith, like every true composer, has a time-defying character; but in the case of Mathis, this basic style is not sufficiently varied to make the musical images pertinent to the subject matter as well as to Hindemith. The second circle of a typical Tanglewood audience, the "vital core", responded enthusiastically to the stirring performance of a compelling if undistinguished work. One of these ingenuous "culture vultures" concisely characterized his group with this remark before an opera performance: "Oh, look, dear! They're playing 'Pelleas and Melisande', 'Marriage of Figaro' and 'Boris Goldovsky'!"

The student body balances the naive emotionalism of the uninformed with a necessary but sometimes stifling pedantry. The musical insights of this group, while precise and well-grounded, too seldom extend to the emotional pitch of a work and performance. Proof of this can be seen in the relish with which they technically dissect a warhorse and the reticence they express in meeting with originality untempered by critical opinion. Henry Brant's recent Tanglewood defeat is the outstanding example of the destructive refusal to grapple with immediacy. Mr. Brant's "Grand Universal Circus" was scheduled for performance by the student orchestra. Students were heard grumbling that the novel piece of "space music", requiring outlandish instruments such as a hurdy-gurdy and fire whistle, as well as the displacement of instrumental and choral groups throughout the vast shed, demanded an amount of rehearsal effort unmatched by the musical worth of the work. At the very last moment, Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony was quietly substituted for Universal Circus. Pathetic note: Mrs. Brant was seen walking slowly across the Tanglewood grounds dragging a large dragon mask now shorn of its musical function in Universal Circus. Mr. Brant's work might not have been a success; but it would have been entirely new musical experience challenging the adaptability of basic technique to original thought and requiring emotional output. Youth is supposedly marked by exploration, if not, daring. Tanglewood youth seem the staunchest conservatives of them all.

(To be concluded next week)

[2797]

Tanglewood Midway 1957: A New Freedom

By Marlene A. Burns

II.

While attendance alone is no reliable determinant of performance quality, figures do show how much the musical public, essentially a "repeater" audience, is willing to believe in the validity of past highlights and return for new versions of familiar greats. Tanglewood highlights thus far have been the Monteux concert on July 20th and the Munch program the following afternoon. These two concerts drew 11,000 and 9,780 respectively. If Tanglewood were consciously celebrating its anniversary this season, the glistening vitality and time-tempered polish of these performances would link them as twin fetes.

For Pierre Monteux, the July 20th concert was a true anniversary. He conducted Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring", which he premiered forty-four years ago. The indomitable little man with the spreading walrus mustache led a performance which was electrically piercing in its dynamic and tonal contrasts. Monteux delineated each metric change of the once-revolutionary work with an eye, or rather an ear, to the superimposed qualities of impassioned pagan brutality and naive gaucherie in worship. He sharply divided the instrumental groups, creating poles for the constant shiftings in orchestration and tempi. A contrast to the complex of blunt vigour in the Stravinsky was Monteux's song-like reading of Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" Overture. The luminous sheen and gentle melodic contours of early Romantic music were brought forth with hawk-eyed devotion to each characteristic detail of the period spirit. An appropriate transition from the mildness of Mendelssohn to the convulsiveness of Stravinsky was the Tchaikovsky Fifth Symphony, which contrasts the two qualities and synthesizes them in a somber, vigorous melancholia. Monteux constructed his program with consummate attention to a dynamic sum effect of contrasts and conducted it with the jewel-like precision and austere economy of gesture which have long been his individual trademark and a precious tradition at Tanglewood.

Dr. Munch cared not so much for a quality contrast as for a persistent delineation of the dramatic despair illuminating Romantic spirit. His reading of the Tchaikovsky "Romeo and Juliet" excerpts, combined with the brilliant and sensitive virtuosity of violinist Isaac Stern in the Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto, created a pure tour de force. This performance was a directionalized exploration in quality, but as such was never narrowly conceived. There are infinite individual variations on any given emotion. The balance to the Tchaikovsky was the premiere performance of the Stravinsky Canticum. The illumination seen here was the ensemble religious glow of a self-effacing, worshipping throng. This astoundingly concise work lasts for scarcely 20 minutes, and within that time employs only a handful of instruments, in addition to the chorus. Yet it is pure Stravinsky in its complex of simultaneous effects. The tight-knit tonal structure of choral passages creates the illusion of liturgical sounds mingling and reverberating high in cathedral recesses. The simplicity of the orchestration completes the picture with an image of ascetic medieval piety before an altar. Munch gave the Canticum a vigorous but dispassionate reading, suitable to the work and characteristic of his own conducting style.

Munch is a conductor with prolonged perspectives. He has created a personal tradition of spiritual association with and mystery of melodically powerful and rhythmically muscular music. Leading exponents of this type of strength are Tchaikovsky and Berlioz. This season Munch turned again at length to Berlioz. He selected the "Symphonie Fantastique" and on July 26th treated as always with dynamic vividness and tense control of the theatrical colourings. In line with his careful easing from the rigid traditionalism which marked the three previous seasons as to repetitious, Munch went on with Berlioz to conduct a performance of the rarely heard "L'Enfance du Christ" on July 27th. Berlioz is here not flamboyant, but surprisingly serene and restrained. A luminous reverence and innocence infuses the music. Dr. Munch explored this Berlioz mood with exquisitely precise concern. The solo sections for contralto Florence Kopleff, as Mary, and the trio by the young Ishmaelites, for harp and flutes, were ultimately perfected moments in a memorable evening.

The Little Orchestra Society, under the direction of Thomas Scherman, traditionally performs "L'Enfance du Christ" at Town Hall during Christmas time. This is usually the only annual performance of the work. Considering both the new flexibility in programming for festival concerts and the Munch tour de force with Berlioz, it would be feasible as well as aesthetically rewarding to include "L'Enfance" in future Tanglewood seasons. At any rate, the July 27th performance should be recreated for records from either the radio tapes made for each shed concert or a studio recording with the same artists.

The first Tanglewood performance under Carl Schuricht on August 2nd was another milestone for Tanglewood history and a highlight of this season. The milestone: performance of a recent work ("Georgica") by a modern composer (Werner Egk) little known to American audiences. The highlight: Schuricht's grand-scale handling of the Brahms First Symphony. He demanded attenuated grandeur from the orchestra as a whole, with mobility in the sonorous horns and restrained lyricism in the strings. His requests were met with familiar BSO technical ease most of the time, but vigour sometimes nervously weakened into wobbly romantic flights, in the case of Richard Burgin's violin solo, or ragged gusto, in the case of the whole last movement. Schuricht drained too many orchestral colours and contrasts from this final movement, and had to sacrifice a degree of the ensemble polish he had triumphantly molded into restraint in the first three movements.

The old guard of conservatives loved Schuricht for his subjective but still Munch-like emphasis on rhythmical tensions rather than melodic stresses. The second circle was overwhelmed by the grandeur of Brahms conceptions and Schuricht's interpretation. The young traditionalists relished the opportunity to study Schuricht's expressive use of fingers in conducting and add another live version of the Brahms first to their repertoire of readings.

Egk's work, subtitled "Three Peasant Pieces for Orchestra", is a satire affectionately lampooning the gruff humours of his native Bavaria by means of raspy dissonances and repeatedly misplaced dynamic effects. At times Egk's joke wears thin, and the satire lapses into simple mockery from the pseudo-shmaltz strings. Schuricht deftly outlined the comedy of the piece; and the musicians especially the cymbalist, obviously enjoyed the all too rare opportunity to perform such a novelty. (That the student orchestra, despite its tight schedule might have such an attitude!)

There is no need to concentrate the lighter emotions into the single event of Tanglewood on Parade, as has been done previously. Music is an expression of total man, his laughter as well as his tears. Stravinsky, the master of simultaneous effects, has appropriately been given the most opportunity both to romp (the performance of his frivolous ballet music "Jeu de Cartes") and to muse (the performances of "Rite of Spring" and "Canticum Sacrum"). It is reassuring to see ahead further balance of the dark passions by moods of relaxation: the frolicsome Shostakovitch Concerto for Piano and Trumpet is scheduled for performance during the last week.

Balance — a sympathetic coexistence of the new with the old, the dark with the light, kinesis before and after stasis — is the keystone of success in any artistic undertaking. The one aspect of Tanglewood which shows signs of troublesome internal disparity is the Berkshire Music Center. What students said of Mr. Brant's work might be applied to their own school: the efforts in study and construction of performance aims, are unevenly matched by end results. A closer look at these weak points later; right now: congratulations to those involved in the festival, who have arrived at a peak of creative activity by reviewing critically and utilizing the accumulated achievements of the past.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 10 1957

[280]

Prizes Awarded at Tanglewood To Many Outstanding Students

TANGLEWOOD—Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, presented scholarship awards today to outstanding musicians who have studied at the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this summer. The wards were made during the intermission of the final weekly concert given by the student orchestra in the Music Shed.

Spalding Prize

The Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body, an award new this year consisting of the income from a fund established by Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington, in memory of the eminent violinist, has been given to Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N.Y. Miss Ritt, a graduate of Queens College, is studying at the Mannes College of Music. She appeared as soloist with the student orchestra in a performance of Schumann's Piano Concerto in A Minor on Thursday.

The Koussevitzky Memorial scholarship, established in memory of Serge Koussevitzky by residents of Berkshire County for a conducting student, has been awarded to Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, Great Britain. Mr. Morris, who attended the Royal Academy of Music in London, led the Music Center's student orchestra today in a performance of Bartok's Concerto for Orchestra. In 1955 and 1956, the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship was awarded to student conductor Kenneth Schermerhorn of Schenectady, N.Y.

Another student of orchestral conducting, Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, has been awarded the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship, representing income from the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund. Mr. Meier is an assistant conductor of the Zurich Opera Co. He conducted a performance of Ravel's Sheherazade at Tanglewood recently, with his wife, Shirley Sudock, as soprano soloist, and also led the student orchestra in a performance of Bachianas Brasileiras No. 2, by Villa-Lobos, Thursday, at Tanglewood on Parade.

Heifetz Awards

The Jascha Heifetz prizes, income from a fund established by the celebrated violinist, for violin students of exceptional attainment and promise, have been awarded to Hyman Bress of Montreal, Canada; David Lein of Tel-Aviv, Israel; and Vera Graf of Buenos Aires, Argentina. Mr. Bress is an alumnus of the Curtis Institute of Music, and was soloist recently with the student orchestra in a performance of Bartok's Violin Concerto. Mr. Lein attended the Jerusalem Academy of Music and has studied at the Juilliard School and the Mannes College of Music in New York. He was soloist at Tanglewood recently in a performance of Mozart's Violin Concerto in G major. Miss Graf was the recipient of a fellowship from the French government in 1956 and appeared as soloist today with the student orchestra in a performance of Haydn's Sinfonia Concertante.

The High Fidelity Magazine scholarship has been awarded to Jesse Levine of Bronx, New York, a violist in the student orchestra. Mr. Levine is a student at the Mannes College of Music in New York City. This is the first time in the history of the Berkshire Music Center that a violist has received an award. Mr. Levine was soloist at today's concert in a performance of the Viola Concerto by Sir William Walton.

Robert Wade of Wichita, Kan., has won the Carlotta M. Dreyfus scholarship, an award equal in amount to the tuition of the Berkshire Music Center. Mr. Wade, who plays French horn in the student orchestra and in chamber ensembles, is a student at Wichita University. Another tuition award is the Selly A. Eisemann scholarship, given this year to Garrett Morris of New Orleans, La., and Lajos Toth, formerly of Budapest, Hungary. Mr. Morris, a student of choral conducting, attends New Orleans University. Mr. Toth, a leading conductor in his native land before he came to the United States last year, has directed the Tanglewood Choir at concerts this season.

Jennie Fels Memorial

The Jennie Fels Memorial scholarship, another tuition award, has been given to Anne Rothgeb of Raleigh, N. C., a student in the opera department. Miss Rothgeb was a student at the Music Center in 1956 and has taken leading roles in presentations of opera scenes this season. The Lyda Watson Hersloff scholarship, awarded for the first time this year, has been won by Dorothy Kidney of Appleton, N. Y. Miss Kidney, who plays oboe in the student orchestra, is a student in the music division of Boston University.

The Koussevitzky Composition prize, awarded by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the best composition of the summer by a student composer, goes to David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, La., and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio. Mr. Ward-Steinman attended Indian Hill music camp in 1954, the Aspen music school in 1956, and graduated from Florida State University in 1957. Mr. Zupko, who attended the Berkshire Music Center in 1956, is an alumnus of the Juilliard School of Music and attended Youngstown University.

Orchestral Awards

James T. Anderson of Buffalo, N.Y., and Egil Hovland of Fredrikstad, Norway, have been awarded the Raphael Sagalyn award for orchestral works. Anderson attended Stanford University from 1953-55 and is now a student at Brandeis University. Mr. Hovland, who was a student at the Musik Konservatoriet in Oslo from 1945 until 1949, is a church organist in Fredrikstad.

The Samuel Wechsler commission is awarded each year to a present or former student of composition at the Music Center, by Samuel Wechsler of New York. In 1956, the commission was presented to composer Mark Bucci, whose one-act opera "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" received its world premiere at Tanglewood this season. In 1957, Marshall Bialoski of East Cleveland, Ohio, is the recipient of the Wechsler Commission. He studied at Tanglewood with the Italian composer Luigi Dallapiccola in 1952. The work he has been commissioned to compose will be performed at the Berkshire Music Center in 1958.

More than half of the students at the Music Center this summer have received grants from the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship fund, which was established in 1947 by the Radio Corporation of America and is maintained by contributions received from Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and from former students who benefited from the fund in previous years.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO
VINDICATOR
Circ. D. 96,376 - S. 137,062
AUG 14 1957

Zupko Awarded Prize For Music Composition

Ramon Zupko of 34 Stanton Ave. has been awarded the Koussevitzky Composition Prize, given for the outstanding student composition of the summer at the Berkshire Music Center, Lenox, Mass.

Zupko is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael E. Zupko. He is an alumnus of Juilliard School of Music and attended the Dana School of Music at Youngstown University three years.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541
AUG 10 1957

Tanglewood Awards Given Top Students At Music Center

Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, presented scholarship awards today to outstanding musicians who have studied at the summer music school maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra this summer. The awards were made during the intermission of the final weekly concert given by the student orchestra in the Music Shed.

The Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body, an award new this year consisting of the income from a fund established by Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington in memory of the eminent violinist, was given to Morey Ritt of Hempstead, N.Y. Miss Ritt, a graduate of Queens College, is studying at the Mannes College of Music.

The Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship, established in memory of Serge Koussevitzky by residents of Berkshire County for a conducting student, has been awarded to Wyn Morris of Llanelly, South Wales, Great Britain.

Another student of orchestral conducting, Gustav Meier of Zurich, Switzerland, was awarded the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship, representing income from the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Scholarship Fund. Mr. Meier is an assistant conductor of the Zurich Opera Co.

The Jascha Heifetz Prizes, income from a fund established by the celebrated violinist for violin students of exceptional attainment and promise were awarded to Hyman Bress of Montreal, Canada; David Lein of Tel-Aviv, Israel; and Vera Graf of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

The Koussevitzky Composition Prize, awarded by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation for the best composition of the summer by a student composer, goes to David Ward-Steinman of Alexandria, Louisiana, and Ramon Zupko of Youngstown, Ohio.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253
AUG 12 1957

Berkshire Center Gives Awards To 16 Musicians

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 11.—Sixteen musicians who have been studying at the Berkshire Music Center, the summer school maintained here by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, received prizes and scholarships yesterday. The awards were made by Aaron Copland, chairman of the center's faculty, during the intermission of the season's last afternoon students' concert in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Morey Ritt, pianist, of Hempstead, L. I., won the first Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising instrumentalist among this summer's students. The fund for this new annual award was established by Mrs. Spalding, widow of the noted American violinist, in memory of her husband.

Miss Ritt won the Music Education League's concerto award in 1951; the Stillman Kelley scholarship of the National Federation of Music Clubs in 1953 and the Kosciuszko Foundation's piano scholarship in 1956.

Among other award winners were:

Jesse Levine, of the Bronx, the first violist to win the "High Fidelity" magazine scholarship; James T. Anderson, of Buffalo, who shared the Raphael Sagalyn award for orchestral works, and Dorothy Kidney, of Appleton, N. Y., oboist.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
ITEM
Circ. D. 114,942 - S. 113,799
AUG 18 1957

Relaxed Musicians

Frank Gagnard

planist, can't read music, but he was soloist with the Cleveland Symphony last week . . . Mitch Miller, who can read music, conducted.

The national company of "My Fair Lady" continues to break box office records at the San Francisco Opera House . . . London will see the Moscow Art Theater next May in a repertory to include "Uncle Vanya," "Three Sisters" and "The Cherry Orchard."

Composer Charles Jones has solved the title problem by calling his first full-length symphony simply "Symphony." . . . Izler Solomon has signed for two more summers as conductor of the Aspen Festival orchestra.

Garrett Morris, of New Orleans, won the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship at the Berkshire Festival . . . Morris studies choral conducting at the Massachusetts music center.

Duke Ellington has composed a jazz suite, "Such Sweet Thunder," for performance at the Stratford, Ontario, Shakespearean Festival Sept. 8 . . . Gerry Mulligan and Teddy Wilson competed with the Bard over the week end.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
AUG 1 - 1957

TALKING IT OVER

Area Musicians to Participate In Programs in Other Centers

By Emma Van Wormer

Widely known musicians, identified with vocal and instrumental programs, will take part in notable events in New England and the middle west this month.

Palmer Cantata To Be Sung in 'Tanglewood'

Robert Palmer, former Syracusan, now living in Ithaca where he is a member of the music faculty of Cornell University, will be in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., where his chamber cantata "At Night and The Sea" will be performed in the Concert Hall next Tuesday night. It is in two parts, part one consisting of short poems ranging from classical Greek to modern texts and part two a setting of Walt Whitman's "Out of the Cradle Endlessly Rocking."

Part one was presented last April at the tenth anniversary of the Festival of the University of Illinois. The second part will be heard for the first time Aug. 6. The cantata was commissioned by the Fromm Foundation for the Urbana Festival in the University of Illinois. In the cantata there are four vocal solos and 11 solo instrumental parts.

Composer Palmer is the son of S. J. Palmer, 3520 Midland Ave. Mrs. Palmer is the daughter of Mrs. Lila M. Westcott, 1707 S. State St. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer and their daughters, Alice and Alison Palmer are vacationing on Lake Ontario before leaving for New England.

HOPEWELL, VA.
NEWS
Circ. D. 4,072
AUG 29 1957

Get Scholarships

LENOX, Mass.—(U.P.)—Six refugees from their native Hungary won scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Arpad Andreas Darazs, Lajos Toth, Erno Sethy, Gabor Neuman, George Alexander Vas and Piroska Kellen, a woman, were brought to the United States by the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

Their musical studies in the United States are being financed by the Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy (ANTA).

HARRISBURG, ILL.
REGISTER
Circ. D. 6,449
SEP 3 1957

Six Hungarian Refugees Get Scholarships

LENOX, Mass.—(UP)— Six refugees from their native Hungary won scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Arpad Andreas Darazs, Lajos Toth, Erno Sethy, Gabor Neuman, George Alexander Vas and Piroska Kellen, a woman, were brought to the United States by the International Rescue Committee and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

Their musical studies in the United States are being financed by the Aid to Hungarian Artists Program of the American National Theater and Academy (ANTA).

CLEVELAND, OHIO
PRESS
Circ. D. 309,685
AUG 14 1957

Marshall Bialoski, Cleveland composer (Heights grad), has been commissioned to do a work for the Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood, to be performed next season. This year Mark Bucci, son of Marcel (Cleveland Orchestra bassoonist), won the award and his one-act opera "A Tale for a Deaf Ear" was world premiered at Tanglewood this summer. Bialoski, who studied on Fulbright awards in Italy for two years, is now teaching humanities at Chicago University.

[2A2]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-JOURNAL
Circ. D. 133,704
JUL 30 1957

TALKING IT OVER

David Cerone Will Play With Chautauqua Orchestra Aug. 3

By Emma Van Wormer

Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale L. Cerone of DeWitt will go to Chautauqua this week to hear their son, David Cerone, gifted young violinist, play with the Chautauqua Student Orchestra in concert Saturday morning.

David, who made his debut last season with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra in Detroit, will play the Chanson "Poeme" in Chautauqua. He has been there for the last few summers, while studying each fall to late spring in Detroit. The student orchestra in Chautauqua will be

* * *

Unique Placing Of Performers In 'Tanglewood'

A unique antiphonal performance is scheduled for Thursday night in the Music Shed in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass. when the fifth weekly concert of the Berkshire Music Center Student Orchestra will perform. Cesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor, Dr. Charles Munch conducting, will climax the Orchestral Students' work in the 1957 season in the Music Center.

The Symphony will be followed by "The Grand Universal Circus," a new work by the American composer, Henry Brant and his wife, who wrote the lyrics. This utilizes the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, soloists, several choral conductors, a band and percussion groups from the student orchestra.

Sound effects, masks, movies and visual effects on the stage are planned for this antiphonal work, the performers placed in various parts of the Shed, surrounding the audience with various musical, verbal and visual impressions. The work presents the scientific, mythological and poetical conceptions of the creation of man, placed within framework of a circus and using many whimsical themes from contemporary life.

DAVID CERONE

Last year Mr. and Mrs. Brant won the "Prix Italia" in international competition for their work "December" which also used several orchestras in different parts of the theater. They were the first Americans to win this award. Mr. Brant, at one time was arranger for Benny Goodman, Now teaching in Bennington College, Bennington, Vt., Mr. Brant also has taught in Juilliard School of Music, New York City.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 18,541
AUG 1 - 1957

Music Center Program Change Made Tonight

A change in the program of the concert to be given this evening by the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, was announced today.

Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the students in a performance of Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony, replacing the "Grand Universal Circus" by Henry Brant previously scheduled. In the second half of the program, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the student orchestra in the Symphony in D Minor by Cesar Franck.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
DAILY NEWS
Circ. D. 2,092,455 - S. 3,652,302
JUL 30 1957

Student Concert

The fifth weekly concert by the Student Orchestra for the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center will be presented Thursday night at the Tanglewood Music Shed, Lenox, Mass. Charles Munch will conduct Cesar Franck's Symphony in D Minor.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 106,047
AUG 25 1957

Music

Original Mozart Scores Discovered in Worcester

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

Worcester may be on the musical map in a new capacity soon. There has been discovered here what is apparently a first edition, never reprinted, of "Eight Sonatinas for the Piano, with the Accompaniment of a Violin," by Mozart.

The scores received an informal "premiere" performance on the stage of the Music Shed at Tanglewood Aug. 3. The amazing sight-readers were Rudolf Serkin, pianist, and Isaac Stern, violinist.

During last week, an exhaustive search was conducted in the New York plant of one of the countrys largest music publishers (which now owns the House of Simrock, original publishers of the score) and no trace of another existing copy was found.

A final check is to be made on European sources. If this proves negative, arrangements will be made for the editing and publication of the "new" Mozart music, with the proper acknowledgement that it was discovered in Worcester.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 81,866
AUG 20 1957

Musician Begs Thief for Music

Boston, Aug. 19 (AP)—A musician would like to get back from a thief today something which is of questionable value to the thief but is of great value to the musician—a copy of his "irreplaceable" original manuscript of his own prize-winning composition.

Boston Symphony Orchestra player Harold Farberman said the only copy of his composition, "Five Winds and Five Strings," which won an award at the recent Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires, was stolen from his automobile last night along with his camera, record machine and some clothing.

Saying he wasn't concerned about the property—other than the music, Farberman explained he was "heartsick" over its loss. He said he discovered the theft just as he was about to go to New York City to have the piece performed.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,441 - S. 528,253
AUG 1 1957

Program Change

Tchaikovsky's Fourth Symphony will replace the originally announced "Grand Universal Circus" by Henry Brant in tonight's concert by the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Tchaikovsky work, and Charles Munch will conduct.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
TIMES
Circ. D. 337,145
JUL 23 1957

Famous Composers of Today Find Peace and Freedom in America

Two Marking Anniversaries This Week, Ernest Bloch and Ernst Von Dohnanyi, Typify the Elder Generation of Serious Creative Musicians Who Have Come to the United States.

By Clyde Neibarger.
(The Star's Music Editor)

INCREASINGLY through the last two decades, the United States has become a haven for musicians who have fled perils and uncertainties in their homelands in Europe. Composers, particularly, have found the elbow room in America that they need.

Two venerable composers who have found shelter in this country, Ernest Bloch and Ernst Von Dohnanyi, reach new anniversaries this week. Bloch, a powder-mine of creative force, turns his 77th birthday tomorrow, and continues active in the field of composition. Dohnanyi, pianist-composer-conductor, who has written three symphonies, three operas and many chamber and solo pieces, will be 80 years old Saturday. Dohnanyi is a native Hungarian; Bloch, of Swiss birth.

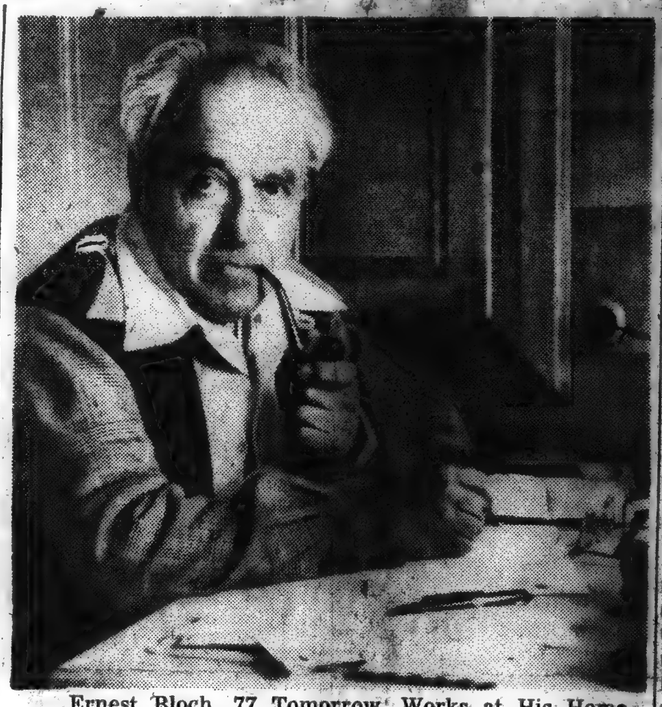
To Kansas Citians, Dohnanyi is the better known. Audiences here have fond memories of the Hungarian composer as a fiery pianist who created real excitement at the keyboard while an artist-in-residence at the University of Kansas City in 1949.

A Romanticist.

As a composer, Dohnanyi is quite another personality. He is a romanticist whose music is invariably beautiful, inventive and charming. Of his own works he played here some excerpts from his "Ruralia Hungarica" on Hungarian subjects, two rhapsodies and for encore, his "Music of the Spheres." Brahms himself, a few years before his death in 1897, praised Dohnanyi as a composer and pianist.

Dohnanyi's first public recital was given at the age of 9, at the keyboard. His first composition, for string quartet, had its premiere in Vienna by the Duesberg quartet with Dohnanyi, then 15, at the piano. He played his first London concert in 1898, and toured the United States a year later, with great success.

Russian domination of his homeland caused Dohnanyi to leave Hungary permanently in 1948. To a lesser degree, America has been a shelter for Ernest Bloch, native of Geneva, Switzerland. He first settled in this country in 1916 as a matter of free choice, to teach at the Mannes music school in New York. An interval in Italy in the 1930s was ended by the anti-Semitic movement in 1938. He settled at Agate Beach, Ore., in 1941.



Ernest Bloch, 77 Tomorrow, Works at His Home at Agate Beach, Ore.

Ernst Von Dohnanyi, Who Will Be 80 on Saturday, Was Photographed Thus When He Was Artist-in-Residence at the University of Kansas City in 1949.

The Jewish style of much of Bloch's music is its outstanding characteristic. Such works as his cello rhapsody, "Schelomo," his "Concerto Grosso for Strings and Piano," and his piano quintet are widely performed. As late as 1952, he composed a string quartet, the "Concerto Grosso No. 2," the Sinfonia Breve and "In Memorium," and still had time to go to Rome for a revival of his opera, "MacBeth." Olin Downes in 1954 described Bloch's work "as classic as Brahms or Beethoven," and marveled that a man well along in his 70s still was writing "living, important music."

The advanced age of the most notable serious composers of this era is exemplified by these two. The composite average age of Bloch, Dohnany and a half dozen of their living contemporaries — Jan Sibelius, Ralph Vaughan Williams, Fritz Kreisler, Igor Stravinsky, Zoltan Kodaly and Heitor Villa-Lobos — is 79 years.

Stravinsky at 75.

Sibelius, a Finn, at 91, is the oldest of the group. Vaughan Williams, a Briton, is 84, and Kreisler, best known as a violinist, is 82. Stravinsky's name was in the news last month when he received accolades as a still-productive composer on his 75th birthday June 17. Kodaly, Hungarian, is 74, and Villa-Lobos, Brazilian, is 70.

Igor Stravinsky is, in a sense, a fugitive from his Russian homeland. When war broke out in 1914 Stravinsky at the age of 32 settled in Switzerland. He has lived near Los Angeles the last 10 years.

Musicologists generally agree that Stravinsky is one of the greatest living composers. One expert, Jacques de Menasce, writes in the Juilliard Review that "here is a musician who, at the age of 38, could already look back to an extraordinary past and who now, in his 70s, is still a holder of wonderful promise for the future."

Fritz Kreisler has in a sense, too, found haven in this country. A native of Vienna, he was recalled to the Austrian army in July, 1914, and returned wounded to America three months later. He calls New York home now. His greatest fame is as a violinist, but he wrote a String Quartet in A Minor, some small pieces for violin, and collaborated on an operetta, "Apple Blossoms," performed in 1919 in New York.

Fled the Nazis.

Bohuslav Martinu's homeland was Czechoslovakia, but this prolific composer hurriedly left Paris in June, 1940, to flee the Nazis. He arrived in New York in March, 1941, and calls America his adopted homeland.

The disastrous turn which World War II took in France in 1940 drove Darius Milhaud to the U. S. At 64, he commutes between France and America, spending some time each summer at the Aspen Music festival in Colorado.

Another "exile" from homeland Russia is Alexander Tcherepnin, who calls Chicago home. He has composed two ballets, several operas and other works. He is 58.

Ernst Toch, Austrian composer, took up permanent U. S. residence in 1934 and has been living in Hollywood where he is a composer and teacher. His 70th birthday will be December 7.

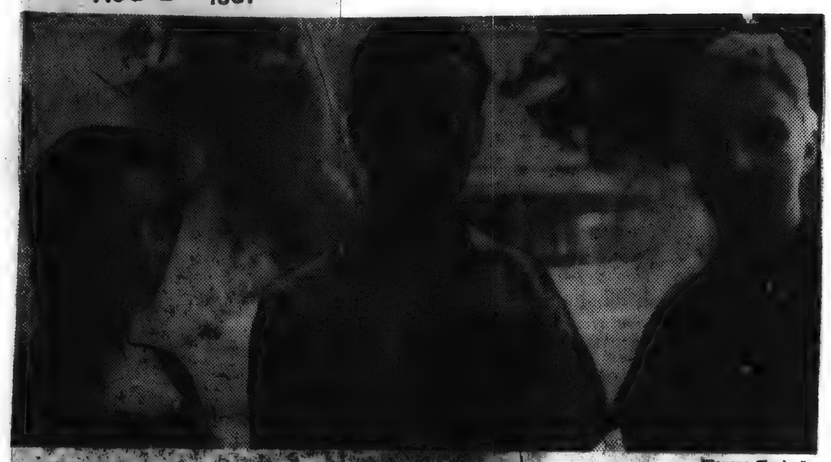
There are other younger composers dislodged from their European homelands by outbursts of war and political turmoil who have found refuge in America. They have helped to keep the creative pot boiling in this country.

Six young Hungarian musicians, refugees who came to the United States after the revolution in their native land last winter, have been awarded scholarships for study at the Berkshire Music center in Tanglewood, at Lenox, Mass., this summer. The six were taken from refugee camps in Austria and brought to the U. S. through efforts of the International Rescue committee and Hebrew Immigrant Aid society.

[2827]

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157

AUG 4 1957



Warren Clark, Jr.

STUDENTS IN TANGLEWOOD . . . pictured left to right. Miss Quint is in the opera department; Powers and Miss Litz play in the student orchestra. Elaine V. Quint, soprano, Syracuse; George R. Powers, trombonist, Ithaca, and Lanalee Litz, harpist, Syracuse, are studying in Berkshire Music Center.

TACOMA, WASH.
NEWS-TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 81,258 - S. 83,234

AUG 25 1957

WASHINGTONIANS AT TANGLEWOOD—A number of Western Washington residents have been attending classes at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., this summer. Some of them are pictured here, the group including Peter [illegible], violinist, and his wife, Joanna, pianist, of Seattle; Eugene Zoro, clarinetist, Bremerton; Eugene Stensager and his wife, Marianna, Montesano; Chester Wood, Port Orchard; and Dolores Vinikow, French horn, Seattle. The summer school of music is maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under direction of Charles Munch.

BEVERLY HILLS, CAL.
CITIZEN

AUG 7 1957

SUMMER SCHOOL—Residents of California who are at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer. Left to right: William O. Smith of Manhattan Beach, Robert W. Goldstein of Oakland, Jean Zeiger of Berkeley, Burton Zipser of Beverly Hills, Howard Colt of Los Angeles, Richard Sheere of Redlands.

MORRISTOWN, N. J.
RECORD
Circ. D. 12,663

AUG 9 1957

MUSICALLY MINDED—New Jersey residents studying at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., this summer include (L-R) Anne Teeter of Rumson, Andrew Crisanti of Cranford and Judith Fowle of Spring Brook, Morristown, who is a student in the choral department.

BAYONNE, N. J.
TIMES
Circ. D. 15,851

AUG 8 1957

AT MUSIC CENTER. — Miss Harriet Turteltaub (center) of 150 West 37th Street poses with three other New Jersey residents who are studying at the Berkshire Music Center this summer in Lenox, Mass. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram S. Turteltaub, Miss Turteltaub is a member of the Tanglewood Study Group, sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. This is the 15th year for the Center. It will close Sunday. From left are Evans Moore of Camden, who plays tuba in the student orchestra; Miss Turteltaub; Michael Kessler of Maple Shade, a composition student; and Anne Teeter of Rumson, a student in the choral department. Students of the school perform publicly four times a week.

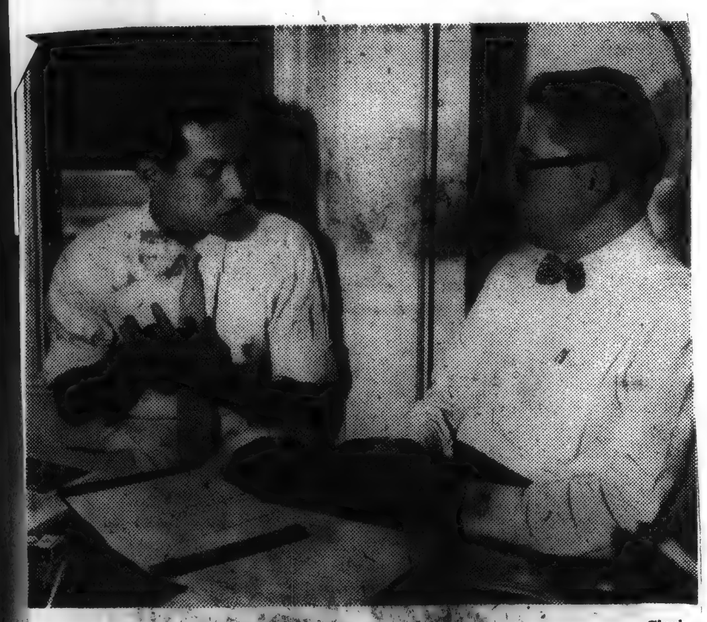
CHICAGO, ILL. DEFENDER

AUG 24 1957

ANNABELLE BERNARD, the New Orleans music student who went east to enter Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood is in line for role in opera next season. The Berkshire center, now in its 15th season has graduated some of the big names in opera since its opening.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 8 - 1957



Clark

JAPANESE CELLIST, Takayori Atsumi, left, consults with Dean Ralph Berkowitz of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Mr. Atsumi plays in the student orchestra.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN

AUG 9 1957

TALKING IT OVER

Mac Dowell Colony to Observe Half Century of Creative Art

By Emma Van Wormer

Word from Peterborough, N. H., tells of a conference scheduled for tomorrow in the Mac Dowell Colony, in observance of the Colony's 50 years.

The Colony, founded by the late Marian Mac Dowell in memory of her husband Edward MacDowell, gifted American composer, houses studios of some 26 writers, sculptors, painters and composers. Among working there in recent summers was Prof. Ernst Bacon, composer-in-residence Syracuse University.

Mrs. Mac Dowell died last summer on the eve of her ninety ninth birthday. A fine pianist and sympathetic musician, Mrs. Mac Dowell endeared herself to countless music lovers in many sections of the land. In the early days of the Colony Mrs. Mac Dowell made visits to music centers, often playing piano for interested folk and friend. We met her at one of these gatherings when she played, by request, some of the pieces dear to hearts of those who so enjoy Mac Dowell compositions. Included were favorites of Mrs. Mac Dowell's "To a Wild Rose" and "To a Water Lily."

Tomorrow a bronze tablet will be dedicated at the graves of Composer Mac Dowell and of Mrs. MacDowell. Later guests will have opportunity to inspect the several studios in the Colony. Luncheon hosts will be James Johnson Sweeney, president of the Mac Dowell Colony and Colony directors. Speakers at the panel discussion on problems of creative artists will be Composer Virgil Thomson; Ben Shahn, painter and Robert Penn Warren, Pulitzer prize-winning novelist.

Here and there: Roland E. Chesley of Utica, director of Great Artists Series there, and president of the National Concert Managers Association, has been in Stratford, Canada in attendance at the Stratford Festival. Announcement comes from the Stratford management that 78,000 attended plays at the Shakespearian Festival during the first half of the 1957 ten-weeks' season. The third annual music season in Stratford opened late last month. Programs include a wide range of song and instrumental literature.

Howard Mitchell, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, who conducted concerts in Guatemala City last month, will go to Hollywood to conduct a concert in Hollywood Bowl, Aug. 15 . . . Plans are being discussed for the 1958 season of the Empire State Music Festival in Ellenville, following a successful 1957 season. Opera, symphonic concerts and the ballet are presented during the Empire State Festivals. Several composers have conducted there.

Young musicians from Syracuse and Ithaca are students at the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., this season. Elaine V. Quint, 111 Roney Lane, and Lanalee Litz, 186 Dorwin Ave., Syracuse, were students in 1956 at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returning for the 1957 six-week session. George R. Powers, 523 East State St. Ithaca, next to the Music Center for the first time.

Miss Quint, a student in the opera department under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, attended Syracuse University and the University of Illinois. A soprano, she is recipient of a Leadership Training Program Fund Scholarship in Tanglewood, and has appeared in productions of opera scenes each Monday night in the Tanglewood Theater-Concert Hall.

Lanalee Litz, who plays harp in the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, received her Bachelor of Music degree from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester. George Powers plays trombone in the student orchestra and in chamber music groups. A student in Ithaca College, he attended the Dachau Center of Music in Dachau, Germany, in 1952. Both Miss Litz and Powers took part in weekly performances by the student orchestra under the direction of the Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, and in Sunday morning concerts of chamber music.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 336,443 - S. 528,253

AUG 11 1957

[283]

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Jazz: A New Interpretation

The Italians have their opera, the French their literature, the Germans their philosophy, and the Russians their inventors. To doubt the primacy, superiority, and sole validity of these intellectual possessions indicates blatant ignorance. There are those who would add to the list of copyrighted national cultural assets an American achievement, jazz.

Now there is certainly some justification for this attitude. Jazz is indisputably of American origin, its outstanding practitioners are American, it is celebrated all over the world, and it appeals to prince and pauper. Even the so-called "serious" or "classical" composers, from Ravel to Copland dip into it for inspiration and raw materials. But when it comes to assaying its role in the musical hierarchy we encounter some strange points of view.

An Excessive Claim

In the August issue of "High Fidelity," an excellent magazine devoted to recorded music in all its manifestations, Henry Pleasants goes to work, once more, with the thesis that modern "art" music is kaputt forever and must yield its place to jazz. This issue of the magazine deals mainly with jazz; it is well put together and contains a number of good articles, notably a gently admonishing editorial by Mr. Conley, the editor. I am afraid that Mr. Conley's urbane hints are insufficient to cope with Mr. Pleasants' preposterous claims.

The fascinating new discovery Mr. Pleasants offers is that the "beat" is the "new dimension" in jazz that lifts it above the humdrum of classical music; "the beat is what sends the jazz musician aloft and keeps him there." Though he says that "this is of course more or less true of all music," he adds that "from the jazz musician's point of view much classical music, and especially written or influenced by the German symphonists of the nineteenth century, can seem earthbound." It can, but if the symphonies from Beethoven and Schubert to Brahms and beyond are earthbound most of us will not want to be "sent aloft."

The whole argument about rhythm is pretty ambiguous. Mr. Pleasants says "the regularity and force of the beat permit and support a freedom of melodic and rhythmic flight denied to the jazz musician's classical brother." Is there any music worth listening to that is not similarly constituted? But now comes the trump card.

Who's Got Rhythm?

"When the classical musician deviates rhythmically, he takes the beat with him. When the jazz musician deviates, the beat remains where he left it. . . ." Ever hear of agogic, dynamic, and tonic accents in "serious" music? The great freedom and subtlety reserved for jazz by our discoverer of the new dimension in music has reigned in western art music ever since Gregorian chant. Indeed, a good performer of "classical" or "serious" music (or whatever that doomed variety is called) will take the beat with him—he has to—but it will remain "an explicit point of reference" to him, far more imaginatively so than to the jazz musician.

There is no difference here, except in quality. Jazz can exhibit subtle rubato, engaging polyrhythmic combinations, even counterpoint of a sort (though its harmony is meager), and these are appreciated by all musicians. But see what happens when a fine musician gets hold of these same elements. Take for instance Copland's Third Symphony which incorporates jazz elements. How much more refined, varied, and imaginative the beat he takes with him becomes in the hands of a cultivated artist.

Mr. Pleasants advances the further thesis that "if he is correct in his evaluation of American music (i.e., jazz) as the main current of musical evolution in our century," this event must rank with and duplicate "the most dramatic occurrence in the history of European music after organum,"—the advent of monody—which he ascribes to the irrepressible resurgence of music from popular roots.

This is a case of badly limping musicology. If there ever was a sophisticated, intellectually oriented stylistic change in musical history, it was this monody of the early seventeenth century. Conceived by learned antiquarians it was later appropriated by musicians whose hair was almost long enough to touch their ankles.

To clinch the argument that "the pulsating element is the feature of American music" (as if it were not the distinguishing feature of Andalusian, Sicilian, or any other rhythmically definable music), Mr. Pleasants approvingly quotes a statement by Harold Farberman, percussionist of the Boston Symphony. According to the latter's astute comparison, the jazz drummer plays within his organization, whereas the classical composer's percussion writing is "outside the inner fabric of the music."

Live and Let Live

Now, what kind of nonsense is this? I hate to think of what goes through Mr. Farberman's mind when he plays in the orchestra. He must be entirely dependent on the conductor's cues if he sees his instrument as outside the inner fabric of the music. The much-maligned classic composer (and this time the term is used in its original meaning) never demanded a whack on the timpani unless it was to emphasize some structural feature in the innermost fabric of the music. As a matter of fact, in many an early symphony the drum part (and often the trumpets, too,) was not even written out; every player knew when to fall in, that is, if his mind was on the music.

Jazz needs no such pugnacious defense, and comparisons with classical music are irrelevant and futile. I much prefer Mr. Mitropoulos' conclusions arrived at in the same issue of "High Fidelity." In his disarmingly naive pantheistic view of music he says with simple and earnest conviction: "Why make comparisons? . . . I do like to serve only the kind of music I represent. Yet I also accept the right of other people to express themselves differently, and therefore I feel no impulse either to hate them or to belittle for the sake of defending my art."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER DISPATCH

JUL 31 1957

TANGLEWOOD GUIDE

George Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue, is working this Summer at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, [illegible] Mass. A senior at Yale University, he is majoring in history, the arts and letters and plans to do graduate work in English. His duties at the six-week Summer music festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra include taking parties of tourists on guided tours of the Tanglewood estate.

CHICAGO, ILL. DEFENDER
AUG 24 1957

ANNABELLE BERNARD, Ger-
New Orleans music student who went east to enter Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood is in line for role in opera next season. The Berkshire center, now in its 15th season has graduated some of the big names in opera since its opening.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235
AUG 8 - 1957

Clark
JAPAN[illegible] Atsumi, left, consults with Dean [illegible] Boskovsky of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Mr. Atsumi plays in the student orchestra.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.
HERALD-AMERICAN
Circ. S. 222,157
AUG 9 1957

TALKING IT OVER

Mac Dowell Colony to Observe Half Century of Creative Art

By Emma Van Wormer

Word from Peterborough, N. H., tells of a conference scheduled for tomorrow in the Mac Dowell Colony, in observance of the Colony's 50 years.

The Colony, founded by the late Marian Mac Dowell in memory of her husband Edward Mac Dowell, gifted American composer, houses studios of some 26 writers, sculptors, painters and composers. Among working there in recent summers was Prof. Ernst Bacon, composer-in-residence, Syracuse University.

Mrs. Mac Dowell died last summer on the eve of her ninety ninth birthday. A fine pianist and sympathetic musician, Mrs. Mac Dowell endeared herself to countless music lovers in many sections of the land. In the early days of the Colony Mrs. Mac Dowell made visits to music centers, often playing piano for interested folk and friend. We met her at one of these gatherings when she played, by request, some of the pieces dear to hearts of those who so enjoy Mac Dowell compositions. Included were favorites of Mrs. Mac Dowell's—"To a Wild Rose" and "To a Water Lily."

Tomorrow a bronze tablet will be dedicated at the graves of Composer Mac Dowell and of Mrs. MacDowell. Later guests will have opportunity to inspect the several studios in the Colony. Luncheon hosts will be James Johnson Sweeney, president of the Mac Dowell Colony and Colony directors. Speakers at the panel discussion on problems of creative artists will be Composer Virgil Thomson; Ben Shahn, painter and Robert Penn Warren, Pulitzer prize-winning novelist.

Here and there: Roland E. Chesley of Utica, director of Great Artists Series there, and president of the National Concert Managers Association, has been in Stratford, Canada in attendance at the Stratford Festival. Announcement comes from the Stratford mangement that 78,000 attended plays at the Shakespearian Festival during the first half of the 1957 ten-weeks' season. The third annual music season in Stratford opened late last month. Programs include a wide range of song and instrumental literature.

Howard Mitchell, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, who conducted concerts in Guatemala City last month, will go to Hollywood to conduct a concert in Hollywood Bowl, Aug. 15 . . . Plans are being discussed for the 1958 season of the Empire State Music Festival in Ellenville, following a successful 1957 season. Opera, symphonic concerts and the ballet are presented during the Empire State Festivals. Several composers have conducted there.

Young musicians from Syracuse and Ithaca are students at the Berkshire Music Center in "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass., this season. Elaine V. Quint, 111 Roney Lane, and Lanalee Litz 186 Dorwin Ave., Syracuse, were students in 1956 at the summer school of music maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returning for the 1957 six-week session. George R. Powers, 523 East State St. Ithaca, next to the Music Center for the first time.

Miss Quint, a student in the opera department under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, attended Syracuse University and the University of Illinois. A soprano, she is recipient of a Leadership Training Program Fund Scholarship in Tanglewood, and has appeared in productions of opera scenes each Monday night in the Tanglewood Theater-Concert Hall.

Lanalee Litz, who plays harp in the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra, received her Bachelor of Music degree from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester. George Powers plays trombone in the student orchestra and in chamber music groups. A student in Ithaca College, he attended the Dachau Center of Music in Dachau, Germany, in 1952. Both Miss Litz and Powers took part in weekly performances by the student orchestra under the direction of the Brazilian conductor, Eleazar de Carvalho, and in Sunday morning concerts of chamber music.

[illegible] TRIBUNE
Circ. D. 556,443 - S. 520,253
AUG 11 1957

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

By PAUL HENRY LANG

Jazz: A New Interpretation

The Italians have their opera, the French their [illegible] the Germans their philosophy, and the Russians their [illegible] To doubt the primacy, superiority, and sole validity [illegible] intellectual possessions indicates blatant ignorance. There are those who would add to the list of [illegible]ished national cultural assets an American achievement, jazz.

Now there is certainly some justification for this attitude. Jazz is indisputably of American origin, its outstanding practitioners are American, it is celebrated all over the world, and it appeals to prince and pauper. Even the so-called "serious" or "classical" composers, from Ravel to Copland dip into it for inspiration and raw materials. But when it comes to assaying its role in the musical hierarchy we encounter some strange points of view.

An Excessive Claim

In the August issue of "High Fidelity," an excellent magazine devoted to recorded music in all its manifestations, Henry Pleasants goes to work, once more, with the thesis that modern "art" music is kaputt forever and must yield its place to jazz. This issue of the magazine deals mainly with jazz; it is well put together and contains a number of good articles, notably a gently admonishing editorial by Mr. Conley, the editor. I am afraid that Mr. Conley's urbane hints are insufficient to cope with Mr. Pleasants' preposterous claims.

The fascinating new discovery Mr. Pleasants offers is that the "beat" is the "new dimension" in jazz that lifts it above the humdrum of classical music; "the beat is what sends the jazz musician aloft and keeps him there." Though he says that "this is of course more or less true of all music," he adds that "from the jazz musician's point of view much classical music, and especially written [illegible]enced by the Germa[illegible]ists of the nine[illegible]ury, can seem earthb[illegible] can, but if the symph[illegible]Beethoven and Schu[illegible]hms and beyond are [illegible]d most of us will not [illegible] "sent aloft."

The whole argument about rhythm is pretty ambiguous. Mr. Pleasants says "the regularity and force of the beat permit and support a freedom of melodic and rhythmic flight denied to the jazz musician's classical brother." Is there any music worth listening to that is not similarly constituted? But now comes the trump card.

Who's Got Rhythm?

"When the classical musician deviates rhythmically, he takes the beat with him. When the jazz musician deviates, the beat remains where he left it . . ." Ever hear of agogic, dynamic, and tonic accents in "serious" music? The great freedom and subtlety reserved for jazz by our discoverers of the new dimension in music has reigned in western art music ever since Gregorian chant. Indeed, a good performer of "classical" or "serious" music (or whatever that doomed variety is called) will take the beat with him—he has to—but it will remain "an explicit point of reference" to him, far more imaginatively so than to the jazz musician.

There is no difference here except in quality. Jazz can exhibit subtle rubato, engaging polyrhythmic combinations, even counterpoint of a sort (though its harmony is meager), and these are appreciated by all musicians. But see what happens when a fine musician gets hold of these same elements. Take for instance Copland's Third Symphony which incorporates jazz elements. How much more refined, varied, and imaginative the beat he takes with him becomes in the hands of a cultivated artist.

Mr. Pleasants advances the further thesis that "if he is correct in his evaluation of American music (i.e., jazz) as the main current of musical evolution in our century," this event must rank with and duplicate "the most dramatic occurrence in the history of European music after organum,"—the advent of monody—which he ascribes to the irrepressible resurgence of music from popular roots.

This is a case of badly limping musicology. If there ever was a sophisticated, intellectually oriented stylistic change in musical history, it was this monody of the early seventeenth century. Conceived by learned antiquarians it was later appropriated by musicians whose hair was almost long enough to touch their ankles.

To clinch the argument that "the pulsating element is the feature of American music" (as if it were not the distinguishing feature of Andalusian, Sicilian, or any other rhythmically definable music), Mr. Pleasants approvingly quotes a statement by Harold Farberman, percussionist of the Boston Symphony. According to the latter's comparison, the jazz drummer plays within his organization, whereas the classical composer's percussion writing is "outside the inner fabric of the music."

Live and Let Live

Now, what kind of nonsense is this? I hate to think of what goes through Mr. Farberman's mind when he plays in [illegible] chestra. He must be entirely de[illegible] on the conductor's cue if he sees his instrument as outside the inner fabric of the music. The much-maligned classic composer (and this time the term is used in its original meaning) never demanded a whack on the timpani unless it was to emphasize some structural feature in the innermost fabric of the music. As a matter of fact, in many an early symphony the drum part (and often the trumpets, too,) was not even written out; every player knew when to fall in, that is if his mind was on the music.

Jazz needs no such pugnacious defense, and comparisons with classical music are irrelevant and futile. I much prefer Mr. [illegible] conclusions arrived at in the [illegible]ue of "High Fidelity." To [illegible] disarming naïve pamphlet [illegible]iew of music he says with simple and sincere conviction: "Why make comparisons? . . . I do like to serve up the kind of music I resent. Yet I also accept the right of other people to express themselves differently, and therefore I feel no impulse either to ridicule them or to belittle for the sake of defending my art."

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.
REPORTER DISPATCH
JUL 31 1957

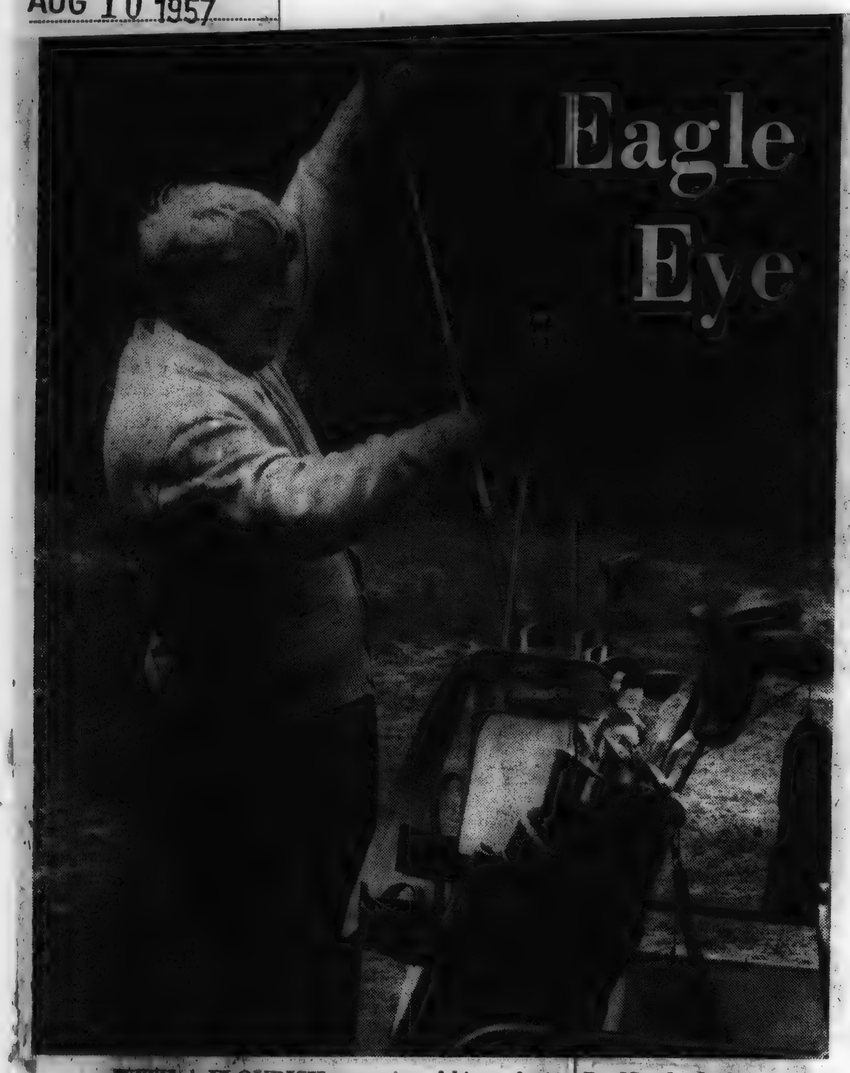
TANGLEWOOD GUIDE

George Tecklin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Tecklin of 170 Soundview Avenue, is working this Summer at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, [illegible] Mass. A senior at Yale University, he is majoring in history, fine arts and letters and plans to do graduate work in English. His duties at the six-week Summer music festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra include taking parties of tourists on guided tours of the Tanglewood estate.

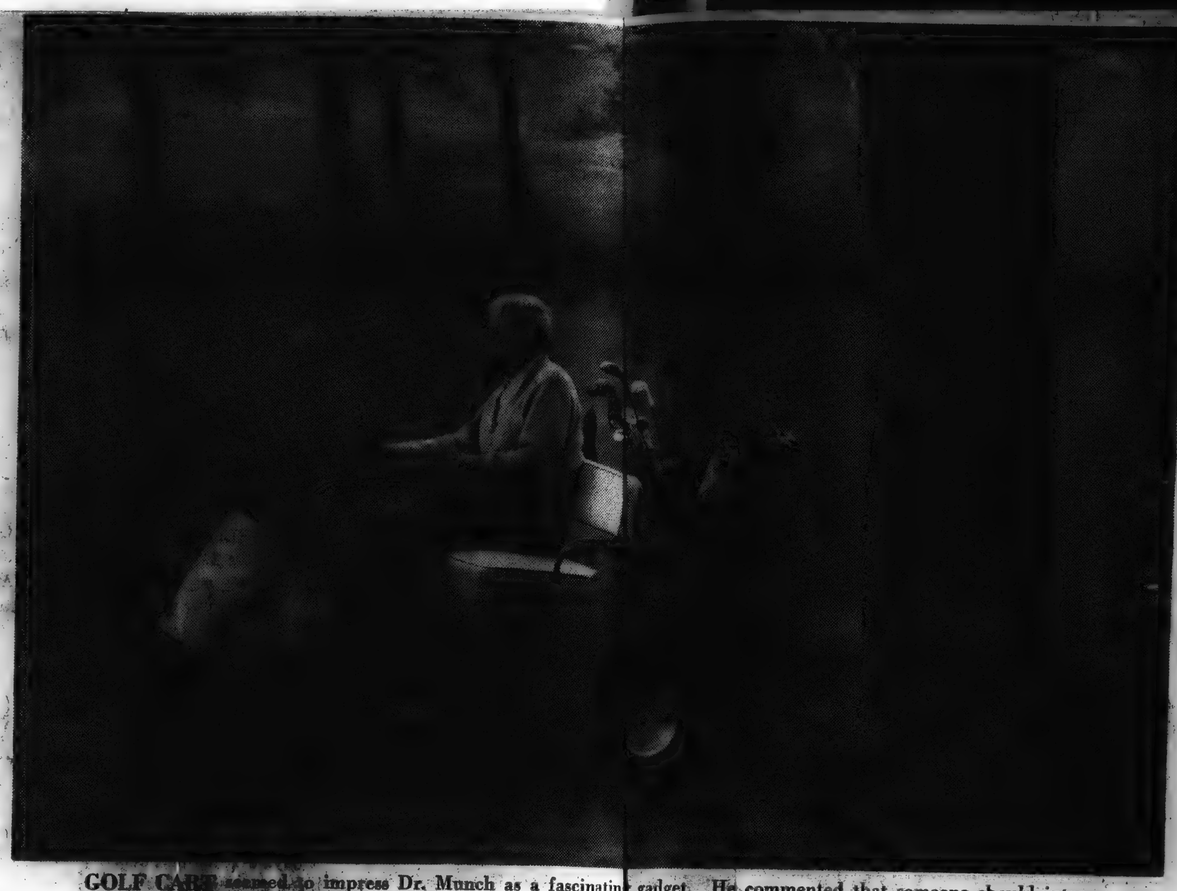
C2843

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 10 1957



WITH A FLOURISH suggestive of his profession, Dr. Munch plunks putter into bag and whips out his driver for the next tee shot. He's an average, occasional golfer who usually shoots somewhere in the nineties.



GOLF CART seemed to impress Dr. Munch as a fascinating gadget. He commented that someone should introduce them to European courses. The electric "go-cart," as he called it, is noiseless and easily carries two men.

Dr. Munch Plays Golf

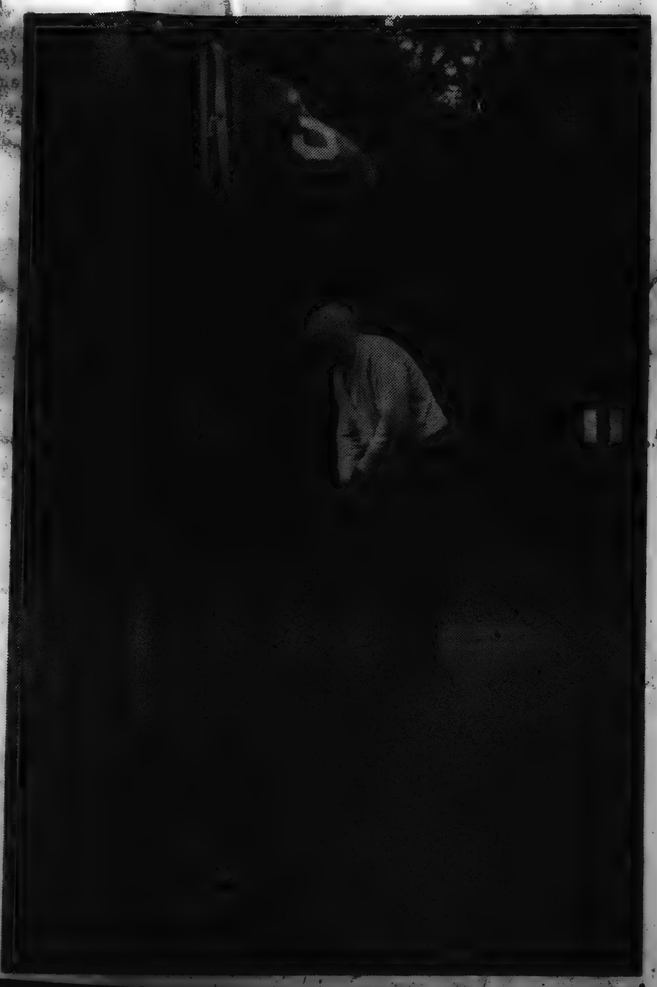
Written and Photographed

By William H. Tague

LIKE IKE and many other famous men, Dr. Charles Munch enjoys playing golf for relaxation. Leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra is not only a crushing responsibility, but a mental and physical strain on the conductor. The mind-soothing beauty of a golf course and the muscular therapy of the game itself make just the right ingredients to erase the maestro's tensions. Dr. Munch, 63, is well-coordinated and shoots in the nineties, although in this game he practically ignores the score. If he played more often he would be in the eighties. He seemed delighted to be able to get away for this round, shot at the Country Club of Pittsfield.

SUPERB SCENERY which surrounds the Country Club of Pittsfield and other Berkshire courses is one of the things that make golf such a pleasant game. Dr. Munch is on the 6th hole.

WOOD SHOT from 3rd fairway is made by Munch while his partner, John G. W. Mahanna, county editor of The Eagle, watches from cart. Though score wasn't kept, it looked like the Maestro was winning.



FOUR SITUATIONS reveal that Dr. Munch, like most of us, has both good and bad luck on the golf course. At left, he's at the top of his backswing and makes a good drive. Above, he pitches from road between pond and green on 2nd hole. Below, he chips from edge of trap near the 4th green. At right, he makes a fine, long putt on the 3rd green. Ball stopped only a few inches from the cup.

[285]

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178

AUG 8 1957

The Knickerbocker News Photo

WHAT IS IT? It is a kettledrum. What is in it? Reflections of the photographer who took this picture and of the drummers with the Boston Symphony Orchestra now playing at Tanglewood. For further reflections on drums and drumming you might turn to Page 1-B and read an interview by Duane LaFleche of The Knickerbocker News staff with the five timpanists and percussionists of the Boston Symphony. Mr. LaFleche found out, among other things, that the drums forecast the weather and that some drummers don't like to be called drummers.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 28,235

AUG 12 1957

By William H. Tague

IN A PINCH almost anything will serve as a seat. All chairs were taken, so this lady snuggled into a grapevine to watch the opera scenes during Tanglewood on Parade. This is the bitter end of Tanglewood pictures. No more will appear here this year.

Berkshire Eagle, August 6

Our Berkshires

The Middle Ground

By Katharine H. Annin

NOW AND THEN I come across a book or an article that gives me the satisfaction of clarifying some of my own vague and half-formed views and confirming my opinions. Such a one appeared in last week's Tanglewood program under the title "The Adventurous Listener," and over the initials of Mr. Burk, the Symphony's program annotator. I don't know when I have read anything that gave me more pleasure. It dealt with the knotty problem of contemporary music.

* * *

THIS IS the time of year when the Berkshires resound with extreme views on both sides of the subject. Whether you deliberately introduce the topic or it just comes up in casual conversation, you are sure to hear someone remark, "I don't go to Tanglewood any more because they play all that terrible modern stuff." Shortly afterward you will hear someone else complain that he is sick of Beethoven, and why doesn't Tanglewood give newer composers more chance to be heard?

While trying to reconcile these views with each other my heart begins to bleed for Dr. Munch and Mr. Perry and others in command of the Festival whose job it is to determine what the public wants and within limits to give it to them. For large orchestras are peculiarly dependent on box office support because of the huge cost of so many top-flight musicians. Smaller organizations like Pro Musica Antiqua, or the Fromm Foundation group playing contemporary chamber music at the Music Center, even South Mountain or Music Barn, can choose a limited period in music and specialize in it. They can, in effect, say to the public, "Take it or leave it," since they do not need audiences in the thousands to keep them in business. But an orchestra has to be all things to all music lovers.

* * *

IN AN EFFORT to confront emotional reactions with cold figures we made a count of last summer's Festival programs, classifying all the numbers played as standard or modern. We found the modern were just about one-fifth of the total. This seemed to me a fair proportion to appease the advance guard and at the same time satisfy the conservative listeners. But a scientific approach never makes any impression on extremists; a moderate point of view is called sitting on the fence and is nothing to to be proud of.

This was where Mr. Burk gave me so much comfort, for he commends middle-of-the-roaders, "that greater part of the seasoned concert going public which, when less than enraptured, accept equably and in good faith what may be offered for what it may contain." Furthermore, middle opinions, he says, "are likely to be nearer the truth because new music is apt to be in between as to quality, truly extraordinary works being rare in any age." He has thus supplied me with a perfect answer to the enthusiasts who keep mentioning that Richard Strauss, Brahms, Debussy, and others were considered too outrageous to be endured when first played, implying that this proves conclusively that all modern pieces that grate on our ears today are therefore immortal masterpieces—a non sequitur if I ever heard one. The fact that familiarity and a slowly developed understanding are necessary before any work of art can be assigned to its proper place is also the answer to the opposite extremists who don't want to listen to anything expressed in the post-romantic idioms.

* * *

THEN TOO I couldn't agree more heartily with Mr. Burk's contention that a conductor can be safely trusted with the choice of the programs, being by his training and the nature of his job in the best position to judge what new music has merit and what contemporary composers deserve encouragement. As to Dr. Munch, if you have read his book, "I Am a Conductor," you cannot have failed to be impressed by his great musical wisdom and integrity. Assuredly he will not neglect the classical masters, but neither will he repeat their works until musicians and audience alike are sick of them. On the other hand, neither will he fail to give us new musical experiences through new music whose merit he is better able than we are to judge.

So now I feel more secure in my moderate position, and march unashamedly in the middle of the road to Tanglewood to hear all the fine performances I can, not claiming to enjoy all the new music, but admitting that I enjoy much of it more than I used to. It is all summed up well in the quotation (from Mr. Frederick Walkey of Lincoln, Mass.) with which Mr. Burk prefaces his article: "Two, and I think only two, requisites are essential to understanding the art of our time. The first is tolerance; the second is repeated exposure."

ALBANY, N. Y.
Knickerbocker News
Circ. D. 53,178
AUG 8 1957

Percussion Virtuosos Beat the Drums

In Timpanist Alley, Modern Composers Find a Rhythm the Masters Missed

By DUANE LaFLECHE

THE drums were being given a sunning.

They sat there outside the big shed at Tanglewood muttering softly to themselves and forecasting continued fine weather. Their kettles sparkled.

Now and again a young man would leave the group with which he was sitting to softly tap their tightly stretched heads. The drums only muttered the more.

• • •

IT was Everett Firth, timpanist, who was giving his drums their sunning. In the group with which he sat were the four other drummers of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Smith, Harold Thompson, Arthur Press and Harold Farberman. They were there to talk about the role in music of drummers and of drums, cymbals, tam-tams, castanets, xylophones, chimes, tambourines, triangles, xylophones, marimbas, wood blocks and all the other instruments they play. More particularly they were there to talk about the role they and their instruments play in the Boston Symphony and Boston Pops orchestras.

If they were of an older school, they would have found it offensive to be spoken of as drummers. Timpanists and percussionists is what they are and with each passing year they are called on to create new wonders in sound. Mozart called on drummers scarcely, if at all. Beethoven generally found kettledrums sufficient for his need. But with modern composers (of course "modern" goes back quite a while) things are different, even to the point where in one score Morton Gould simply wrote and left for the drummers to interpret, "Rocking Chair Effect" and in another Leroy Anderson called for the sound of a typewriter.

It was Harold Thompson, who plays the cymbals and is the trouble shooter, inventor and builder for the percussion section, who solved the problems raised by Gould and Anderson. A rosin can (a bit of string, rosin and a tin can) produced Gould's "rocking chair effect." For Anderson's typewriter, he used—a typewriter. But one with ribbon removed and a sheet of galvanized iron in place of paper. It was most effective.

But such things are somewhat in the realm of novelties, and the real role of percussion and timpani in an orchestra was put forth by the same Mr. Thompson in saying:

"The kettledrums are the most important of our instruments and the foundation of the whole orchestra. They not only supply the rhythm, but they supply the foundation note. They sustain long pedal tones. They play intricate figures."

And American composers are now taking advantage of the musical possibilities of the percussion instruments, Mr. Smith interposed, rattling off the names of Barbour, Copeland, Bernstein, Gershwin and others. But he had another point to make:

"America," he said, "is the only country where percussion instruments are being studied as a science and where virtuosity is being developed to meet all the demands of music. In the European trips of the orchestra in 1952 and last year we found musicians abroad viewing our percussion and timpani as sensational."

In the Boston symphony Mr. Smith plays "the mallets," or more properly, instruments struck by mallets; the xylophone, the vibraphone, the marimba and the chimes.

Mr. Press, whose chief place in the orchestra is beside the big brass drum, but who also clicks the castanets, rattles the tambourine and brings remarkable sound from a simple stick and equally simple wooden blocks, recalled how American jazz drummers have had European tours that could be described only as "triumphant." He says the facility of those jazz drummers has had a marked influence not only on their counterparts in symphony orchestras but has been a spur to composers as well.

"Drummers in both dance bands and symphony orchestras," he said, "have at last emerged into their own with a fine virtuoso approach. More and more is being expected of them."

But since drummers are being called on more and more by modern composers, what qualifications must a drummer have? It was Mr. Firth, he who uses his kettledrums to forecast the weather (since they are as sensitive to changes in air pressures as the finest barometer) who answered.

"The requirement of a drummer are the same as of any instrumentalist," he said. "He must have rhythm, a good ear, a flair for interpretation and imagination. Imagination most of all, perhaps, for each drummer in a symphony orchestra is almost a solo player. He differs from the other instrumentalist only in that he is concerned more with sound and effect than with pitch."

To achieve some of the effects he attains with his kettledrums, Mr. Firth has on hand 40 sets of drum sticks, hard and soft and all degrees of in-be-tween. Their heads are covered with a half dozen different kinds of felt, with suede, calfskin and other leathers. Some have simple wooden heads.

The humidity, the hall in which he is playing, the music and a dozen other considerations enter into his choice of sticks. He finds the big shed at Tanglewood highly resonant, so is inclined to used harder sticks to perserve clarity and keep the rhythm from becoming mushy.

Mr. Faberman, one of the youngest of the five drummers, is not only snare drummer and second timpanist for the orchestra but is a composer as well. Taking a cue from Bartok, who wrote "Strings and Percussion," he wrote "Percission and Strings" and tomorrow afternoon at South Mountain in Pittsfield the New York Percussion Trio will play his "The Up-beat vs. the Down-beat."

His aim as a composer is, he says, "to take percussion from behind the palm trees."

One who attended last Sunday's concert at Tanglewood might have noticed the five percussionists and timpanists at the left and to the rear as he faced the orchestra. Mr. Firth and his kettle drums were busy much of the time. Mr. Faberman was at the snare drum, and in the Brahms "Academic Festival Overture" he would have noted Mr. Smith waiting with his triangle, Mr. Press bent low over his bass drum and striking it oh, so gently, and Mr. Thompson standing by with giant cymbals poised.

But did Mr. Thompson clash his cymbals? No, not in the Brahms! Rather he brought them together gently as shy lovers in their first kiss.

Mr. Thompson has cymbals of all sizes and thicknesses (one pair is 24 inches in diameter and each cymbal weighs eight pounds) that he uses in dozens of ways and for dozens of effects ranging from the loudest crash to the gentlest shimmering. And over to one side hang the tam-tams, Chinese temple gongs that once when struck meant a head had fallen, but which he strikes for special bell-like effects or scrapes with a bit of metal to produce a rasping sound.

But of what does a cymbalist think and what does he do as he stands waiting for the brief instant when he will bring his cymbals together?

"He follows the music, he keeps alert and he controls his tension," said Mr. Thompson.

And controlling tension can be difficult, he implied, saying:

"The cymbalist can ruin a concert. He has as much responsibility as the instrumentalist who has a thousand notes to play. A conductor and the other instrumentalist may be relying on that one cymbal crash as a landmark in the score."

• • •

It would have been appropriate, perhaps, to have Mr. Thompson's cymbal crash end the interview. But as it was the drums, being sunned to rid them of the moisture their heads had absorbed, that had opened the interview, so they closed it.

Sympathetic to every vibration around them, they still were muttering softly to themselves.

Mr. Firth had had enough of it. Patient for the moment, with felt pads he stilled their growls.

He was waiting fo tomorrow night and another concert. Then he would beat them.

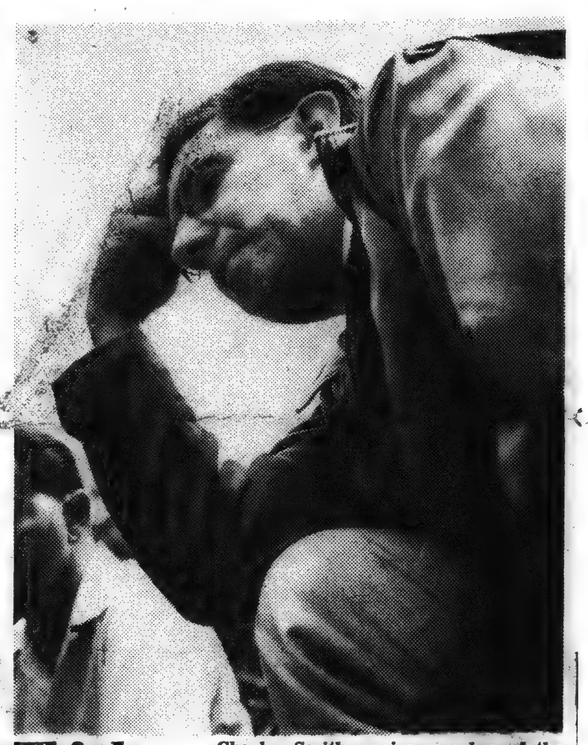
Boom, Boom, Boooooooom!

Timpani for the Symphony— Almost surrounded by kettledrums on the lawn at Tanglewood is Everett Firth, first timpanist for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He had his drums outside to give them a sunning and here, with ear cocked, he taps them a bit to test whether the sun has done its work of ridding the drumheads of moisture.

Red Musicians' Instruments Poor

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which went to Russia last year during a European tour, have great respect for Russian musicians but also feel a bit sorry for them because their instruments are so poor.

"In Leningrad," members of the percussion section of the orchestra said, "the musicians were amazed at our instruments. Theirs were not only of poor quality but also in poor repair."



Thinker— Charles Smith, senior member of the percussion section of the Boston Symphony, unconsciously adopt a pose akin to Rodin's "The Thinker" as he tells about the virtuosity of American timpanists and percussionists.

The Talk Is of Drums— Arthur Press, at left, plays the big base drum with the Boston Symphony and says the facility of jazz drummers has influenced composers of more serious music to demand more and more of symphony percussionists. Harold Thompson, center, who handles the big cymbals, is also an inventor of sound effects for the orchestra. At the right Everett Firth, timpanist, says imaginations is of vital importance in a drummer.

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D, 534,376 - S. 1,149,467

NOV 24 1957

HOLLYWOOD VISTA

Cinemiracle Big-Screen System Clicks —'Tanglewood' Sought—Addenda

By THOMAS M. PRYOR

HOLLYWOOD.

THE big screen again has occasioned big excitement in Hollywood, following a series of progress demonstrations of Cinemiracle, developed by National Theatres, Inc., Smith-Dietrich Corporation of New York and Louis de Rochemont, independent producer. The showings last week at a laboratory theatre here, where the system was first exposed to moviemakers more than two years ago in what—as is now apparent—was very crude form, established Cinemiracle in the minds of most viewers as a marked improvement on its progenitor, Cinerama.

They are the only comparable big-screen processes, offering a wall-to-wall picture that takes the spectator into the action on the screen. There are distinct technical differences between the two systems, although both utilize three separate 35mm. strips of film in photography and the picture goes to the screen from three projection machines. Cinerama works on direct photographic and projection principles. Cinemiracle actually functions with an arrangement of mirrors in both cases.

Rave Notices

There appears to be no question that Cinemiracle puts a picture of better quality on the screen, free of the flaws that break the pictorial image in Cinerama. Here are some typical reactions: "Tops them all," said The Hollywood Reporter. "Equal to, if not the best, of the big screen processes unveiled to date," said Daily Variety. King Vidor, long a top director, declared "I would like to do a picture in Cinemiracle. The footage I saw was very exciting. You are drawn into the picture, not just looking at it with a detached feeling of watching movement on the screen."

The only reservations indicated stemmed from lack of first-hand technical knowledge about the method. Some believe that on the basis of a few intimate scenes demonstrated, one in the cramped wireless shack of a sailing vessel—that there probably would not be any "insurmountable problems" in handling tight dramatic situations.

National Theatres put $1,500,000 into development of Cinemiracle, according to Elmer C. Rhoden, president of the theatre company. He also revealed that his attention was called to the process by Mr. de Rochemont. The latter produced and currently is editing the first feature filmed in the process, "Cinemiracle Adventure." It is scheduled for road-show presentation in March, with openings at theatres in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Mr. Rhoden also disclosed that Jack L. Warner was the only Hollywood studio head who wrote him an encouraging letter when experimental work first started. Warner Brothers has entered into partnership with National Theatres to produce three pictures in the process. The first will be based on the Max Reinhardt stage spectacle, "The Miracle."

Posthumous Appreciation

The late James Agee, whose newly published novel, "A Death in the Family," has generated uncommon excitement in the literary world, also is currently stirring interest in motion picture circles. Producers and directors are lining up to examine the screenplay called "A Tanglewood Story," written in collaboration with Howard Taubman, music critic for this newspaper. Mr. Agee completed the final second draft of the script shortly before he died two years ago. It was his last major writing effort. Among interested studios and independent film-makers are Twentieth Century-Fox, Sam Spiegel, Jerry Wald, Louis de Rochemont and Mark Robson.

"A Tanglewood Story" deals with young musicians at a turning point in their personal and professional fortunes, dramatized in the setting of the annual Berkshire Festival of Music performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch. The conductor and the symphony management cooperated in the preparation of the screenplay, and the facilities at Tanglewood, including the summer school maintained by the Boston Symphony, will be made available for production of the film to assure authenticity.

It is fitting, in a way, that Mr. Agee's final work was for the motion picture, for, as a practicing screen critic for a number of years he did not hesitate to express his admiration and respect for the instrument of expression that Hollywood commands. Indeed, he wrote a poignant commentary for the documentary film "The Quiet One," and contributed humor and warmth to "The African Queen" in a collaboration with John Huston. This new Hollywood interest, one suspects, would have pleased Mr. Agee as much, perhaps even more, than the glowing examination of his talent as a creative writer that "A Death in the Family" has inspired.

Shifting Gears

In his transformation from staff producer at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to independent producer at Columbia Pictures, Charles Schnee has set a goal of six pictures to be completed in three years. Not a pressing schedule, it would seem, for a man who a few years back supervised the production of twenty-two pictures in sixteen months when Metro was seeking to replenish aging man power with new writer, director, producer and acting talents.

He does not intend to measure time by hours or days in preparing the dramatization of Bernard Dryer's novel "The Image Makers" as his first Columbia picture. In this love story, to be played against the turbulence of the drive for independence by French colonies in North Africa, Mr. Schnee believes he has the "two essentials" for a successful film—"a strong personal story and a strong background working for you."

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,931

DEC 12 1957

In Search of the Unknown America III:

Tanglewood Unsurpassed In Europe

By Hans D. Kley

Reporter, Freie Presse Bielefeld

(This is the third of 11 articles by a young German newspaperman about his recent visit to the U.S., part of which was spent at the Quincy Patriot Ledger.)

BIELEFELD, West Germany—The first highlight of my trip across the United States was in Tanglewood.

Marvelous Setting For Music

It is simply a marvelous idea to have concerts in an open hall with the rest of the audience on the grass outside.

Once again I was impressed by the performance (especially of the strings and brass instruments) the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. The Sunday afternoon music was a magnificent interpretation of Mendelssohn, Tschaikowski and Stravinsky.

After one concert I was asked by an acquaintance if Tanglewood would be comparable to Salzburg or another European music festival. As far as the musical performance is concerned it certainly can compete with every European festival I know. The audience is another story.

While the Germans go to the concerts in a mood like other people go to church, many American music lovers do not mind coming in Bermuda shorts and open, colorful shirts.

This is perfectly all right (and common sense, too). But when the strokes of destiny of the Fifth Symphony resound people should have eaten their cold cutlet, they should not continue to drink soda-pop and they should not smoke cigars and cigarets.

And during the adagio they should not discuss the shortest way home and the baseball results either.

It's even disturbing to laugh during the fortissimo in the allegro or to hum the melody. Angry cries of "shut up" from the more serious visitors made the situation even more ridiculous.

In the evening of the same day many visitors traveled some miles farther to a separate shelter, in which Lionel Hampton gave a jazz concert with his spirited band.

The bald-headed Negro treated various instruments with such a devotion that the sweat ran down his head in little creeks.

He wildly handled his drumsticks, threw them up in the air, caught them from behind, jumped enthusiastically on the drums, stroked vigorously on an empty box and then on the piano plate, kneeled down ecstatically in front of his audience, jumped up, danced, sang, laughed, announced his program—and played the Star Spangled Banner at the end.

His audience was delighted about all this, but it was more disciplined than many German jazz fans.

[286]

NEW YORK, N. Y.
TIMES
Circ. D. 534,376 - S. 1,149,467

NOV 10 1957

CIVIC FROLICS CAN HAVE LASTING BENEFIT, TOO

By ROBERT MEYER Jr.

FESTIVALS are big business. Although as a rule they are intended merely to pep up civic pride by ballyhooing agricultural, religious or social aspects of a community, if properly staged they can be economic and cultural assets in their own right.

Partisans point with pride to the annual Pennsylvania Dutch Festival in Kutztown, Pa. (population 3,110), where last summer over the long Fourth of July week-end the festival attracted 38,987 paid admissions at a dollar apiece. Children under 12 were admitted free. Total gate receipts, including 50-cent auto parking fees, amounted to nearly $45,000.

Receipts from all other sources (mainly derived from 15 per cent of the gross earned at tents where church societies served Pennsylvania Dutch dinners) swelled the total to about $62,000. It cost approximately $32,000 to stage the five-day event. The remaining $30,000 was dutifully plowed right back into a project of enduring value: A permanent Pennsylvania Dutch Folklore Center at near-by Bethel.

The Pennsylvania Dutch Festival proves, as do many other festivals, that the amount of money made by a community show does not necessarily have to be restricted by its short duration. Years ago this fact became so obvious to civic leaders in cities as far apart as Tampa, Fla., Lawton, Okla., and St. Paul, Minn., that they engaged executive secretaries to work the year round to coordinate plans for the greater glory of the following year's short-lived spectacular.

Managers Organize

Tampa is now famous for its Gasparilla Pirate Festival. Lawton has its well-established Easter Sunrise Service. St. Paul makes the most of its snow.

As more festivals signed up professional managers, the desirability of a Festival Managers' Association became evident. Last year a dozen managers formed such an organization. Within a year they added another twenty-four to their rolls, and have great expectations of increasing the present total. The potential membership is prodigious, because every year, in this country alone, there are several thousand community events which range from anniversaries to water carnivals.

The group held its second annual meeting in New York City recently and changed its name to International Festivals' Association because the Quebec Winter Carnival is a member, and since other Canadian, Latin American and European festivals are expected to join. For two days the members exchanged ideas and listened to experts in the fields of transportation, float building, newspaper and television coverage, military participation, entertainment, advertising and publicity. During the next twelve months they will thrash out ideas in their monthly house organ called "I. F. A. Closed Circuit," and publicize their events in "Festival News."

Roots in the Past

The romance of festivals is woven into the fabric of American folklore. In Florida, for instance, the Florida State Fair and Ye Mystic Krewe of Gasparilla which sponsors the Gasparilla Pirate Festival were more or less born together around 1904.

An emigré from New Orleans suggested to civic and social leaders in Tampa that they fashion a spring festival after the New Orleans Mardi Gras. They named this purely social celebration for José Gaspar, a true disciple of the skull and bones, who raided merchantmen off the west coast of Florida in the Seventeen Eighties.

The New York Times

HOOPLA—The Gasparilla Pirate Ship makes its traditional invasion of Tampa.

While they were setting up a festival they decided to add a fair. It developed from the South Florida Fair to the Florida State Fair.

Through the years the Pirate Festival became more social, and the exposition became more commercial. However, inasmuch as the fair tied the word Gasparilla into its corporate title, it became known as the Florida State Fair and Gasparilla Association. As a spokesman for the Pirate Festival explained recently, "We are not married; we are just good friends. For a sizable contribution to our treasure chest from the Fair, we march our big Invasion Day Parade into the Fair Grounds. That ends the association."

Nevertheless, visitors go to Tampa to see both events, since they are staged concurrently during the first two weeks in February. In 1957 the Fair's paid admissions exceeded one million. The double-header attraction draws an estimated 1,250,000 visitors to Tampa (latest estimated population 259,000) during eleven days.

Traffic Solid

In that period a typical visit averages three days; yet approximately 300,000 visitors are said to jam the business district on the day of the popular Pirate Invasion and Parade. This results in a king-size traffic jam that is felt as far as thirty miles away.

The Tampa Convention Bureau figures that visitors spend an average of $25 per day. Of course, this estimate does not hold for the crowd of 300,000, many of whom are in Tampa for only one day and spend money for meals and lodging in neighboring towns.

This festival costs the Krewe and various sponsors of the sixty floats as much as $250,000. Included in this total is the expense of importing as many as sixty bands from all parts of Florida and neighboring states. All financial surpluses, if any, are spent on the next year's festival.

While thousands cheer a pirate king in sunny Florida, other thousands pay homage to King Boris in snow-covered St. Paul, Minn. This year at least 10,000 out-of-towners attended the ten-day St. Paul Winter Carnival. They averaged two full days each at $25 per day.

Total cost of staging the event comes to about $210,000. At least $125,000 is borne by business firms and industrial organizations which sponsor floats in the two gigantic parades that wind up in the huge Municipal Auditorium so that at least 15,000 spectators each time can see them in steam-heated comfort.

Since this is a non-profit civic celebration, a surplus, if one occurs, is used to finance the celebration the following year.

Anniversary Next Year

Next year will be Centennial Year in Minnesota, marking the hundredth anniversary of the state's admittance into the Union. In 1955 the Legislature voted $100,000 for the preparation of plans for the year-long event. This year it voted another $1,500,000 to finance it.

The National Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D. C., is usually staged during the first week in April. It is financed primarily with an allocation of $10,000 from the operating funds of the Greater National Capital Committee, the Convention and Visitors Bureau of Washington. Additional funds are provided by the festival itself.

In recent years the Festival Souvenir Program has become a revenue producer by way of advertising and sales. Close to 5,000 seats are erected for use during the famous illuminated parade. Parade ticket prices are $2.50 in the reviewing stand, $2 for near-by choice locations, and $1.50 for stands at intervals along the line of march.

A fashion show-luncheon, staged on a by-invitation-only basis, earns $7.50 a head. Invitations to the ball also produce revenue. Two years ago $26,000 was spent on the fiesta, which enabled the sponsors to return to the general fund $2,000 of the $10,000 allocated.

80,000 at Easter Service

The Wichita Mountain Easter Sunrise Service has become so firmly established on the outskirts of Lawton, Okla., that a replica of the Holy City has been built there. Normally 80,000 persons gather before midnight on the eve of Easter to witness the pre-dawn pageant which is staged in the Holy City setting. Of these spectators, an estimated 70,000 have traveled more than 100 miles to witness the performance.

Throughout the year an estimated 300,000 persons tour the permanent installation which is still under construction. There is no admission at any time, but a free-will offering is taken at the pageant, and donations are accepted. About three-fourths of the budget is raised in this way. The remainder of the total budget is made up by an allocation from the Lawton-Fort Sill United Fund.

The sponsors are working toward a goal which will enable the project to be self-supporting. It costs about $16,000 to maintain the tourist attraction the year 'round. Proceeds are spent on expanding the organization's religious program.

What is more festive than a New England forest in the fall? Years ago the New Hampshire Planning and Development Board in Concord, and the Monadnock Region Association in Peterborough, N. H., discovered that flaming foliage has financial rewards as well as beauty. They have since been deriving all sorts of profit from both attributes. The development board issues weekly bulletins on the state-wide progress of coloration, and the association plots half a dozen routes ranging from fifty to a hundred and fifty miles through southern New Hampshire.

Large Area

Because the Monadnock region covers a considerable area, officials of the association can only guess that the total number of visitors there—from about Sept. 20-Oct. 20—runs into hundreds of thousands. Highways usually are crowded on week-ends, at which time the average gas station is said to pump 1,000 more gallons of gas than on a busy summer week-end. Daily expenditure per capita in the region has been esitmated at $4.50, since the majority of the sight-seers are there only for the day.

The tours, of course, are admission-free. The total cost of staging them sets the association back about $800, but at least 1,000 times that amount of business is attracted to the area. Nationally known photographers, most of whom spend about a week working the area, have made flaming foliage in New Hampshire internationally famous.

The Berkshires in Massachusetts shelter at least two internationally famous cultural festivals. One is the far-famed Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood near Lenox, and the other is the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival near Lee.

Last July and August the Berkshire Music Festival was the most successful ever held in the twenty years the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been giving concerts in the Music Shed. A total of 162,936 persons paid $366,122 to establish record attendance and receipts. The festival's big project, aside from entertaining its patrons, is the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra summer school where 330 students were enrolled this year.

Also, in 1957, more than 4,800 persons joined the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and contributed more than $20,000, which went toward the support of the school. Added to this are scholarship grants amounting to $6,853, and a sum from ticket resale of $282, making a total for the season of more than $27,000.

Through the terms of a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, approximately $12,000 of the total receipts is matched by the Foundation for the benefit of the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund.

It was the Silver Jubilee Season at the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival during the nine weeks of recitals this year. The fifty-five performances staged during July and August attracted 23,394 patrons, with prices at $2.50-$3.

Dance School

The dance program helps support the School of the Dance at Jacob's Pillow. This year students came from twenty-six states and five foreign countries: The Bahamas, Canada, Chile, Indonesia and Mexico. Of the 100 enrolled, thirty were from New York.

Clear across New England from the Berkshires, Rhode Island plays host to two important tourist events: The Newport Jazz Festival and the U. S. Atlantic Tuna Tournament. Attendance at the four-day Jazz Festival, July 4-7, came to 50,000. Of this total an estimated 30,000 went to Newport just for the fete. The Newport Chamber of Commerce estimated that half-a-million dollars in new money was brought to Newport by the festival visitors.

One gasoline station sold $1,200 worth of gasoline within twenty-four hours. The Newport Kiwanis Club shared profits from a food and beverage concession with the festival and cleared $5,000. Within the immediate vicinity of Freebody Park there were 900 parking spaces at 75 cents to $1.50 each, and another 400 spaces farther away. It is estimated that these spaces grossed $5,200 for four nights.

While it cost at least $110,000 to stage the jazz concerts, there was a surplus for the first time in the four-year history of the event. That money was quickly spent for the good of the cause. Four scholarships at the School of Jazz near Lenox, Mass., were provided. Another $2,000 was given to the Jazz Institute of America in New York City, and $5,000 was donated for the establishment of a clinic for the rehabilitation of musicians who used drugs.

Big Tourney

The United States Atlantic Tuna Tournament, one of the world's big deep-sea sport fishing events, can also be considered a festival inasmuch as the broad definition of that happy word is any planned activity where people gather to have fun. It has based its fleet at Galilee, R. I., since 1953. From waters off Rhode Island have come some of the largest giant bluefin tuna ever caught on rod and reel. Some have exceeded 900 pounds.

It has been estimated that 150,000 persons throng the fishing village during the five days the fishermen are in Galilee during the second week in August. An unofficial estimate of $7,500 per day goes for lodging during the Tuna Tournament. The event is believed to bring a total of $250,000 into the state. A portion of the total is earned by thirty charter boats which rent for between $80-$100 each per day.

C2873

Berkshire Eagle November 13, 1957

Music Inn Owners Will Buy Wheatleigh

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Barber, who operate Music Inn and Music Barn, near Tanglewood, have entered into an agreement with the Boston Symphony Orchestra to purchase Wheatleigh, the mansion on the former estate of the late Mrs. Carlos M. deHeredia, which has been used since 1949 as a dormitory for students of the Berkshire Music Center.

Before leaving the Berkshires for New York this morning, Mr. Barber confirmed reports of the impending sale, which will bring under his control all of the buildings on the former deHeredia estate except the three gate houses. His holdings will then be located on 126 acres of land on the estate.

To Use Lenox School

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who was here yesterday for a meeting of the Tanglewood Advisory Committee, explained that all of the students at the Berkshire Music Center next season will be housed at the Lenox School for Boys.

Music Inn has been experiencing an ever-increasing demand for space during the Tanglewood season, Mr. Barber said today.

"To this pressure for increased [illegible] been added the School of Jazz which has finished this summer its first and highly successful session," he said.

Although a separate and non-profit organization, the school has a contract with Music Inn to provide it with a home, he added.

Last summer Wheatleigh was rented for this purpose from the BSO, but already this fall, school applications have been arriving from points as distant as Ceylon, Norway, South Africa and England, he explained.

Needs More Room

"It has been obvious," he added, "that the school must next year make use of the larger areas of the Music Barn and the present inn, for housing of faculty and students, and for rehearsal and practice rooms.

"It was fortunate for us, therefore, that our need for more space coincided with the Boston Symphony's opportunity to bring all of their students together at the Lenox School.

"Although the BSO used Wheatleigh to house more than 150 students, we plan to accommodate only about 50 guests there. Except for breakfast, guests living at Wheatleigh will take their meals at the present inn, the dining room of which has been expanded this fall."

Both the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Music Inn pay taxes to the town of Stockbridge, so consequently, the sale will make no change in the town's valuation.

Owned by a Tory

The Wheatleigh property was originally owned by Gideon Smith, a Tory, who once hid from enraged patriotic townsmen in what is now known as Tory Cave on Washington Mountain. During the Revolution he operated a tavern at Wheatleigh. Members of his family are buried in an old graveyard, opposite the lower gate to the estate, near the shores of Stockbridge Bowl. It has been restored by the town of Stockbridge.

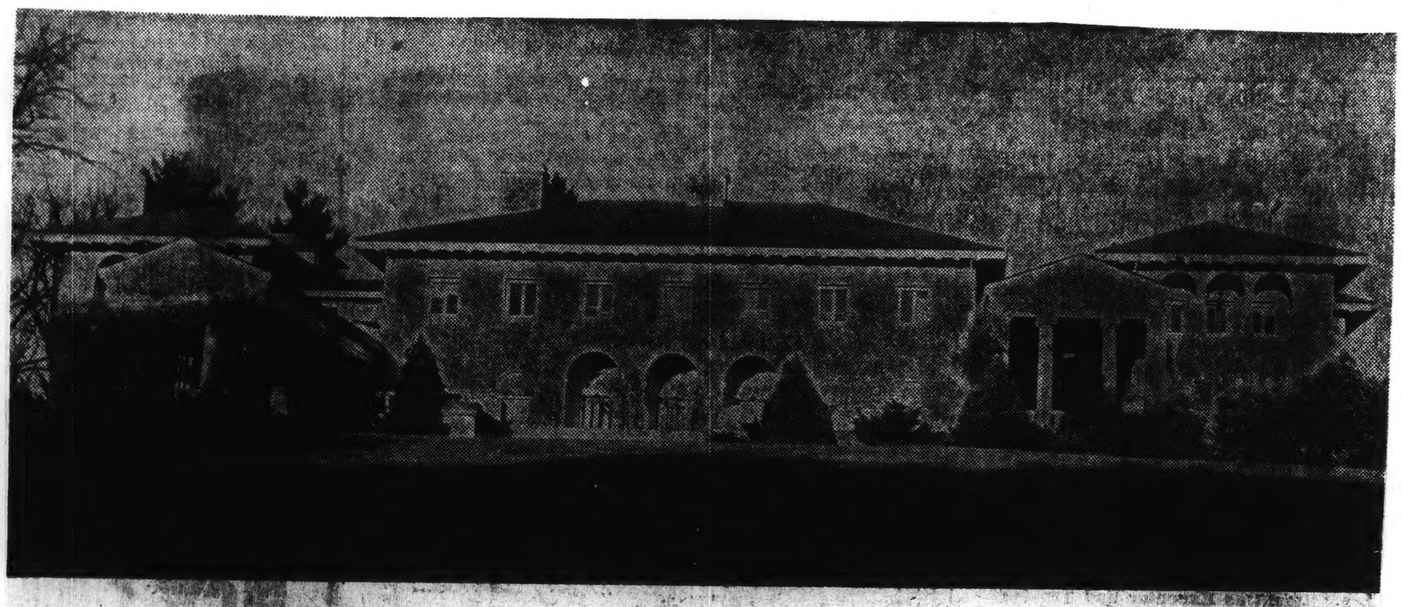
Gideon Smith's grandson, Gideon Northrup Smith, sold the land to Henry H. Cook, Chicago banker and railroad director, who built the 34-room mansion in the style of an Italian villa. His daughter married Carlos M. de Hefedia.

Estate Broken Up

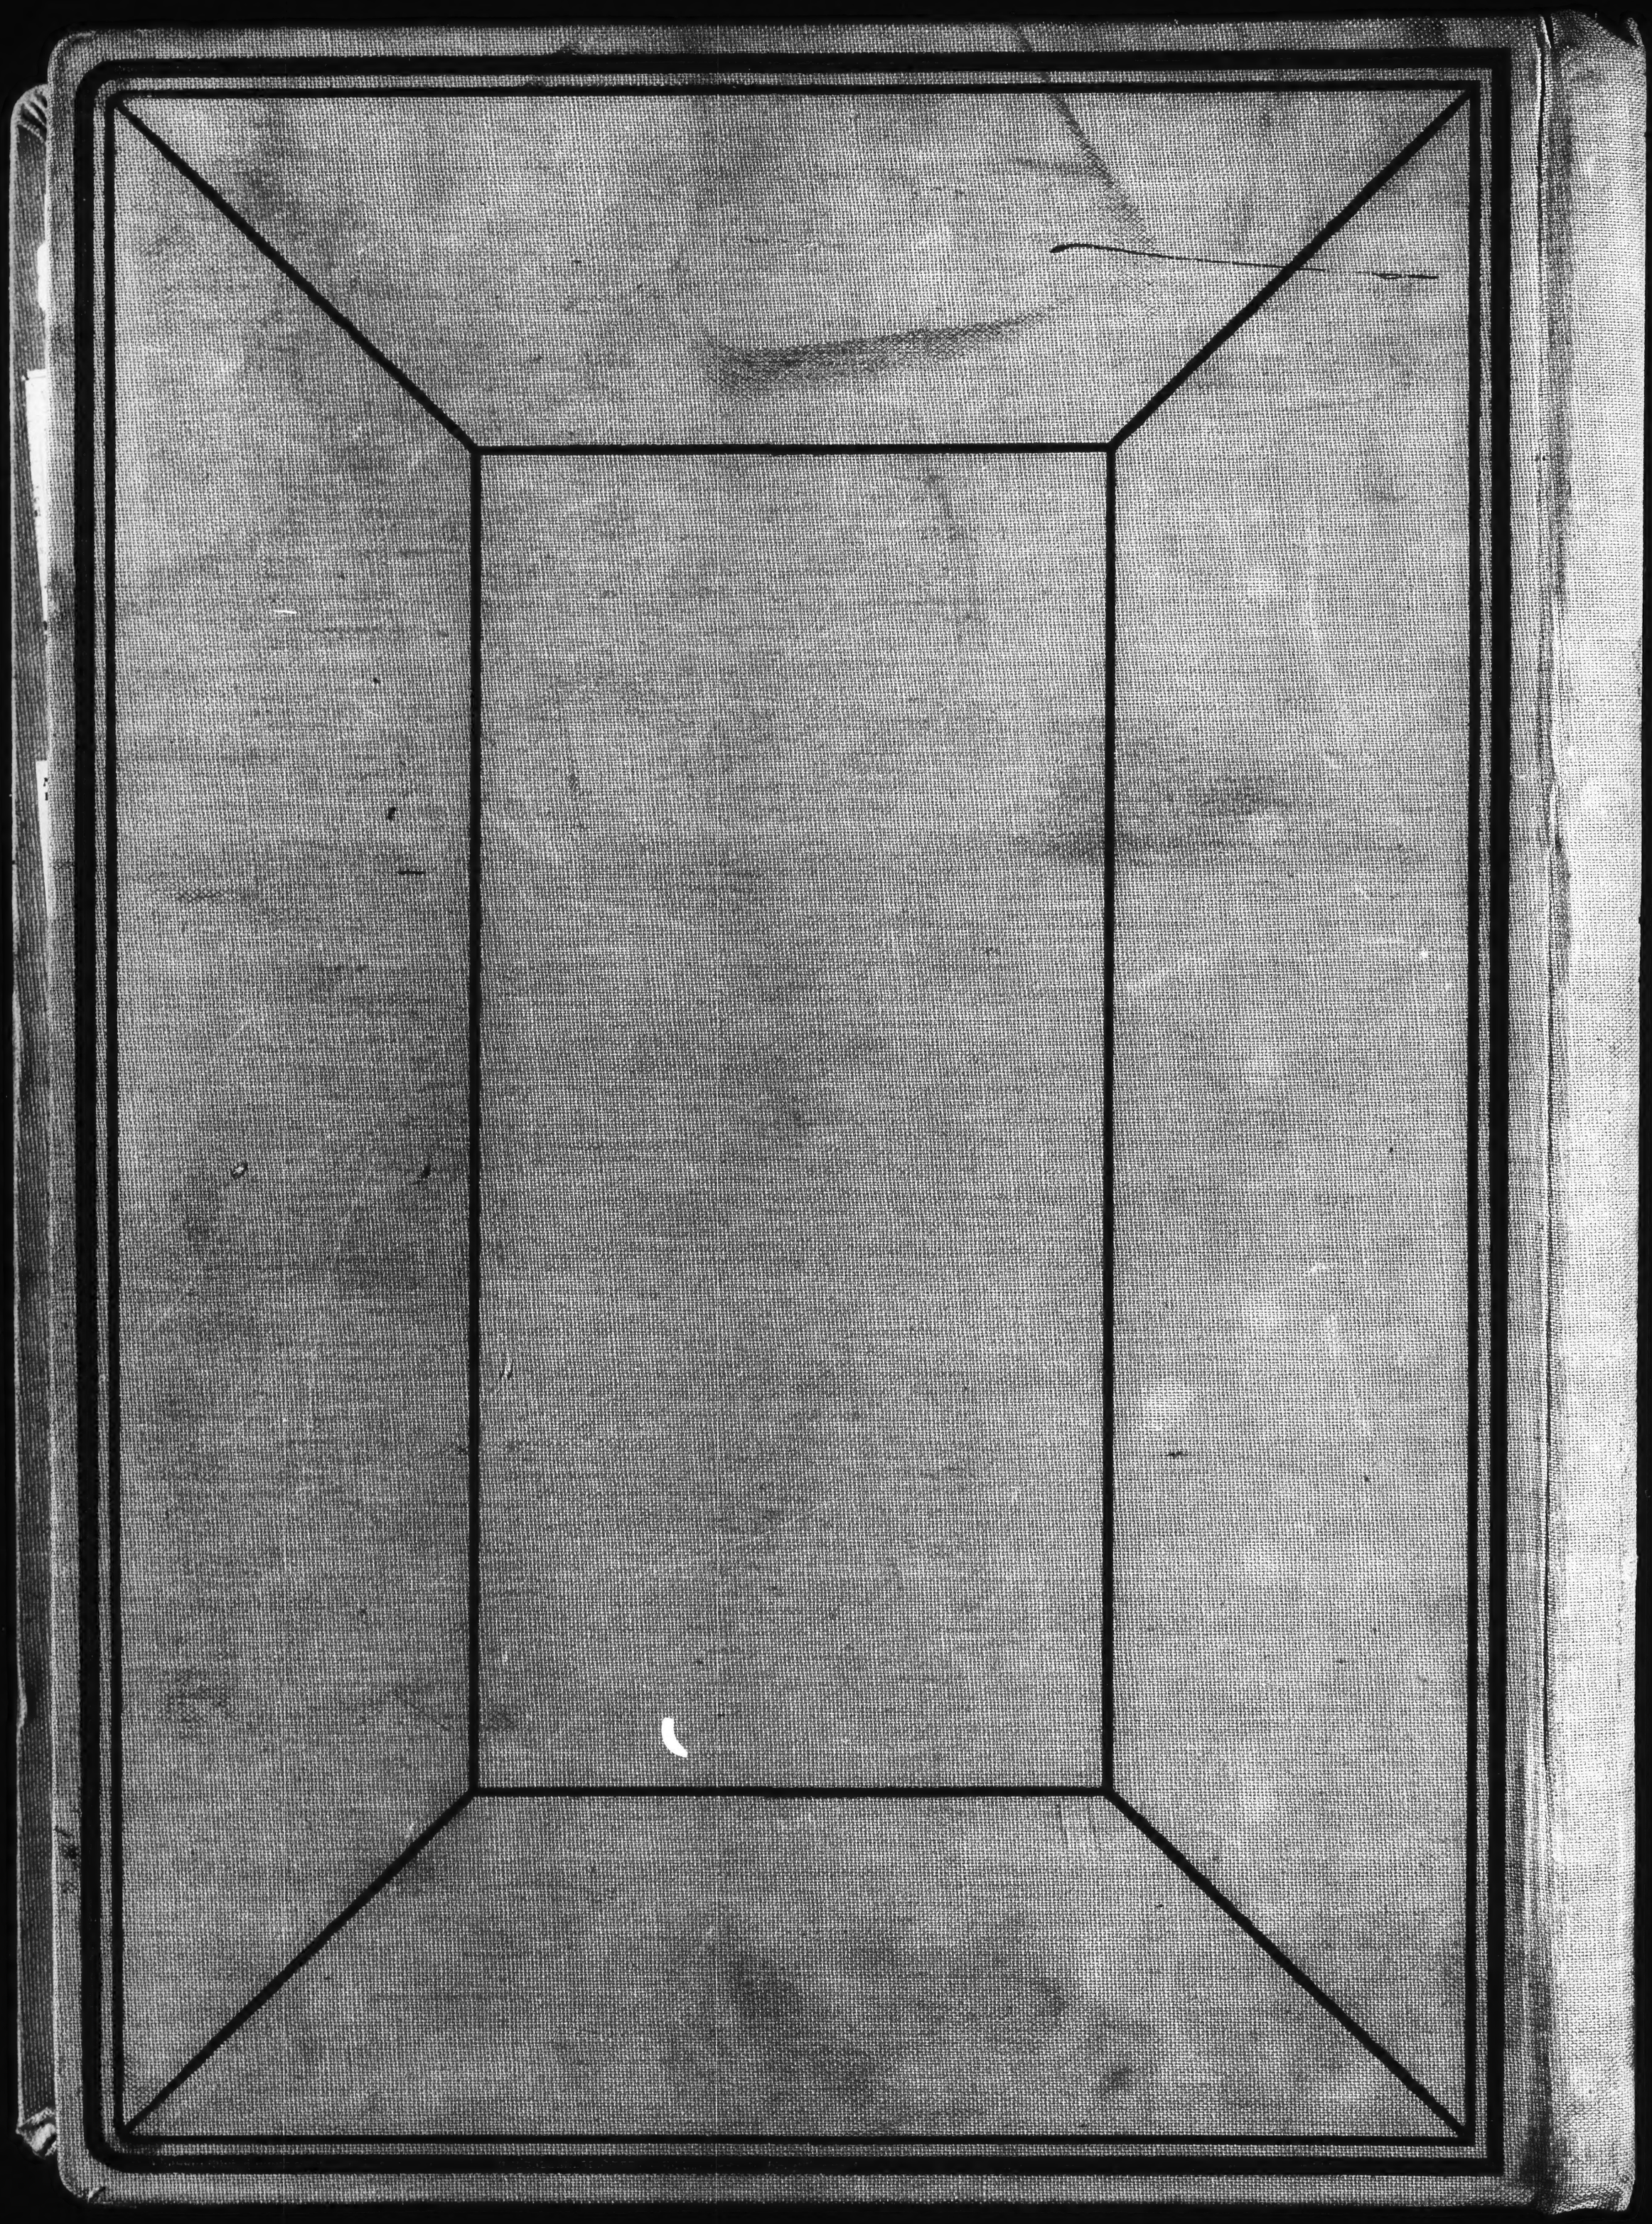
In 1949, the estate was purchased by the Mahkeenac Development Corp. for about $80,000 and was broken up. The mansion was sold to the Boston Symphony Orchestra for about $25,000 for use as a men's student dormitory. The basement was converted into a kitchen and dining hall to seat more than 200 persons.

The French type farm buildings were sold to Mr. and Mrs. Barber, who established Music Inn. The greenhouses were converted for use as a summer art school by Mrs. Ethel Merlis, sculptor and painter from New York City. Mr. and Mrs. Barber purchased the greenhouses and this past summer converted them into a bar and cocktail lounge known as the Potting Shed.

Other sections of the old estate have become housing developments, one being the Schierloh building development along East Hawthorne Road and Mahkeenac Road. Another consists of houses built near Stockbridge Bowl by Roger Canzano of Pittsfield. Another tract of the original estate was purchased by Camp Mahkeenac. The three gatehouses were converted into private homes and other lots were purchased privately by persons who have built homes on the land.



READY TO CHANGE HANDS is Wheatleigh, the former estate of Mrs. Carlos M. de Heredia, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, which has been used as a men's dormitory for students of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra trustees, who acquired the property in 1949, have entered into an agreement to sell the mansion to Mr. and Mrs. Philip Barber, who operate Music Inn and Music Barn. The Barbers now own most all of the original property.



END OF VOLUME

END OF REEL

PLEASE REWIND